General And 47 Rebel Officers Reported Slain in Prison

Washington, July 24 (AP)—The killing of two men attempting a mission of relief for the American Consulate at Barcelona was confirmed today in dispatches to the State Department.

One of those shot was Santiago Iserrrate, a Spanish clerk employed by the consulate for many years.

The other was an unidentified chauffeur described as a British subject. It was not made clear whether he also had been employed by the consulate.

Both men set out from the consulate on July 22 in an automobile flying an American flag to bring to the consulate George Jenkins, head of the Ford Motor Company at Barcelona, who was on the outskirts of the city.

They never reached their destination and definite word of their deaths came today. Jenkins was reported safe.

Fire Destroys Reid Bros. Mill
Two Thousand Dollars Loss Sustained in Early Morning Blaze
Picton, July 24.—At three o'clock Thursday morning a fire of unknown origin totally destroyed Reid Bros. Mill at the foot of the town hill. Although a large crowd soon were on the scene with Picton Firemen, the fire had gained too much headway in the dry wood of the building, for any efforts of the firefighters to be of any avail. A large drum of oil burst soon after the fire started and added to the intense heat in the vicinity. Barrels have been manufactured in the mill for many years. The side whose containing valuable papers was not damaged. The machinery is damaged, just how badly can not be estimated at once. Mr. Reid estimated the loss at $2,000 over insurance.

To Those Who Use The Highways At Night

for either driving or walking

I APPEAL to the motorists of Ontario to make night driving (and night walking) as safe and enjoyable as driving (or walking) by day. I believe it can be done —by the simple expedient of applying the principles of COURTESY!

Let us make it an infallible rule to dip or dim our lights when meeting other cars. It will soon become almost automatic for us to do so. Cheering drivers will respond. Within a very short time, this "deliberate gesture" of Courtesy (as it now is) will become a fixed habit.

Do not crowd the other Fellow when meeting or passing. If he is inclined to be a nervous driver, he may easily misjudge distance at night. We don't know. And it costs us nothing to give him several feet of clearance.

Let us give pedestrians MORE than ample space for walking. We have all the advantage when we are driving and the other fellow is aloof. Let us not use that advantage in a bullying way.

On the other hand, when we are walking, let us show true courtesy to those who are driving. When we walk WITH traffic, we place ALL responsibility upon the motorist. Let us walk facing oncoming traffic, and wear or carry something light that the lights of oncoming cars will pick up, even if you carry only a partly opened newspaper.

These are a few instances only, to demonstrate the SPIRIT of Courtesy which I am suggesting and recommending to the people of Ontario.

Practise and preach the golden rule of the road — "Show to others the same courtesy that you would like to have shown to you".

Sincerely yours,

T. B. McQuesten

WHEN HE NEGLECTED TO SHAVE

When the President went sailing on the mighty main, he did not shave for four days. The New York Times points out, giving incentive for not shaving. Many a man who uses the razor whether it be the straight blade or every invention of a safety or an electric razor, would wish to be clean shaven but not to have to shave.

Now the President was on a holiday and he felt as many another man feels when he is on a holiday. The Times says the beard on the face soothes man's nerves when it reaches the four day stubble stage. Here is how the Times continues in behalf of the neglect of shaving—"Apart from the question of the phenomenon, a four-day beard relaxes the nerves and muscles; hence the mind and hence the spirit. It is the honorable badge of the man who is suffering fundamentals. Some men peevishly complain that they feel uncomfortable unless they shave in the first thing in the morning. This comes from lack of perspective. The first day may be a little troublesome, but if a probationer goes on resolutely two, three, four, five—even six days he is filled with a great light. He should shave on Sunday. Apparently this is what our President did, proving that he knows where liberalism stops and the full-fledged beard begins."

ON COMETS

Two comets are in the sky at nights, one receding and the other approaching Mother Earth who is in a whirl as usual because it is her business to rotate, not because there are comets about, some millions of miles away.

Time was when man trembled at the sight or news of a comet, presage of ill or weal, as men of old thought. The poet puts into the mouth of the greatest man of the ancient world, Julius Caesar, these words:

"When beggars die, there are no comets seen,
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes."

So it seemed to Julius, and the average man who knew little science was superstitious too, but not like Julius who used the motions of the stars and planets and comets to bolster up his greatness, but because they lived in dread of these harbingers.

Science has changed all this. Our people do not fear a comet, most disregard it, unless it grows so large as did Halley's comet of 1910 as to occupy so great a place in the sky. A mighty comet might frighten people today but not a small one. Science has largely spoted superstitions about these celestial visitors, these congregations of small pieces of matter which sweep on their way.

The two comets which now deck the skies after dark are quiet affairs. Few will ever see Kaho's comet which is receding from earth, and is faintly visible in the west. There are yet days of grace for those who want to see the spectacle of Peltier's comet, now visible in the north-eastern sky. Neither will terrify because most persons will not see them. But if they did see, few would suffer alarm.

Yet an effort to learn about these celestial visitants should make one bow in adoration before that which lies behind all such phenomena. One should see in such a spectacle the evidence of infinity of power, the mystery of all that is, and the greatest of all mysteries why and how man is able to appreciate these mysteries, and to realize that he is something more than the inanimate elements of which his body is made. At this time when man has passed through a drought, he realizes surely how things are just so—if they were not, man would not be; by the grace of something man is allowed to exist, to grow, to study and probe, to envision, to dream and to remember, to try to pierce the infinite skyey realm. This same man realizes that if this earth did not perform just as it does, he would cease to be with all his fellows and probably life would disappear from the universe. But who knows. This man believes that there is an infinite harmony at work which makes him a place in life as a thinking and living being. A million elements mix in him to make him the glory of creation, and yet his body is made of the same stuff as flies about in space, the rocks and pieces of matter flying across the heavens in the head or tail of a comet. The comet does not know what it is doing but somehow man does.

He knows that it is sunlight which presses so heavily upon the approaching comet to make it luminous and to make its tail grow away from the source of light. He knows that sooner or later solar radiation frittars away the comet. He knows that science has definitely linked magnetic storms with this disruption, and that energy from sunspots breaks up comets, with the results of millions of meteorites which chase along the usual orbit and give rise to shooting star showers. He knows that to the comet is but the collection of shavings or chips from the great workshop of nature as she was developing the universe of which the solar system is but a small part. A Russian says eight million years ago the solar system then forming was rushing through the scattered stars of Orion, and through clouds of gas and dust, scooping them up to make hundreds of comets.

While man thinks of other things, the daily routine of the day's job and the question of rest these strange phenomena continue their sweep through space.

Man realizes all this. No wonder he thinks he is the dome of creation for the comets and the stars know not man nor themselves, but he knows of them.

THE VIMY PILGRIMS

They're going back, the lads who served so nobly,
When war's grim menace all the world defied,
They're going back, to sacred ground and holy,
Where their brave comrades died.

They're going back, to far-famed ridge of Vimy
Where firm they fought on that grim April day,
For Freedom's cause, for love of home and country
That seemed so far away.

They're going back with sad and painful memories,
A tribute to their comrades dead to bring,
O may we grant them too a silent token
Our valiant dead, now honored by their King.

May marble shaft erected to their honor
Be for us all a holy, sacred shrine,
And may the dove of peace forever hover
O'er all the earth until the end of time.

LEST WE FORGET!

City Manager.

Some years ago a number of Belleville citizens who had enquired into the operation of City Managership in the United States and Canada, started a movement to have the system adopted in Belleville.

A vote was taken and the adoption of city managership for Belleville was defeated by a small majority.

Meanwhile the idea has grown and more cities have been added to the City Manager class.

Near home Westmount, Quebec, is a shining example of city manager success.

In the United States cities which have been boss ridden and racket worn with huge civic debts piled up have adopted the city manager system, chased the bosses and racketeers and replaced civic debts with surpluses.

There does not seem to be a dissenting voice on the subject of city managership wherever it has been tried.

Signs of a reviving interest in the question in Belleville are many. Businessmen say that the matter should be thoroughly investigated and placed before the people for another vote.

Time to be thinking of it so that the vote can be taken at the municipal elections in the fall, if thought advisable.

—There is no progress in standing still—If there is a better method of civic government than the one we have let's get it.

COWS PERAMBULATING ON THE LAWN IN THE WEE SMA' HOURS, putting sleep out of the question, is the complaint of a member of the Sidelight Family living on the West Hill. Says she, "I heard what sounded like a herd of elephants tramping about rudely shattering the stillness of early morn. Springing out of bed I looked out of the window and saw —you couldn't guess—a herd of cows pursued by a policeman. The cop was having a hard time herding the cows, showing that he was no cowboy. His chief persuader was a flashlight and that just caused the cows to stampede in real western style with preference for soft lawns on which to make an impression—of feet. Where the cows came from and why, is beyond me." However it happened in Belleville —just one of the varieties of entertainment available after midnight.

ANOTHER SIDELIGHTER REPORTED TWO NUDISTS SITTING ON THE DEVIL'S ELBOW—a very appropriate place to sit, we'll say. They hung their clothes on a hickory limb and didn't go near the water.

SAILORS MUTINY, MAN SHIP

One of the most dramatic episodes of the present Spanish civil war occurred on board this battleship, the Jaime Primero. Her captain and five officers were slain and their bodies heaved overside by their mutinous crew when they attempted to take the vessel to the rebels. Thus through mutiny, the pride of the Spanish fleet was kept loyal to the government. After the mutiny, rebel chiefs ordered the ship to leave Tangier's harbor. When their order was disobeyed, rebel airmen bombed the vessel. Heavy anti-aircraft gunfire forced the aeroplanes to give up the attack and return to their base at Ceuta. Extent of damage to the battleship is not known.

PLUMS MAKE MARKET DEBUT

Broiler Chickens Sell at Eighty Cents Per Pair

"Believe it or not, Mister," said a city vendor at the city market yesterday, "this corn was planted only six weeks ago, and look at it. The original crop was destroyed by early frosts and this is the fruits of the replanting. It is given one of the best growing seasons ever had, each stalk averaging from five to seven ears."

The corn displayed were a fine sample with full kernels of yellow and white. It sold at twenty cents per dozen ears. Yellow corn was also in evidence selling at prices ranging from twenty-five to forty cents.

Red raspberries and cherries were the outstanding features of a fairly busy midweek market, with the harvest dragging to a new low of two bonnes for thirty five cents, the remainder sixty for the quart. Montmorency cherries were plentiful with prices remaining firm at eighty and ninety cents the basket. Black sweets moved fairly well at prices ranging from eighty to ninety cents the basket.

June and Shins made their debut this morning with the former moving slowly at fifteen cents the box and the latter demanding fifty cents the six quart basket. Northern Spies also made their debut in an appearance meeting a brisk demand at fifty cents the peck basket and $2.50 the seven quart basket.

Peaches were in fair supply and two for twenty-five, and black and white currents at five for twenty-five remained at an unchanged price market.

New potatoes are still fairly plentiful, remaining steady at the last weekend price of fifty cents the peck, with basket lots going at 1.75 and 3.00.

Whitefish dropped a cent from the weekend price, selling at seventeen cents to a fair demand.

A noticeable variety of fresh vegetables was in evidence with the usual array of beets, carrots, onions and potatoes being the first prices.

Trenton, July 23—(Special)—Yesterday afternoon five men forgot some hooks, and left it at that, out of Trenton golf course. They were out to enjoy an afternoon of real sport. All went well up until the fifth hole, when suddenly they heard "fore". It was so though accidentally bolstered "fore" everyone looked up, but quite the game is on fire," were the words, which spread over the links. From all sides players scurried to the scene and with their golf clubs and pieces of brush they beat at the spreading flames. The fire had started in the dry grass of Very hole and was on its way to destroy the greens of holes number 6 and 7. Finally the flames were suffering from the ill effect of the best of smoke. The flames were driven away from the endangered greens, just off onto the C. P. railway tracks. The Trenton Fire Department arrived but just as the flames were out. They would not reach. Hours later the fire was extinguished by a fine drizzle of rain that they could not continue with their golf matches. As the result of the club compelled in their Wednesday afternoon competition, the winner of the low score was Miss Flossie Bedaker. After the journey a delightful enjoyment was then served. The Playgrounds' softball and baseball leagues got under way on Monday evening at West Grounds with the West End Midgets meeting the Bell Boys and the long end of a 16-15 score.

The second game this week was the Bridge Street Kids at the East Playgrounds on Monday night when they met again when the Kids were defeated 14-4.

The tables were turned on Tuesday, however, with the Bell Boys and their batchmates again added by the smart pitching of Ray Donovan teal to the Kids' 20-4 victory.

On Wednesday morning the Junior Girls from the west end of the ding-dong fight from the east by a score of 24-17. Th hitting of these junior girls was powerful and the runs plenty, leaving the final score 24-17 in their favor.

The latest and best game yet was on Thursday afternoon when the East grounds when the senior girls battled a handball team to a close affair all the way tho' with clever pitching by Ruth Hyde and Betty Gordon for the losers, the final count being 15-14 in favor of the East Bend boys.

It is unfortunate that this game was marred with the usual rowdyism. Some very interesting games will be forthcoming from this league.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and pop was talking a week before last night and some man stuck out his hand at pop, saying, Well, I live and learn, I fancy seeing you after all these years.

Pop took it.

And he shook the man's hand looking kind of puzzled like, I must say, said, I'll bet a doller to a doughnut you dont remember me.

Being a man that always has a mustash and pencils and a fountain pen sticking out of his vest pocket, pop said, pop said, Of course I remember you, I wouldn't say so if I knew myself, but I'm terrible when it comes to names.

Well, it's all right, I been a long time, the man said, and pop said, Yes, so I see, I have that excuse, you gods how long has it been?

Don't ask me, the man said, I used to go back that far, the man said, and pop said, Well, I'll bet you've got fat, too, Well, we can't stay young forver but we can't be ayrested for that, can we, I'll bet let me see, just tell me the last time you saw me, I was standing in the place, and the girl, if any, and it will all come back to me, I'll bet you can recollect, you still have 30 seconds, the man said look, I'll tell you, I'll bet I can, pop said. How do you mean 30 seconds?

Well, do you see that clock across the street looking over here with only one hand, the man said, and pop said, Yes, I see it, and the man said, Well, I'll bet a dollar to a doughnut that before the hand gets around to where it is now I can tell you where I saw you last.

Pop looked at it a minute and then said, Well, I'll take you up on that bet, and the man said, Well, I'll bet you saw me, pop said, Yes, and the man said, Where, and pop said, Why, you saw me in the mirror, and the man said, Well, I'll be dam, and pop said, Well, I'll be dam, too, and the man said, Well, I'll be dam, three times, and pop said, Well, I'll be dam, four times, and the man said, HOW TO MAKE ICED TEA

Boil Fresh Tea in a pint of fresh boiling water. Allow 1 teaspoonful tea to each cup required. While hot, add sufficient ice to fill the pot, and pour at once into glasses filled with ice. Tea must be boiled and the pot filled with ice before tea is used (never make tea in cold water and pour on ice) otherwise liquid will become cloudy. Serve with slices of lemon.

She Won First Prize!

Time after time she came away from her bridge club with the consolation prize. Then, one day, she won the First Prize.

It was all merely a matter of better seeing. It dawned on her one day that maybe her six-year-old glasses weren't right for her any more. They decidedly weren't. Nobody's are.

With the keen vision her new glasses gave her, she won easily. Good bridge depends on good sight.

Many Foolish Ways To Use City Water

"It isn't the resident who will come out in the open in regard to water use that we mind," commented manager E. T. Austin of the waterworks department in reference yesterday to a man, who with umbrella over his head, was watering his lawn while the city was enjoying a beneficial rainfall "It's the resident who tries to 'put something over'" the department.

"This past few weeks while the plant was trying to keep up with the demand and abnormal water consumption we registered:

One man, who locked up his house and went away, leaving the lawn service running.

One resident who spent the greater part of the night and early morning during the peak of the hot heat wave, thoroughly soaking the roof and sides of his home with a hose, to cool off.

Another home owner who dug a hole in his back yard, for some unknown reason, and allowed the hose to run into it all day.

A resident who spent a lot of time washing the wall sided road in front of his home.

Owners who allowed their lawn services to run all night.

"Our espionage system comprised of a lot of helpful residents—is perfect", added the manager.

Hoare Shatters Precedent in Naval Review

Covering up his natty uniform with an aviator's flying suit, Sir Samuel Hoare, first sea lord of the British admiralty, is pictured just before he took off in an aeroplane from Hendon aerodrome for a flight to H. M. S. Courageous, naval aircraft-carrier. The first sea lord being landed on the Courageous, cruising off the Isle of Wight, and made a tour of inspection. This was the first time in history that the "big boss" of the admiralty had conducted an aerial inspection of the fleet.

"Murder by an Architect"

"The Lonely Trail"

"Murder by an Architect", a First National mystery drama, based on one of the best novels of Mignon G. Eberhart's baffling detective stories, is now playing, with Lyle Talbot, Marguerite Churchill and Claire Dodd in the leading roles.

The plot centers about the deaths of two members of the proud and aristocratic Thatcher family. Raymond Thatcher, a part played by William Davidson, is the first to meet death. The blackmail of the family, who is attempting to bleed small his relatives, is wounded mortally one night by a bullet, and the next day he is found shot through the heart.

The other members of the family are suspected as also are the butler and the maid, although John Eldridge, portraying the butler, is a relative, who tries to make out a case of robbery a costly string of emeralds having disappeared. Lyle Talbot, starred in the role of Dave Thatcher, is introduced as a suspect, he being found dead in the attic of the Thatcher mansion.

Lyle Talbot as Dr. Allen Carrick, is called into the case and brings in nurse to the house, a part played by Miss Churchill. The nurse runs across many strange incidents during her night in the house, she reports to Carrick and fiance, that she believes a murder has been committed which the family is trying to cover up. She eventually discovers the missing jewels and narrowly escapes the plot. Claire Dodd as the wife of Dave Thatcher, has another stren uous role. Sarah Craven and Frances Fair are two other members of the family being blackmailed by accused, and Virginia Brissac plays the part of Addie Thatcher, the aged spinster head of the family.

"The Lonely Trail" a Spectacular Thriller

The pounding hoofs of panting horses, the all-night popping of rifle fire, the clash of man against man in bitter fist fights, and the thrilling raids of aroused ranchers on the rustlers' hideout, are the realistic walls of an army barrack, but provide the background of most gripping and worthwhile motion pictures produced in "The Lonely Trail", Republic spectacular which comes to Wayne picture, now on the screen of the Capitol Theatre.

An important phase of the nation's history, the "carpet-bag" invasion of the South following the Civil War, is depicted not only with dash but with historic accuracy and breath-taking intensity, when Warren Hull and Dorothy Kendall, as sinister an intriguer as ever made made screen audiences squirm, and Yakima Canutt, wide-hooped he-man whose very name creates shudders. Ann Rutherford plays the girl very capably.

had shot myself."

Sonnet's terrified special constable Anthony Gordon Dick with knocking the revolver from Mc-Mahon's hand during the struggle on Constitution Hill.

He said, that as the King reached a point about 20 yards from McMahon, Dick saw the prisoner raise his arm with something in his hand. He stated Dick knocked the prisoner's arm and an object with a gun in his hand and travelled some distance, into the middle or near the middle of the road; the object was the revolver."

Reviewing the events of July 14, Sir Donald stated a mounted policeman stopped his horse in front of McMahon as the King approached. He said McMahon shouted: "Take your mounted horse away, I want to see the procession!"

The policeman turned his horse to face the procession as he came through the arch on Constitution Hill.

Afterward, said Sir Attorney-General, Gerald Hamilton Hall, to write on a newspaper. The paper writer was picked up and the message was: "May I love you?" Sonnet said it apparently was a message for McMahon's wife.

Did Not See Gun

The first witness, Marie Stevenson, a barmaid, said McMahon came to the "two Revers" pub on the "usual" day before the incident and told her: "I am going to see Charles Spare (left), and Theodore Rosenthal (right), the place where Coleman tried to escape alive.

"San Francisco"

"San Francisco", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has again hit the bullseye with a sensational picture that should prove a sure-fire box office success for several reasons.

It brings together for the first time three of the most popular stars of the screen....Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald and Spencer Tracy.

It produces on the screen some of the most hair-raising dramatic scenes of a great catastrophe ever before filmed.

It was directed by W. S. VanDyke, who never misses the correctly balance the pulse of the public in producing for them the expected tempo of the films he directs.

And it brings again to the screen that lovely voice of Miss MacDonald which we covet a wider range of musical numbers than she has ever accomplished before....and only the most difficult operatic arias, but ragtime music and even the most beautiful of religious hymns.

"San Francisco" is the story of Blackie Norton, lord of the old Barbary Coast before the San Francisco disaster of 1906. Blackie's resort wanders a small-town girl with great ambitions to become a singer. Gable, as Blackie, engages the girl to entertain his rowdy customers and runs the dubious hall she sees in heights as an opera star to thrill the hearts of San Francisco music lovers. Later she returns to Blackie who does not realize the depth of his love for the girl until she finds it in the destruction and suffering of the San Francisco disaster.

This new picture brings back the Clark Gable of old, rugged, two-fisted and believing in nothing but his own power and his fascination over women.

Too it brings to the screen a new Jeanette MacDonald with a voice that seems more beautiful, if that is possible, and revealing her in as a very delightful comedienne, particularly when she gives her version of hip-swaying torch singing in Blackie's Paradise Cafe.

The supporting cast is an admirable one....Jack Holt carrying off the "heavy" honors and providing one of the very best Blackie Norton in his conquest for Mary; Ted Healy with a new kind of sloppery comedy role, and Al Shean, Roger Imhoff and a host of others. "Enter Elephant", a new and very funny Walt Disney Silly Symphony in technicolor and Late World News, will be exhibited on the same program. "The Fighting Marines" will be shown Saturday matinee.

Excellent Bill Tonight

Two unusually good feature attractions will be exhibited on the screen tonight for the last time, featuring Jen Hersholt, the screen's fine character actor in his first picture since "The Country Doctor", and introducing a new screen find, Ynot Anoche of radio fame. Ann Shoemaker and Allen Jenkins this feature is destined for the Hall of Fame. Photoplay Magazine's review on "Sins of Man" says: "Go see and see this."

Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland are funny in their latest comedy, "Early to Bed." "Parade of Manhattan" completes a smart program of screen entertainment. Seeing is believing! Come tonight! The last complete show begins at 8.30 p.m.

away; you'll never see me again."

John William Reason, an eye-witness in Constitution Hill said he first saw McMahon, when the latter aimed a cocktails to move. He did not see the revolver.

"The first thing I heard," said he, "was someone—I think it was my wife—saying: 'An insult to the King!' I pushed my way through the crowd and saw the prisoner in the arms of a police-man. As they turned him around I said: 'you swine!' and struck him."

Mrs. Mary Lloyd testified she stood in the front row of spectators, in front of McMahon.

When the King rode by, she told the court, "a man pushed forward, pushing no one side by agreeing his arms."

General Hendrie held his arms up above his head and I saw something in his right hand. It was bright but I couldn't see what it was. He

In Speaking Position

She looked as the King, then glanced about and saw McMahon in a shooting position.

"I thought it must be a bomb being thrown," she said. "Then someone rushed to the left-hand side of the prisoner and got hold of his left arm. I saw an object leaving his right hand. I followed it with my eyes and saw it touch the horse. "Whose horse?" asked the prosecutor.

"His Majesty's horse," the witness replied.

The "object" she testified, hit the prisoner near the left, farsing and fell to the ground.

"I could see then it was a revolver," she added. "It asked a policeman at my side if it was a toy gun."

BELMONTEERS WIN FIRST PLAYOFF

Defeat West Enders 7-3 by Heavy Slugging And Swell Hurling

Oil Savings and his merry crew of baseball-chasing Belmonters demonstrated in no uncertain manner that they do not intend to be the stepping stones for any aspiring title-seekers in the Industrial Baseball League, when they rose and shook their lead against the dust and fog of the Coleman Field last night, and smote right lustily the offerings of a West End shoeless to the tune of seven runs and a victory number one of the semi-final series of the loop, beneath their revulsion by virtue of their 7-3 win. The second round of this series will be played on Tuesday night.

Taking everything into consideration, the game had all the ingredients, which go toward the making of a palatable softball pie. Both batting turned in a nifty spot of checking, some lusty clouts, including two circuit smashes, a generous dose of rival slugger, there was some fairly good baserunning, few errors of the costly type, and a representative crowd taking advantage of the Uncle Oscar aspect of the game to cheer their favorites.

For four innings the squads battled along on even terms after each had tallied one run in the initial innings. And with both hurlers setting down in the business at hand, the pastime seemed all the earmarks of a pitcher's duel.

Break in Fifth

Then came the break. In the fifth inning, the Belmonteers who up to this had found Ken Hamilton comfortably at the offerings of young Danny Harris, the West End shoebound flinger, suddenly hitched up their trousers, shook the kinks from their arms, loosened large portions of Coleman Frai real estate from their scampering and unleashed a barrage of three out doubles and a single, which sided smoothly by a walk, was responsible for four runners going a soft shoe dance on the platter.

And apparently not being satisfied with this, the Belmonters in the wall known container later in the game when Messrs Ronsky and O'Neill connected for successive four baggers flights around the circuit.

Young Mister Dracup, Belmont twirler, did a swell job of work on the hillock, fanning five and allowing the West End socknuckle to seven scattering smacks with no occasions, by dint of some masterly chicaning, extricated himself from tender hooks, when he retired the side twice on second and third bases with many a batter up.

And eight Westenders swung blindly at the ozone.

Harry Hall, the disastrous fifth, when the Belmont shillalehs suddenly awoke, walked in starting off three consecutive hits, Harris did a good job on the mound for the losers. The fifth was the only time he had the situation fairly well in hand with the exception of some of those unfortunate moments, when each of the enemy leaned on his stanch and trusty ashplant with the ball seemed from his delivery and batting to be the size of a trio in the fifth, were fairly well scattered. He struck out three batters.

Wrenders scored their second marker in the sixth stanzaic, when Phillips bounced out an ash-toking single and scored on Hall's triple, which smack went to center for a clean hit. The blondeered clan seemed to get golden opportunities to score in the sixth and seventh innings, when they pushed runners on second and third bases with nobody out, but they failed to hit in the pinches and died lingering deaths on the bases.

Calumet Dillworthy Establishes Record

Outlasts, M.Y., July 24.—(AP)—Calumet Dillworthy, a chestnut gelding transferred to Trainer Vic Fleming's Stable by purchase just before the race, established a new world's trotting record for a three-heat race over a half-mile track in winning the 2.13 trotting stake here today.

Getting a fast pace, Calumet Dillworthy easily won the first two heats in 2.04. In the final mile, the favorite, Calumet Spencer, driven by Dr. Hugh Parshall of Urbana, set the pace and went on to win in 2.05 1-4.

The previous record for three heats in a race was made by Dewey McKinney in 1933 when he stepped over the Middletown, N.Y., track in 2.04 1-4, 2.04 1-4, and 2.04 1-4. The new champion is owned by Mrs. E. W. Hitz of Sherburne, N.Y.

The Village Farm Stake for three-year-old pacers was won in straight heats by the favorite, Little Pat, owned by Henry Farm or Boiler, Pa., and driven by Charley Lacey, the gelding beating a big field without trouble.

Only three started in the Harriman Cup consolation event for two-year-olds and the filly Mait, from the E. Roland Harriman Stable, won easily in slow time.

Jack Crawford (lower right) is almost certain to beat Austin in his present form. He might even take the great Perry. But the Australians' prowess rest largely on the success of Adrian Quist who suffered an ankle injury yesterday and was replaced by McGrath.

(By Alan Gould)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Hamburg, Germany, July 24. — (AP)—The United States Olympic Committee today granted Eleanor Holm Jarrett's tearful plea for a formal hearing on charges that she had violated training rules by misbehaving, and that she declined dropping the great backstroke swimmer from the squad would stand.

Arrangements were made to take Mrs. Jarrett along to Berlin so that members of the committee might listen to her side of the case on Monday. Simultaneously, Mrs. Jarrett was dropped from the team as the aftermath of a statewon party yesterday.

The swimmer, broken up by the committee's drastic action last night and asking Olympic officials not to "ruin my life", was conceded the opportunity of telling her story by Dr. Joseph N. Raycroft, attorney general of Illinois and President, Daily had turned down her appeal.

Raycroft, turning his attention to welcoming ceremonies, left disposal of the case in the hands of Raycroft, who is vice president of the committee.

Mrs. Jarrett was dropped from the team just before the Olympic Ship Manhattan left Hamburg, docks, she was ordered to turn in her uniform and remain aboard ship for the United States on the Bremen, sailing tomorrow. Her entry in the 100 metres backstroke, in which she was a top-heavy favorite to retain the Olympic title she captured in 1932 was withdrawn.

Torchy Peden Told Not Wanted to Coach Cyclists

(By Elmer Delmage)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

On the Way to the Olympics, aboard the S.S. Duchess of Bedford, July 24—(CP)—Strapping Torchy Peden of Vancouver, one of Canada's greatest professional six-day bicycle riders, who is accompanying the Canadian Olympic team to Berlin, was told today by Percy Williams, Canada's track Coach, Bill Deacon of Toronto that his coaching talents are not wanted. Peden is paying his own way to the games.

"The trouble goes back to the six-day bicycle race scandal, which treal last spring when I criticized Referee Deacon for not making the riders ride for the money," Peden said.

Deacon is Chairman of the Canadian Wheelman's Association and O.W.A., representative at professional races.

Torchy's intention was to help coach the cyclists at the games, but council, Claude ("Dusty") Peden of Vancouver, Canada's six-day champion. Torchy's brother, Doug., is also on board.

Doug tried unsuccessfully for a berth on the Canadian Olympic team at the trials in Toronto last month. Torchy is reported as having signed with Barney Berlo for the 1937 season and it is believed Doug will be teamed with Torchy and wife this. A spectator at the Toronto trials, Torchy said he considered the current squad the strongest bike team ever to represent the Dominion in international competition.

There was little obby ensemenon board as the athletes bedded down for a good night's rest after the opening party last night. Every one felt fine and the ocean resembled a mill pond, it was so calm.

Frank Amyot, Ottawa paddler; Jim Worrall, Toronto hurdler; and Jeannette Dolson, Toronto sprinter, were among the winners, they said, their becoming costumes at the masquerade party.

Many athletes expressed themselves as eager to head at Le Havre for Paris Saturday. They look forward to a day in Paris before proceeding to Berlin.

JEWESS SUSPENDED

Vienna, July 24.—The Austrian sports authorities today suspended Judith Deutsch, Jewish backstroke swimmer and a member of the Hakoah Jewish Sports Club, for refusing to join the Austrian Olympic team.

Miss Lenger's refusal to compete was in accordance with the decision of the Maccabi Union, parent Jewish sports organization, to boycott the Olympic games. Previously Arnold Jerstein Levinsor, 11-year-old Judith Deutsch, has been suspended for two years for refusing to participate.

Schmeling Named as Braddock's Challenger

Berlin, July 24.—(AP)—Max Schmeling, German conqueror of Joe Louis, said today John R. Fitzpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, told him he would be named as the challenger for James J. Braddock's heavyweight boxing title not later than July 30. Schmeling received the assurance in a telephone conversation with Fitzpatrick, who is at Salzburg, Austria.

The head of the Garden declared the fight would be held not later than Sept. 30, according to Schmeling.

The Garden, which has Braddock under contract, had until the 30th of the month to name the challenger. Schmeling has signed to fight for the 20th Century Sporting Club and to date the two organizations have been unable to get together.

TRACK HERD

Berlin, July 24.—(AP)— After working out today for the first time on the Olympic track, Germany's flashing waggle their heads disapprovingly when they shook its dust off their spikes. They said the track was too hard and brittle.

Work on the rebuilt track has just been completed under the supervision of experts. Uncertainly, however, embraces the real quality of the cinder pair, on which the track and field stars of the world will struggle for Olympic glory Aug. 1 to 9.

Officials described the track fine, but from sport circles it was learned it still will be two days before in condition fr for new records.

Moreover it was said to have too many noticeable to the runners, although hardly perceptible to spectators.

German officials announced that the Olympic torch will be relayed to acalter "messages of peace" to European countries when the tolling of the Olympic bell chimes in with the gun salutes inaugurating the 11th Olympic games August first.

DAY BY DAY

A splendid turnout of boxers and interested passengers nobled down to the Belleville Athletic and Yacht Club rooms last evening to welcome the new boxing instructor, Eddie Lee. After a few formalities Lee put the boys to work shadow-boxing and terminated the work-out with a couple of fast rounds. Present were . . . Howard Wheeler, Bill Crawford, Shorty Fisher, Johnnie O'Neill, Mark Horton, a likely looking welterweight named Burke and a number of looking youngsters who also show promise.

Lee let the boys know he intended to be strict and when they adhered to his training rules, he did not mind them around. "We expect to build up the fight game in Belleville once again and can only accomplish that and by hard work boys. Are you willing to train hard and see if we can make a go of it?" he asked them present. "Sure", they replied in unison and proved their sincerity by heeding down to hard work right on the spot.

Already the ring has been erected in the Yacht Club and a punching bag and other training equipment will be erected for the fighters within the week. Lee announced training nights would be Monday, Thursday and Saturday. The executive of the Club was on hand to welcome the fighters and gave Lee a free hand to run his own show. It was decided to put on a boxing card in August.

Moreover it was said to have too many noticeable to the runners, although hardly perceptible to spectators

WAR - - KIDNAPPING - - POLITICS - - DISASTER - -

BUT.... it's the LITTLE THINGS that count....

New drapes for the guest room, and Junior's first haircut. A new recipe for peach pie and new pans for baking it. A picnic at the beach, and a new hat for the weekly bridge. Every day events? Of course! But they're the things that make life livable! What's a war in Illyria and another Arctic expedition, compared to the thrill of the first glimpse of the family that's moving in next door, and the delivery of a shining new refrigerator? What's a royal wedding, and twelve rooms filled with gifts, when Anne has her fifth birthday tomorrow? They're interesting enough, something to talk about, to wonder at, perhaps, but pretty far away from that most important spot and the people who live there . . . your own home.

That's where your heart is, and that's where the real thrills lie, in the things that concern you and the people who live around you, next door, in the next block, anywhere in town. There's news about them in every issue of the daily Ontario Intelligencer in "inside page" stories—and in every ad too, for the ads in the Ontario Intelligencer are news! There's news about new clothes for the family, and new food for the table, and new furniture for the home. There's news about new entertainment, and new ways to get to it. There's news about something new on every page, from the latest dispatch on the front page to the new shoes for Anne on the last . . . all written to you and for you, put up in a neat package and delivered at your door-step every day.

SEAPLANE SERVICE TO LINK ENGLAND AND AMERICA

Regular transatlantic air travel in speedy seaplanes, prior to the end of the summer, looms as a possibility following confirmation of reports at Washington that Imperial Airways of Great Britain and Pan American Airways of the United States had agreed to establish such a service. A map of the proposed routes and a picture of one of the British flying boats, already completed at Rochester, England, are shown ABOVE. In addition, a route via Canada, Newfoundland and the Irish Free State to England. During the winter, the flying boats are expected to travel to England by way of Bermuda. Permission to establish an American terminal has already been granted by the U. S. department of commerce. Cities being considered as a base are Baltimore, Md.; Cape Charles or Norfolk, Va.; Charleston, S.C., and New York City, with the later favored as the northern route base. —Central Press Canadian Photo.

WHERE REBELS AND LOYALISTS CLASH

While reports are conflicting, both rebels and government forces claiming victories, there is no doubt Spain is in the throes of a revolution. Main points where fighting is reported are shown ABOVE. In the south (1) Seville was partially recaptured by the government, at Algeciras a Moorish regiment was reported dispersed, Malaga was partly burned, Cadiz was bombarded by a warship, and there was serious fighting in Cordoba and La Linea. In the Madrid district (2) there were hours of fighting in and around the capital before rebel troops were overcome. Rebel columns were dispersed near Segovia, Aranda and Burgos. In the north (3) the government admitted its foes held Saragossa and Valladolid, and Jaca also was reported captured. At Barcelona (4) the rebel chief was said to have surrendered after serious fighting, though a new attack is reported. —Central Press Canadian Photo.

So for a long moment he stood there watching his chief in silence. Then he asked:

"Is there anything else Mr. Ingram?"

"What say? Oh, yes. Miss Peters is away. She a cold. I'll need some one to take dictation. Send me in the most intelligent girl you have —if any." As he went out, Alspaugh paid smiling tribute to she another.

Entering a big room where a dozen stenographers sat at noiseless machines he unhesitatingly approached a girl whose fingers played over the keyboard of her typewriter with a quick, unaided precision.

If Jasper Ingram had stipulated for the services of the prettiest girl, it was here that Alspaugh must have stopped. But the dark blue eyes Cathleen McCarthy raised to his held in their depths intelligence as well as beauty, the broad brows testified to strength of character, that was somewhat contradicted by her firm, but kissable lips.

Not that Alspaugh was likely to recline on appearances of any woman to such psychological conclusions. No, indeed. To him any girl with pleasing features and a good figure was a "looker who ought to be on the stage." That's how he regarded Cathleen McCarthy though he did acknowledge her beauty.

"Ready for a pleasant surprise, young lady? Opportunity knocks what I'm bringing you," he said.

Cathleen didn't like Alspaugh's manner but she turned him with an inquiring smile.

"Mr. Ingram asked me to send some one to take his letters! Miss Peters is out with a cold. Lord knows when she'll be back. A girl who could do her work and give satisfaction—well, there's no telling how far she might go. Naturally, I thought of you. You're pretty slick, McCarthy. I've been watching your work and you, too."

"Thank you," said Cathleen.

"Don't forget who gave you your big chance," he cautioned her as he patted her lightly on the shoulder.

CHAPTER II.

Cathleen picked up her notebook and several sharpened pencils and made her way to Mr. Ingram's office. She had had only a half-a-dozen fleeting glimpses of Jasper Ingram so it's not surprising that now her heart beat fast, and the attractive tinge of color dyed her cheeks.

Yet she was neither daunted nor distracted by the magnificence of his private office, which was further than the library in a rich man's home. It had paneled walls with oriental rugs on the floor, and an open fireplace, naturally not in use this August day. The air in his office—as indeed on this entire floor—was cooled and conditioned by diesel motors on the height above the street gave the room an almost uncanny quiet.

Cathleen's eyes went straight to the face of the man who was the surprise, the great her before beckoning her to her seat and starting to dictate.

Even while her hand unerringly followed Ingram's voice, her thoughts raged and sputtered:

"So this is the mighty J. Ingram I'm near enough to touch if I leaned forward. I suppose he has more power than anybody in the whole country, after maybe the Rockefellers and the Morgans and Mellons. More power than most kings, he has lots more. Wouldn't I like to see that palace of his out on Long Island. Even the pictures in the Sunday papers were like a dream. Any king would be proud to live there. He has a nice voice, rich and human. Is he good-looking, I wonder?"

Covertly, she studied his head. It was large, virile, unmistakable. With its strong rough-hewn features, its many planes of cheek and chin, it was removed as far as possible from the simplicity of the Greek pattern. There was vulgar behind the brown eyes. The mouth, broad-lipped and not insensitive, was the most revealing feature of the face.

What was this new he had just said? Not sixty million dollars! Surely she should ask him to repeat that—but before she could speak he again, clearly and unhurriedly, mentioned the sum.

"Sixty millions!" she thought with a mental gasp. "There isn't that much money in all the world." For a moment she was near to nervous laughter with the absurdity of her situation. But in a moment she recovered herself, and caught at her thoughts taking a new direction.

Sixty million dollars! But that wasn't the man's fortune; that was only some spare change he'd asked some bankers for last week, because he thought he could use it, and they'd stepped up and said "Certainly Mr. Ingram. And if you want more let us know."

Sixty millions! With one person in four out of work all over the country, with every dollar in sight once thirsted for by a hundred competitors, with bank failures and bankruptcies and mortgage foreclosures on every hand.

Sixty million dollars! And she with thirty dollars a week to support a home! Her father hadn't earned anything in years. Her mother to Cathleen's distress and grief, had never failed to wash for two prosperous neighbors. Mrs. Donnelly always spoke of this as a temporary expedient, a stop-gap until Joe, her eldest, should find the opening worthy of his talents.

Cathleen, however, knew Joe, with the searching sorry knowledge that only a sister has of a brother. Even if by a miracle, Joe overcame his reluctance to work and a job within his capacity was offered him at the improbably large salary that alone would induce him to accept it, she could not delude herself with the belief that his family would profit.

There were bills that they were behind with, there were a hundred and one things wanted for the home, and every McCarthy of them —with the exception of Joe, ever mercifully nasty—needed new clothes.

Yet, poor as she was herself, there was a certain thrill and a laugh too, to be got from hearing talking down tattens about all that money all that real money representing all that power.

What couldn't she do with a hundred and twenty dollars—with a tiny bit out of those sixty million! An instalment on the butcher's bill and the overdue bill, the dental plate that her mother needed, a new overcoat for father against the coming winter and the good cloth in his old one made into a coat for Aloysius. Shoes for Peter. Perhaps —if it ran to it—three new pairs of silk stockings for herself that she so badly needed—

"That will be all for today." Cathleen was caught back from her speculation by hearing Ingram say, "Let me have those as soon as you can, please."

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)
Edgar Rice Burroughs
Despite all his urging, no tribesman would impart to Tarzan the secret of the Taloned Death, for fear that the curse of the Terrible Spectre would alight upon him who was their greatest friend. For several days there was peace and quiet in the village of Gowando.
The villagers whispered happily to one another. "The Taloned Death has fled. It fears Tarzan. Tarzan is mightier than the Evil Thing." But Tarzan, too, began to believe that the mysterious killer had been baited. Then it appeared again—more terrible than ever.
A hunter inspecting his traps was slain! A courier on his way to a neighboring village was struck down. Each victim bore the telltale marks of the Taloned Death! Once more the mysterious jungle killer was abroad, in seeming defiance of the mighty Jungle Lord.
Tarzan carefully surveyed the victims, but no clue could he find to aid him in tracking down the mysterious Thing that killed apparently for the love of killing. Fury seized him. "I shall solve this mystery," he declared. "I'll destroy this thing—or be destroyed."

When Marian Alspaugh entered the outer office, Evan she did not dare invade her husband's cubby-hole opening upon Ingram's sacred privacy, she radiated subtlety and privilege as she asked the girl at the switchboard to tell Mr. Alspaugh she would like to see him.

Marian would have been a consummate figure at a race-track or in a fashionable restaurant at the one-hour. In that business office, as she fluttered about, refusing a seat in order to be the better seen she drew all eyes and knew it. She was wearing an all but backless yellow linen dress. It was a boldness designed to be completed for town wear by a short jacket. But, though the day was not excessively warm, Mrs. Alspaugh was carrying the jacket on her arm, and showing a large expanse of tanned flesh in addition to her bare bejeweled arms.

One of the new little tight-fitting hats slanted over one temple. Her lips were bright crimson, and her large eyes were made startling by blue pencil shadows and mascara.

When her husband appeared she greeted him with a pretense of timidity. "Now don't be cross because I interrupted your sacred important business, will you? I came about something important."

He led the way to some grouped chairs in a railed recess by the windows, out of hearing of the rest of the room, and she went on in an altered voice, "You will simply have to let me have some money."

"My dear, I—

"Yes, I know, you gave me a check yesterday for a hundred dollars. But your Hit Parade—WABC the whole of it. Now I am going to play contract for the unemployed, and knows how much a point, and you'll have to give me at least a hundred more."

Alspaugh knew better than to demur. She wanted cash, and he went away to confer with the cashier. Left alone, Marian rose idly, pushed open a window, admiring the hot breeze that blew every body's papers about, and thrust her head out to look down into the street.

When Alspaugh came back, her manner had changed again, nor was it only because he was bringing her a sheaf of notes, which she crammed hastily into her bag.

"Bit down and talk to me a minute, Homer," she urged. "Tell me, do you think I have too much make-up on? And should I be wearing this fwkt?"

He said yes to each question, so she produced a handkerchief and a little mirror and removed much of the over-emphasis of the make-up, and then slipped into the jacket.

"She's supposed to be awfully conservative, I know——"

"She! Who? The woman that's giving this bridge party?"

"Dolly Holbrook? I should say not! I mean Mrs. Ingram. I saw her Monday and she asked me to out and went into the bank, I've a hunch she is coming up here and it won't do me any harm to meet her, you know!"

"You have met her."

"Well, she doesn't seem to remember it!"

CHAPTER III

For the second time the outer door opened to admit a woman from the world of leisure. This time the interest of the personnel was real and respectful. Laura Ingram was no such frequent visitor as Alspaugh's wife, and there was a lovely flip about her who was ignorant of her social prestige and importance.

Though her complexion appeared faded and faintly lined, her features were regular and had triumphantly preserved her figure. Her most youthful attribute, however, was her soft-gold hair, so abundant and so lustrous now as in the day of her wedding.

She entered her husband's office only more simply than had Marian Alspaugh. In a low voice she asked if Mr. Ingram had anyone with him and being answered, in the negative, said, "I'll go right in, then."

Alspaugh hurried to open the door for her. "Let me show you in, Mrs. Ingram! And good afternoon!

It isn't often we have the pleasure of seeing you here."

"Oh, it's Mr.—Alspaugh——" Her hesitation before the name was barely perceptible. "How are you?"

Marian's piquant face appeared behind her husband's shoulders. "I do hope you haven't forgotten me completely, Mrs. Ingram! I'm Mrs. Alspaugh. I was introduced to you at the polo game, when Mr. Seward Prosser won the championship——"

"Why, of course!" Laura Ingram's voice warmed at the mention of her son. "I remember you perfectly. It's so nice to see you again!"

She hesitated, her eyes drifting covertly up and down Marian's attractive figure. "I wonder if you'd care to——Make you an engagement for tomorrow afternoon?"

"Oh, no!" ——

Sylvanite Now Ore 300 Ft. Long

Sylvanite's important new ore development at the Kirkland Lake property continues. This is the 900 vein, on the 750 level, and The Northern Miner can say that it now shows a length of 300 ft. and an average grade of about twenty dollars over a five foot width. Where could be considerable depth on this showing as it is in a position to be the upward extension of deep level ore.

The new material, plus other high grade ore which is being developed, should effect upon Sylvanite production and profits. Average grade of ore mined by it, a couple of dollars a ton over last year. The mine reports record of high grade developments at several places and the various shipping bodies next month. Should the substantial improvement hold, this year's earnings should rival those of 1935 when the 39.5c per share earned in the fiscal year ended with last March.

L.I.L. Good Width

Going west on the Little Long Lac property the main vein at a point 100 ft. west of the shaft has been slashed out to show a width of 13 to 14 ft., with the assayer reporting that he is not yet out to the footwall. The vein is reported as "very strong" with excellent values included.

Production in July may be off a little because for six or seven days the men were underground all the crew were on fire patrol. The silver-lead mine in Swastika, Ontario, loss rains having dampened the masses.

Gold is central is reaching a stage where consideration must be given to the placing of portfolios in investments. The benefit is to be derived from any sustained forward movement. Indiscriminate purchases are a fallacy that should be entirely avoided. The acquisition of equities after date consideration as to their merit will, over a period of time, be found profitable.

A statement generally heard around the Street is "Don't be without a few Gold Stocks", that signifying that the belief prevails of a marked rise in these securities in the near future. There is found bullishness in evidence on the page, particularly since the rise since 1928 and this attitude is well founded. Investors should give advance in the price of newsprint for 1937 materialize.

In an opinion on St. Lawrence Paper Mill, it is pointed out that this is the only major newsprint producer without a funded debt. This statement may be qualified somewhat however, in that recently shareholders approved a small bond issue to be used as collateral for bank loans, and that there is debt in the hands of the public. By foresight or by good luck the company issued only preferred and common stocks when it undertook public financing in 1926. Consequently, St. Lawrence Paper has been able to carry on, though with short earnings, and without fear of foreclosure by bondholders.

Peterboro Laboratory Will Not be Closed

Toronto, July 24—(CP)—Deputation from the City of Peterborough was successful today in obtaining a promise from the Ontario Government that the Provincial Laboratory at Peterborough would not be closed. Hon. Dr. Faulkner, Minister of Health, had advocated closing the laboratory on the ground that it was a duplication of existing services.

"When he heard their arguments, and their side of the case, we decided not to close the laboratory" stated the Premier, "it means more to Peterborough than the small saving that would result means to the government."

Hon. M. Gordon and J. J. Duffus, M.P. headed the deputation.

KING EDWARD LEAVES FOR VIMY RIDGE DEDICATION

Spain Asks France to Permit Delivery of Arms to Save Spanish Gov't

6,000 Canadian Pilgrims Reach French Shores To Proceed to Vimy

Veterans, Families and Parents of Fallen Set Foot Today on French Soil Dedicated by Sacrifice of Canadians

Le Havre and Lille Welcome Pilgrims

On Sunday Will Attend Unveiling And Dedication by King Edward of Canadian Monument on Immortal Site of Great Battle

By CAPT. W. W. MURRAY, M.C.
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LE HAVRE, France, July 25 (C.P. Cable) — Disembarking today from three trans-Atlantic liners, nearly 4,000 Canadian war veterans, their wives, children and the fathers and mothers of Canadian soldiers who gave their lives in the World War, reached the shores of France.

Escorted across the ocean by a Canadian warship, H.M.S. Saguenay, the great peace-time army is proceeding to Vimy Ridge where the National Monument will be unveiled by King Edward VIII.

The Canadian destroyer was scheduled to continue to Boulogne where it will remain several days — the first occasion on which a Canadian warship has called at a French continental port. Tomorrow seamen from the destroyer will constitute the guard of honor at the Vimy Ridge ceremony.

Accompanied by bandsmen, buglers and pipers, the pilgrims disembarked in royal fashion, and the city of Le Havre was ready to receive them. Arrangements for the expeditious movement of this vast throng had been made long ago, and it quickly as they descended the gangplanks they were ushered to waiting special trains for Lille and Arras.

Le Havre Waiting for Year.

For more than a year the port of Le Havre has been awaiting the return of the Canadians. To them the city has a peculiar appeal. While it was not in any sense the entry port to the Great War, it had a prominence association in that it was for the vast majority of them the port of exit.

VIMY MEMORIAL GOAL OF PILGRIMS

In general, artillery, ambulance and wheel transport were handled at Le Havre during the war, while the infantry and other personnel went to Boulogne. However, at Le Havre were several base hospitals and base offices, when a soldier spoke of "The Base" he meant, as a rule, Le Havre.

This city was the locale of the Canadians' farewell to France 18 years ago. The Canadian divisions reached here from Belgium and Germany en route for England and Canada when they were finally demobilized.

Canadians at Lille

Lille, France, July 25 (C.P. Cable)—Nearly two-thirds of Canada's 6,000 pilgrims, disembarking today from three liners at Le Havre, made their first acquaintance with this great manufacturing metropolis of Northern France. Brought here by special trains, the pilgrims made this city and Ypres their centre for various battlefield tours before proceeding late today to Arras.

Tonight, other pilgrims from the two vessels which docked at Antwerp will come to Lille and billet for the night. Early tomorrow they will embus for Vimy Ridge to participate in the unveiling by King Edward VIII of the national memorial.

Throughout the war the city of Lille beckoned the Allied armies, situated as it was within only a few miles of the front line trenches. For the German occupants it was a city of refuge, for the allies never bombarded it.

Glimpses in War Years

During the winter of 1915 many Canadians got fleeting glimpses of the vast city. These momentary

2 MOTHERS WILL NOT JOIN PACT IN 'STORK DERBY'

Will Not Enter Into An Arrangement to Share Bequest

OFFER MADE IS CLAIM

Mrs. Kenny Says She Can Prove Records For 12 Children

Toronto, July 25 (CP)—While indications of a consensual feeling were seen today amongst part of the band of Toronto mothers in the unique Miller will "stork derby" at least two of the entrants for the $500,000 prize will not take part on their chances and enter no share-the-wealth scheme.

There was no secret about a scheduled meeting somewhere in Toronto" last night at which Mrs. Grace Magnate, mother of nine and expectant of another before Oct. 31 was one of the principals.

But Mrs. Reginald would not say whether the meeting was held or, if it was, what was done. She did admit the meeting was scheduled and that it concerned some of the mothers-to-be with the "stork derby" in the stork sweepstakes.

Mrs. Martin Kenny, little French-Canadian woman who married an Ojibbeway, knew nothing about the others. There will be no pooling of profits or acquired wealth for her.

"I was offered $60,000 cash to agree to an arrangement with others," she said. "The offer came from a lawyer. I know him but can't tell you whom he represented."

She said she turned the offer down flat.

Mrs. Kenny claims she has given birth to 13 children in the 15-month period specified by the will. She would not say how many are living or dead or if any were still-born. She will produce "records to prove all 12 birth at the proper time, and there's going to be at least one more before the time limit."

Timlecks Have Two.

Mrs. Arthur Timleck is just beyond the deadline, and cannot be counted as one of the best contenders. The Timlecks have 12 youngsters, the latest born last April—to support their claims. They are a Scotch family but whether Mrs. Kenny can furnish legal evidence of the twelve births is not clear.

The Timlecks have been more or less officially in the race since about a year. At first, said Mr. Timleck, he would have been willing to let nature run its course, but as the baby began to arrive he changed his mind.

"I would like to have six and beat Mrs. Kenny," he said with a big smile. "I asked her to call on me and see what the result would be but she never called. I mean I wouldn't mind having six."

"We positively not, I would agree to no split in the money," said the voluble French-Canadian mother. "I know just where I stand now and am quite prepared to accept the decision of any court.

"I have given birth to 12 babies that will prove it. I have my whole life now living, but here is the list."

First Departure Of British Monarch Since His Accession

London, July 25 (AP)—The King personally today bade adieu for France on the British Admiralty Yacht Enchantress as Canada's war dead at Vimy Ridge.

Dedication Sunday of the Canadian War Memorial in the heart of old French battlefields will mark the first time His Majesty has left his country since succeeding the throne.

Tonight, please call Her his return to London Sunday night either at the Enchantress, or, if weather permits, on the royal private plane.

The King's departure for the French Riviera is expected by mid-week. There he will rest in the Chateau de L'Horizon.

Famous 'Peter Pan' of Movies Wants Just Right Part to Play

Hollywood, July 25 (AP)—Redhaired Billie Betty Bronson, the famous "Peter Pan" of 'old time movies is Mrs. Lesley Lauerman now, mother of an 18-months-old boy, and pretty well insulated against the lure of the movie bug.

"I've had a few offers since we came back here," she said, "and I'd like to do a little picture now. But it would have to be just the right part in just the right picture." She is 26.

Twelve years have passed since the celebrated Scot, Sir James Barrie, personally selected her for the title role in "Peter Pan". It made movie history.

She had been studying dancing in New York, and came to Hollywood at just the time when director Herbert Brenon was trying to get the famous play for a picture. He had found one unknown girl—Mary Brian—for "Wendy". He tested hundreds of others, among them breathless, half-frightened Betty Bronson. Sir James was asked to make the final choice.

In 1931 Miss Bronson retired to marry Lauerman, a wealthy North Carolinian.

DOOMED TO DIE IN WIFE'S DEATH

Accused is Shunned by Fellow Prisoners in Cell Block

Los Angeles, July 25 (CP)—Doomed to die on the gallows for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Thelma Alvey, Robert S. James sat in the "high-powered tank" of the county jail today shunned by his fellow prisoners.

Next Tuesday the red-haired barber with the pale face and inscrutable green eyes will be led before Superior Judge Charles Frickel, to be sentenced to hang.

A jury verdict at first degree murder with no recommendation for leniency made it mandatory on the court to impose the maximum penalty.

The end of a bizarre case that resembled a composite of a Poe horror tale and modern detective fiction came almost as an anti-climax.

The jury of ten men and two women came into the court after deliberating slightly more than two hours. The marrying barber, charged with executing a diabolical plot to rid his wife, Mary, of insurance by poison and drowning to collect on the life insurance, showed no calm.

He was calm throughout the trial as the 23-year-old man whom the defence pictured as a neurotic, highly emotional person who "had a way with women".

"I'm not afraid to die," he said. "I haven't had any trouble with the old world for the last four or five years. They can call me a fool or a crappy as they want to—and the day I'm hanged will be the happiest day of my life."

RENEWS WAR ON BOLSHEVISM

Vienna, July 25 (CP)—Vice-chancellor Edouard Saaz Starenberg, who is Prince Ernst Ruediger von Starenberg's lieutenant in the Heimwehr, called upon members of the Heimwehr today to renew the fight on Bolshevism.

UNCLE'S ACTIVITY UNDER SCRUTINY

Tells Jury He Heard No Disturbance Night Girl Killed

Asheville, N.C., July 25—(AP)—Dr. Clarence Lee Hall, 54-year-old bachelor uncle of Helen Hall, 19-year-old Bryn Mawr College New York University student whose slain wave under scrutiny by authorities today.

Clevenger, professor at N.C. State College at Raleigh, was detained "for investigation" by Sheriff Laurence Brown.

Brown, a few hours after he returned from Ohio, where he attended the funeral services of a girl.

He testified under questioning last week in the coroner's inquest he heard no disturbance during the night of his room in the fashionable resort hotel, where killing took place was around the hall from the girl's room.

Guests on the same floor and across a court held they heard a woman scream about one o'clock the morning of the slaying. The screams follows the girl was attacked, mutilated and then shot to death. Hall was 30-year-old co-ed's secret violinist, held for investigation in the case when he was questioned by police.

He was taken before the coroner's jury and then to the bathrobed guests questioned.

REBEL BATTERY IS HIT

Gibraltar, July 25 (CP-Havas)—Loyalist Spanish warships bombarded Ceuta today. Rebel batteries replied and one of the shells scored a hit, damaging the bows of the Spanish ship, it dispatches said.

Detonations of the artillery were clearly heard in this British Crown Colony across the narrow few miles north of Ceuta. It was the second time Loyalist warships shelled the rebel point.

SHRINE AT VIMY

Designed by Walter Allward, Canadian sculptor and architect, the monument represents a 14-foot limestone bastion of the thousands of artisans and workmen at a cost of more than $1,-000,000.

In making the excavations deep into the chalky earth, the builders found one of the German subterranean defence works. It has been known in and was strewn with bodies.

After a sentiment-wide search for the proper stone, the correct quality was found in a fourth-century pit not far from Sarajevo —scene of the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and starting point of the Great War.

"Knowledge," "Truth," "Justice" and "Sacrifice" are the figures that rise out from the great pylons, as though assuming the air for heroism.

'Back to Methusaleh' at 80, Shaw Will Go On Writing

Tireless, Waggish, Straight 'G. B. S.' Says Birthday Another Day

CHUCKLES AT AGE

Malvern, England, July 25 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw, who in his "Back to Methusaleh" spoke vividously of extreme age, chuckled today over the fact he will be 80 years old tomorrow.

"Piana" he repeated. "A man of 80 has a past but no future. I cannot contemplate anything."

And then he added his own words:

"I declare I shall go on writing as long as I can remember how to write. Then not. Then the end forgot how to write. He spent his morning trying to learn how spell, like a child."

Shaw's waggish, still straight, despite his eight decades of ceaseless energy. Shaw did his best to indicate that his 80th birthday anniversary was no surprise to him whatsoever.

"Tomorrow will be just another day," he declared. "I cannot prevent that any more than I could be different from any other day.

"I will, I fear, be exactly like any other day. I cannot even give the Weather Forecaster for the day, and that would be something useful."

Tonight the Malvern Drama Festival will open with a performance of Shaw's "Saint Joan".

The program calls for Shaw to remain in his seat, but there were those who doubted he could be induced to remain a spectator.

Shaw has been on the job constantly at rehearsals—criticizing, criticizing, and encouraging. During the dress rehearsal he was on his feet from 7 p.m. to 1:30 a.m.

ARRAS EN FETE TO CANADIANS AFTER 18 YEARS

Mont St. Eloi And Other Scenes Familiar to Veterans

WARTIME SETTING

Notre Dame de Loretto Has Deep Significance For France

Arras, France, July 25 (CP)—This city in the old war area was en fete today to welcome 4,000 Canadian pilgrims arriving at Le Havre from Antwerp to witness tomorrow's dedication of the great Dominion memorial on Vimy Ridge.

While the veterans entrained at the point for the "front", Brig. Gen. Alex Ross, president of the Canadian Legion, and other members of the Legion's official party, deposited wreaths in memory of Canadians who time dead at memorials in this city, Lorette, and Mont St. Eloi.

Representatives of the Bishop of Arras were presented at the ceremony. A few hours later he received by Mayor Delansorne on behalf of the city.

The naval guard from H. M. S. Saguenay, escort ship for the pilgrim liner Empress of Canada were received by Col. Beron.

Mont St. Eloi.

Mont. St. Eloi lies five miles to the west of Vimy Ridge. Nearby are Villers au Bois, Le Penche, Neuville St. Vaast, La Targette, and Thelus, places well known to Canadian veterans.

To the French people the name of Notre Dame de Lorette conveys practically the same meaning as Vimy Ridge does to Canadians. Its significance is that of a character- and the two are twin peaks, neighbors running at right angles to one another with only the deep and narrow Souches valley separating.

The Canadians called this bare ridge, "Lorette Ridge", Father Lorette, where its crest was crowned with brush. The name changed to "Hospital Heights" after the small villages clinging precariously to its steep north slope, a favorite site of Air Nouvelle.

Notre Dame de Lorette.

Notre Dame de Lorette, however, stretches away to the northwest through the department of the Pas de Calais. Ruins of churches and ancient Roman road leading from Arras to Boulogne, and lying in the north are Sains en Gohelle, Hersin Coupigny, Mazingarbe, Vermont and Noeux Les Mines.

Mont St. Eloi, about Abbain St. Nazaire nestles athwart the Souchez river, almost adjoining the village of Souchez.

The French memorial on Notre Dame de Lorette is one of the most beautiful erected by the Republic to the memory of her dead. Above it the design of a lighthouse it flashes its message every night for a radius of many miles, the rays penetrating and illuminating the graves of 38,000 French soldiers scattered in the surrounding cemeteries.

DENIES VATICAN HAS INTERVENED

Bishop Gallagher Says it is His Concern, Not Vatican's

Naples, July 25 (AP) — Bishop Thomas J. Gallagher of Detroit arriving here today denied absolutely his visit to the Vatican had anything to do with the activities of Father Charles E. Coughlin, priest of Detroit—and therefore also the superior of Father Coughlin—is my concern.

"It must be therefore for myself to make observations about Father Coughlin, not the Vatican."

If the Pope should ask him about Father Coughlin, Bishop Gallagher said: "I will say Father Coughlin is a good priest, devoted to the memory of William Lemke party. (The "third party" in the United States Presidential election campaign).

French Communist Party Secretly Raises Troops For Aid of Leftist Group

Munitions Issue May be Discussed by French Cabinet

GERMANY QUERIES

Blum May be Asked to Allow Placing of 25 Airplanes

Paris, July 25 (AP)—The Spanish embassy today asked the French government to authorize urgently delivery of arms to Spain's embattled government, it was stated in usually well-informed sources.

The secret raising of a detachment of "shock troops" by French Communists to aid the Leftist Spanish government was reported in nationalist quarters.

A long conference was held early today between Premier Blum, foreign Minister Yvon Delbos and Minister of State Camille Chautemps in preparation for a special session of the cabinet this afternoon. It was not disclosed immediately whether the meeting was in connection with the munitions negotiations.

Sudden Visit To Paris.

Former Spanish Military Attache D. Antonio Barroso Y Sanchez Guerra and Charge d'Affaires Cristobal Del Castillo Y Campos of the Spanish Embassy both resigned rather than be blamemarked by the purchase of arms for one against their own countrymen, it was stated. Their resignations were reported carried on by former Spanish Minister Fernando De Los Rios, who came to Paris suddenly.

Madrid radio engagers warned the government against authorizing the arms shipments but it not only authorizes Germany and Italy but also react unfavorably on French relations with Great Britain.

2,000 Bombs Asked.

Countervailing rumors circulated in lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies that the German Embassy had asked the Foreign Office if it intended to permit the shipments.

The French Air Minister indicated he could place 25 planes at the disposal of the Spanish government but the Blum cabinet approved the step, it was reliably reported.

The Spanish embassy was reported to have asked for delivery of 30,000 aerial bombs, 100 machine guns, 8 cannon and 12,000,000 cartridges as well as airplanes.

Rebels Pause.

Headquarters of the Northern Patriot Army at Burgos, Spain, July 25 (AP)—The rebel troops which have been marching on Madrid intent on smashing the Leftist government paused today about sixty miles from the capital city, their next move undecided.

The insurrectionists' military leaders frankly admitted their various columns were by no means marching the very gates of Madrid.

"All our troops," Lieut. Col. Kaquero, of the Fascist general staff, told the Associated Press, "are now approximately sixty miles from Madrid."

Questioned as to whether this indicated a plan to try to starve out the Loyalist front or interfere with Madrid's water supply, he declined to volunteer further information.

Mayor Is replied.

It was apparent the Fascists had a good reason for halting their advance.

TRAPPED IN WELL, YOUTH RECOVERING

Zanesville, O., July 25 (CP) — Trapped at the bottom of a well four hours yesterday Leland Ankrum, 17-year-old farm youth, was recovering from the trying experience today and still marvelling at the way in which the hogs crowed that caused to watch his rescue from the 36-foot well.

"It looks like half the country was here to watch you Ankrum with a weak smile, after he passed the last half hour in his imprisonment directing the volunteer rescue squad in removing rocks which pinned him down.

In such exchanges of territory there is a spirit which transcends material gain, the press said today. "Henceforth Vimy Ridge is a possession, speaking of the sacrifice of Occupied by the dead, it will stand as a message to the living."

SPOTTY SURE LOCAL DOGS PRETTY TOUGH

John Hendrick's perky, Boston bull terrier, now one of the family on a fourteen acre woodlot near Demorestville, will probably go home convinced that Belleville dogs, at least, are just as tough as any to be found in his home block, Canadaigua, N.Y.

"Spotty", during a brief stop over in the city early on Tuesday evening, in a short but noisy Front street brawl, received a bad biting from a second hand bull terrier, just slightly smaller than himself. Spotty, who was accustomed to parting the warring dogs insisted that "Spotty" started the scrap when he leaped to the ground from the car for a run with his master.

His was promptly set upon by four other local dogs, attracted by the clamour, were about to pitch in and finish Spotty when

Knight of the Road and Former Middleweight Boxer Claims Title for Brown Bomber

He sat on a bench in Victoria Park, ragged, unshaven, shifting uncovered an emaciated frame. Hands that formerly had shot vicious right hooks and jolting lefts to the bodies and jaws of some famous pugilist of yesterday sat in tapered, bony attitudes of relaxation. Eyes that used to light with the fire of battle beneath the glare of white lights were dull with the colourless stare of defeat and near desperation.

"It has been a long fight," he told a reporter hesitantly, "and it won't be long before Referee Father Time counts ten over me."

"Life is a funny thing," he said. "Years ago I rode in seats in one of those limited trains speeding to the ring. "I had plenty of money, friends by the dozen and life looked pretty sky any other bum."

Accepts Cigarette

Gratefully he accepted a proffered cigarette. He inhaled the smoke deeply before speaking. "Thanks Buddy", he said, "I'll remember. I'll give you a tip. I was born in the Middle West and my early years were brought up in an atmosphere of rests, sweatshirts, punching bags and training camps. I got a reputation as the thrill of having my hand raised in victory and I have felt the hard jar of padded fists beating a tattoo on my body and face. I have heard the loss voice of the referee counting the fateful ten in the distance."

"In the old days I fought with some of the best of them," the aging pugilist went on, "and I was considered a fairly good middleweight. I have seen and heard about the thrill of hearing my name announced as the winner of a ten round bout. I had bouts with Mike McTigue, who was at one time one of the middleweight title, Gene Bros-nan, former Canadian champion, Johnny Brown, the late Tiger Flowers and many other good boys of those days. But I was one of those unfortunates you find in every city and town who have the ambition to be a champion, yet smart enough to appreciate that there are born sometimes when, a victory over me would put them in line for a crack at the title."

I wandered all over the country getting knocked out and then drifted into Montreal where I was finally brought in enough money to put direction of the subway."

being found in possession of a motor car that had been stolen and driven by a man reported stolen. The lads were taken to headquarters, where Fred Izard during his investigation they had found the battery on the dirty dozen car. Further charges, further investigations, however, ended Izard at noon today.

Nine transients elected to procure warm sleeping quarters and appeared in the police court for a brief last night. Three summonses were issued for vagrancy, while seven apprehended driving at a greater rate than 30 miles per hour in the city limits. Fines totalling $70 and costs of $6 m.p.H. on North Front St., and when apprehended speedily insulted Traffic Officer Ellis. In this case it was a young lady and the matter will come before the attention of the police court, police added today.

George A. Prentiss Artour
Builds Own Trailer, Unique Accomplishment
HIS WIDE TRAVELS

He may be a spectacled bank clerk an insurance salesman or a shoe dealer on vacation. He may be well past fifty, a farmer once, who has removed some small income from his life's earnings and is now happy retirement.

He is one of the great army of tourists hauling his temporary summer home behind him behind small car. One of the trailer-living fraternity now using the highways and using the city's tourist camp as a stop over point for meals or night time parking his trip. His home, for a time at least, is wherever he cares to drive it and park.

Regular Tourist

Or perhaps he is one of the "regular army" of tourists, who trailed with the birds, who follow the sun from south to north—one month again when falling leaves sirver the the pawnees, this is one of the thousands of the modern gypsy clan, many of whom make a very comfortable, well equipped living from their permanent home. He is the regular tourist "knocking on the open tourist" learning his geography from the trailer in which he lives.

You meet casually and talk with George A. ("Andy") the name) "Andy" Prentiss was a cool maker of the latest visitors at the city camp. Mr. Prentiss, one of the average "trailermen" of the thousands, is well past middle age; his hair is graying but his eyes are bright, his smile and chuckle infectious.

George Likes Open Weathers

His health was none too good a year ago. But life in the open has done wonders. His wife is with him "Still" an alert German Shepherd also travels along.

Just a few years ago, Mr. Prentiss ("Andy" Prentiss) was a tool maker in his home town. He saved his money, invested it wisely, and he purchased a small interest in the business. A genuine long ambition him to retire. The income now received from the plant makes it possible.

Builds Own Trailer

Alone he designed and built his own trailer. Built of special durable shining aluminium one, fitted with the most complete accessories including a gasoline stove, complete electrical wiring system for domestic current in the trailer, camp provides light and heat for the electrical stove. A clesterfield and easy chairs are found in the fittings. A complete pantry and kitchen, even to the lamps, kitchen sink and electric have not been forgotten. Running water trickles through silvery taps from a concealed, roof-sized tank above. The total cost of the modern shell would have built a small, modern home. But it would have been permanently located.

"It's just about a year now since we first started our trip, a trip that Mrs. Prentiss had really upon the Climate's advice. He told me to get out in the air. The more we are out, the better we've liked it." homes of "Andy" Prentiss. "Why folks who have to stay cooped up all the time don't know what they're missing". Mrs. Prentiss serenely nods corroboration.

Geography and Travel

"Back home in school, geography was something we had hammered into us out of a book. I hated it. Only during the past year or so during which time we have visited most of our United States, and a big part of Canada we have I recommend to like it. What an evolution it would be in teaching the whole classroom if we were to take into a big trailer and really take them over the country."

Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss, children, still pay taxes upon a home in Ontario, but they occupy it only during the colder months of the year. In their absence kindly neighbors receive their mail and forward it to them wherever the route.

For the trailer there are no taxes, except such sales levies and fees as those that may be imposed upon him as he passes. He licenses his car and the trailer is included. He will do it cheapest.

All The Best of Finger Tips

The best of the vacation spots, none of which need be visited twice, on the continent, are at his finger tips, or rather the wheel or his little coupe which hauls the travelling home. The best of the fishing grounds and out of the way spots are easily accessible.

"Any man who has an income of between $75 and $150 a month", advises "Andy" Prentiss, "can do the same as we're doing, but even do it cheaper. Our actual living costs don't average much over a dollar a day when we're travelling. Gas and oil is the big cost—that and camp fees." declare this happy couple who have found a new design for living.

CITY HALL CAT, FAVORITE, GONE

Came With Litter of Kittens to Relief Office Some Years Ago

Minnie, the city hall cat, who for years has pursued her gentle tail and mouse catching ways in the corridors and halls of the city hall, taking them out at regular intervals only to bread and roar successive families of meeting kittens, has gone but in her place has come another striped feline who has calmly taken up quarters vacated by her well known predecessor.

For years Minnie, well known to officials of the city hall and residents alike who have observed her stationed on guard at various portals of executive offices, created a creditable mortality rate among the rodents which infested the lower sections of the building. Through floods and wintry blasts she had survived and waxed fat. Minnie, however, was never lazy. Always she performed her work of rat catching with neatness and despatch. She had come to recognize many who were daily visitors at the city hall, and to accept their favors with the graciousness of a well bred puss.

She first made her presence known at the city hall years ago, when burdened with a litter of kittens she appeared, curiously enough at the City Relief Office where a cosy corner was made for her little family. Since that time she had been accepted as just "another employee" of the city.

'Miss Canada' Delayed On Trip to Lake George

Harold Wilson's famous racing motorboat, "Miss Canada", that is entered in the Lake George gold cup race, narrowly escaped coming to grief, when the automobile Wilson was driving, and towing the Miss Canada behind in a trailer, crashed into the ditch near Brighton Thursday night, but in no way damaged the Miss Canada.

Wilson left Gravenhurst late yesterday by motor, trailing the famous boat. Miss Canada behind his roadster in a specially-built trailer. Near Brighton, the driver of the motor car blew out, forcing the vehicle into the ditch resulting in the motor car being badly damaged but fortunately the" Miss Canada" and the occupants of the automobile escaped uninjured, Motorcycle Patrolman W. H. Delaney reported today. The accident happened late Thursday night.

Later Mr. Wilson procured the services of a truck from a Brighton firm and loaded his racing craft, the Miss Canada, on the truck and continued his journey to Lake George, stopping overnight at the Hotel Quinte, Belleville. Incidentally during a trial test at Gravenhurst yesterday the Miss Canada developed engine trouble and certain essential parts, needed to rectify the reported trouble, will be sent by aeroplane to Lake George in time for the trials. Mr. Wilson announced while in Brighton. Mr. Wilson seemed quite confident his craft would establish a new world's record.

With Gleaming White Pillars Pointing to the Heavens, This Memorial Will Commemorate Canada's Heroism

Pointing majestically and reverently toward the heavens, this magnificent memorial to the heroism of Canadians in the Great War will be unveiled to-morrow by King Edward. More than 6,000 Canadian veterans, pilgrims to the shrine at Vimy, will witness the impressive sight as the draped flag drops from the gleaming white pillars. The memorial is situated at the crest of Vimy Ridge, where the Canadian army won undying fame when, on Easter Monday morning in 1917, after a barrage which for days had battered enemy trenches, they charged the heights, took them and held on.

AT VIMY RIDGE

There stands on Vimy Ridge, scene of one of the greatest war events in all history, a memorial, shrine of Canada's sacrifice for the good of the world. At this shrine to the dead from the Western Dominion Canadians again pay their tribute of memory. Here veterans and their relatives pilgrims from the Northern part of the North Continent of the New World, take part as their King, His Majesty Edward the Eighth, dedicates this memorial on a plot of land given to Canada for all time by the French Republic to defend which along with British ideals and such weaker nations as Belgium and the smaller countries from oppression and domination, Canadians crossed the seas, fought and bled.

The scene of Sunday, July 26th will long remain in the minds of the people of Canada and of the British Empire and France as here deeds that will live forever are carved in stone and on hearts. Here again Canada and the world which loves peace again prays for pacific relations throughout the world.

This impressive memorial which adorns the heights depicts Canada's friendship for France, her love of peace typified by the breaking of the sword, her sacrifice memorialized in not only stone can recall it, her undying memory of the great dead, those battalions of men who went out of life in the hour of great deeds.

Such a scene must linger in all hearts, should mark all effort towards peace, so that this world may be a place where nation is at peace with nation without forts or guns pointing at one another in threat and in fear.

NEW HIGHWAY ROUTE RUMORED

Trenton Courier-Advocate refers to the possibility of change of route of the highway from the standpoint of the Air Station. The Courier-Advocate says:

"There is talk gain of a new highway between Trenton and Belleville to follow the abandoned Canadian National right-of-way north of Trenton Air Station. The new highway would cross the Dr. McQuade property on Marmora Street and go east until the old railway roadbed was reached.

"This change of highway has been spoken of before. With the building of the Trenton Air Station and the increase in the number of men stationed there there is always the element of danger as these men have to cross from north to south side of the busy highway in the course of their work.

A subway from the north to south of the highway for these men has also been mentioned, but we believe that due to the fact that the air station should be completely enclosed for obvious reasons and that the powers-that-be will not be satisfied until this is done, that there is a great possibility in the change of the highway even though it may yet be far off.

"Trenton Air Station is growing all the time. In a short few years it will undoubtedly be the greatest camp for land and sea planes in the Dominion."

ERASMUS

The four hundredth anniversary of the death of Desiderius Erasmus, one of the greatest scholars and writers of the fifteenth century, drew from the Hamilton Spectator a fine tribute:

"There is something peculiarly fascinating about this reformer, who typifies the power of thought to influence human destiny, for Erasmus was essentially a thinker rather than a man of action. Throughout his life he kept in the background, directing the current of events from his study, his busy pen criticising, ridiculing, praising, urging, restraining, as occasion demanded, illuminating every subject upon which he wrote—and it might be said of him, as it was said of another, that he dealt with all topics of human interest and never dealt with anything that he did not adorn. Yet, in spite of the courage and vigour with which he exposed abuses and the uncompromising stand he took for reform, there was something timid in the way he retreated before the possibility of physical risk. His philosophy was that he was of more use to the world alive than dead. Let others invite the fate of heroes or the glories of martyrdom, his role was of different order—to direct and guide and advise; above all, to preach the delights of scholarship, the value of freedom, the worth of the Christian faith.

"Erasmus was born in Rotterdam in 1496, spent his youth in Holland, later living in France and England, where he was received in the highest literary circles and became professor of Greek at Cambridge. His writings give a revealing picture of contemporary life, especially his famous "Colloquia", with its outspoken condemnation of abuses and its witty commentaries on men and things. Of all the schoolmen this frail, gentle yet commanding figure stands out most weakly, the student who lived for knowledge, but who made it his duty to employ his talents for the general progress of human welfare. Well may his memory be held in grateful remembrance."

THESE POPPIES

Not fashioned in the sun, the wind, the rain—
As those that gem the golden of the grain,
Were these, who, cradled in a war-scarred land,
Bloom red upon the breasts of all the land.
As if a nation's very hearts lay bare
Their secret tears, and their unspoken prayer,
The unity of pride and grief to share.

Behind this symbol, welding one to one,
Stretch years of peace that sacrifice has won.
And deep within the vision of the heart,
The silent crosses beckon where we part.
And strong were those, now helpless on their bed,
And would they shared the resting of the dead.
So memory wields her spear from out the red.

The tapping stick against a world unseen.
Of silence reigns, where music once has been.
And still the war is raging in the mind
Of some, who earned the peace they cannot find.
The thudding crutch that only death can cease,
And tramping workless, searching for the ease
Of work. For victory is composed of these.

'AMOS 'AND ANDY, KINGFISH, 'AND LIGHTNING in the open air taxicab and trailer are trying to make California and back in two weeks by driving night and day. Andy drove the contraption one hundred miles out of the way because he could not turn the car around with the trailer attached. Other adventures and misadventures illuminate the trip. Which reminds us of what befell two young men of Belleville who determined to make a trip by motor car to Bay City, Michigan. First, they bought a decrepit old auto for seven dollars. Get that! $7.00! Took it home and took it apart, making incidental repairs and adjustments. They then took the road and made good time despite the fact that every mile or so something would happen to the car. First aid always helped and the cavalcade kept moving, for their ears were tuned for any noises symptomatic of disturbance in the vitals of the car. So when any part dropped off it was soon missed and recovered by a back trek. Near Strathroy the car was running smoothly, comparatively speaking and the boys were congratulating themselves upon having conquered the "beast" at last—peace and quiet and a drowsy summer afternoon — hard to keep awake when all nature was serenely at rest and all noise was so reduced that the hum of the bee sounded loud. Bang! Wow!—all at once a terrific noise rent the air. What's that? Well, one, when he had caught his breath and recovered his poise. Stop the car, the whole durn back must have fallen out of it, said the other traveller. Stopped the car. Descended and walked to the rear expecting to find that the bottom had fallen out of their trip. Surprise! Nothing wrong. The noise which had disturbed the peaceful afternoon like a crash of thunder or the crack of doom was just a whistle blast from the new streamlined 6400 locomotive passing on the railway track nearby. And the young men nursed their seven-dollar car successfully to Michigan and beyond and return safely under their own power, voting the outing one of mixed pleasure and perspiration, and always a huge appetite for that splendid hamper of food which the mater insisted upon packing in.

The Editor, Ontario Intelligencer, Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:

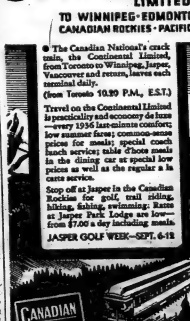
It is rather surprising in days such as these to find any municipality wisely staggering under an almost insupportable burden of taxation, embarking on oiling and clarifying our fair city streets. While I realize this is necessary for the difficulties of many in meeting their current expenses are in many cases beyond their means.

I feel it a duty to protest against the unnecessary expenditure being imposed upon some taxpayers.

Experience has taught us that there has already been a great disparity between the estimated and the actual cost of such projects.

I have no doubt that some of our councillors consider this necessary, but would it not at such a time as this, be more economical at least to study some of the county roads and use a good layer of calcium chloride which has proved to be very successful and will stand up to the wear and tear of traffic. Had this been done it would provide a smooth and satisfactory surface for many years to come. This matter has been the subject of much heated discussion throughout the city and the prevailing opinion is that the council has not given this proper consideration.



The whole problem is not a new one. Former councils have given it their earnest consideration and have imposed an unnecessary expenditure on the taxpayers. We are glad to believe when the council was inaugurated, that lower taxes was their keynote. Is it not time that the taxpayers got together whereby their opinions could be formed as a medium of expression. The genius of British Statecraft is the absolute freedom of the governed to express their views on the action or actions of those in whose, for the time being, is entrusted the governing power.

My interest, Mr. Editor, is a direct one. I am a heavy taxpayer. I feel that at this time the taxpayer is entitled to consideration and I hope that the council will consider their action.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I am

Yours Truly,
Taxpayer.

RADIOPHOTO SHOWS REBEL TROOPS LEAVING BURGOS

This excellent radio-photo, rushed to London and transmitted to New York and thence to Central Press Canadian by aeroplane, shows the cavalrymen of the rebel army leaving Burgos, Spain, on the march to the Spanish capital, Madrid. They are being led by an officer on white horse, and are seen carrying their rifles across their backs. The crowds in the background are watching the procession in silence.

BURGOS HEADQUARTERS OF NORTHERN REBEL TROOPS

Although it is almost impossible to acquire accurate reports from civil war-torn Spain, several newspaper correspondents have succeeded in reaching through the iron ring of censorship, with the reports that Miguel Cabanellas (Inset), former capt.-general of Saragossa has been named by rebel leaders to head the provisional government. Reports state that the rebel forces are using the 1,000-year-old city of Burgos as the headquarters of the northern rebel army. In the town lies buried El Cid, one of the greatest military geniuses of all time. The ancient city of Burgos is shown here.

Pleasing Spanish Type Of Architecture Features New Service Stations

Pleasing architecture distinguishes Belleville's newest gas service station, the new Shell Station on East Dundas street, corner of Foster Avenue. The building follows the style of Early Spanish-Moorish" conception, long and low, simple in its lines and because of its simple lines carrying an impressive beauty and distinctiveness very pleasing to the eye. This is the second of this type of architecture to be erected in Belleville by the Shell Company, the other one being completed and opened a short time ago at the corner of East Moira and North Front Street, attracting widespread attention and general admiration.

The new Shell station opened today on Dundas street is attractive in every particular and pleasing to the eye. The building is well built and equipped and the grounds are neat and in keeping with the general ensemble.

The erection of the new station has been under the direct supervision of J. H. Lynn, field inspector for the Shell Gas Company, who is well satisfied with the result and the work of Belleville contractors and workmen.

The general contractor for the new Shell station was H. S. Parry, who also built the Shell station on North Front street, both being of the same Spanish type. Mr. Parry has received many congratulations for the excellence of his work on the two new Shell stations. He is a well known resident of Belleville and a building contractor of many years experience, having for fifteen years been building superintendent for the Paterson Construction Company, and has brought to a successful conclusion many large contracts for that company and for himself, including buildings for the Royal Air Force at Deseronto; Hydro Canal, Niagara Falls; Imperial Munitions Plant, Trenton; Welland Canal, and others.

Contractor Parry has employed Belleville men as far as possible on construction, the only outside help being experts not obtainable here. During construction of these stations Contractor Parry has these men off relief whenever possible.

The heating and pumps were installed by John Lewis Company; plumbing and sheet metal work by Smith Hardware; electric work by Fickle Electric; painting by Georgs Madden.

Stanley Wilson, for several years connected with the Shell-Company organization in Belleville as the Bridge street station has been appointed manager of the new Shell station on Dundas street. He is well and favorably known in the motoring public, courteous and obliging always, and a good citizen of Belleville.

Manager Wilson will be assisted by Johnny Conner, Jr., and Wilfred (Dusty) Flagler, well known Belleville boys.

Expressing himself as well pleased with the appearance and splendid workmanship displayed in the new Shell Station Frank N. St. John, local manager for the Shell Company, Belleville District, extended a general invitation to the public to attend the opening ceremonies Saturday evening, when a band concert will be given by the Belleville Citizen's Band, under the direction of Bandmaster Fred Johnson; also an interesting program including open air moving picture talkies.

CORBINS EARN PLAYOFF BERTH

Defeat Ciacos For Third Straight to Continue in Playoffs

With a barrage of extra base hits in the latter stages of the game the Corbin "lockmakers" made it "three straight" over the Ciacos in the extended playoff series for fourth position and the right to continue into the Belleville Industrial Softball League play-downs as the Corbins downed the "Say Corby's" nine by the score of 10 to 8 at Coleman Flats last evening.

"Jumbo"; Graham, on the hilltop for the Corbins, breezed along in splendid manner for five innings, allowing but two runs and two hits until the sixth when the Ciacos made their final bid, that ultimately fell short of victory. When the Harriage-led Ciacos did press and make the score 6 to 5 in favor of the Corbins, the "lockmakers" replied to the challenge with a barrage of extra base hits including two successive home runs by H. Thompson and H. Reid, of the Corbiners.

Graham whiffed ten Ciaco batters in seven frames while Kiser, his opponent, struck out five. Graham developed a wild streak as the game progressed, as he walked six batsmen while Kiser only passed two via the four ball route. Reid with a home run and a triple hit well for the winners as did H. Thompson, who clipped the pellets for a circuit blow and two timely singles. Jenkinson and Manager Barney Murney Smith also supplied hitting power for the winners. The Corbins fielded well behind Graham, Chuck Smith Scriven and Jenkinson supplying the fielding accessions. Errors on the part of the Ciaco infield and their inability to hit in the early stages paved the way for their elimination from the playoffs. Kiser with two doubles and Sharpe with a brace of singles led the losers with the willow. Meekman started a Ciaco rally with a triple in the sixth that resulted in three runs being scored.

The Corbins scored two in the first and added three more in the second to assume a lead they never relinquished, despite the fact the Ciacos came back with their backs to the wall, in the sixth and again in the final session. The victorious Corbins now meet the Belleville-Sargent in the league semi-finals commencing Monday night at Coleman Flats.

The line-ups: Ciaco—McDonald 2b; Latchford, 3b; Bells and Meekman, rf; Kiser, p; Sharpe 1b; Stewart, c; Boyle, ss; Howlett lf and Moon, cf. Corbins—Jenkinson, cf; C. Thompson, c; H. Thompson, 1b; Reid, 2b; B. Smith, lf; Graham, p; C. Smith 2b; Scriven, ss, and J. Thompson, rf.

Score by innings:

Ciacos	2 0 0 0 0 3 2— 8 7 6
Corbins	3 2 0 1 0 4 3—10 12 0

Did Cutten Transfer 90 Millions to Ontario?

Toronto, July 25.—If Arthur Cutten, Guelph-born king of the Chicago wheat market, transferred a $90,000,000 estate to some place in Ontario, the Ontario Treasury stands to get $30,000,000 in additional revenue, says the Toronto Globe.

A report from Chicago yesterday stated that there were rumors in that city that the late wheat trader shifted the bulk of his fortune out of the United States before his death. The report set this fortune at $90,000,000. His will, probated in Chicago, purported to show an estate of only $250,000.

The Ontario Treasury collects succession duties on any estate falling due in this province. Under the Succession Duty Act the dues on the $90,000,000 fortune would amount to an estimated $30,000,000.

No evidence supporting the report that all or part of the Cutten fortune is in Ontario was forthcoming last night.

Interest Centres On Canadian Entry In Gold Cup Race

Belden Landing, N.Y., July 25.—(AP)—The 14-year-old El Lagarto, its motor reassembled after a last minute dismantling to determine whether it was harmed by vandals, stood ready to defend its thirty-two Golf Cup Regatta title today against six highly tuned boats representing the most modern developments in marine engineering.

George Reis, veteran owner and pilot, announced the amazing old craft would answer the starting gun for the first of the three 30-mile heats that make up the event.

"This is look at it yourself," he said as the shiny, sleek craft prepared to enter the water for the race which begins at one p.m. E.D.T. "The motor is not damaged".

Reis and his Wall Street businessmechanic tore down the new 500-horsepower motor to determine whether it had been tampered with after discovering some one had broken into the boat house. Reis said there had been no vandalism.

Considered the chief contender in the first entry from Canada since 1934, Harold Wilson, 34-year-old Ingersoll, Ont., pilot, will shoot Miss Canada 2nd over the starting line assisted by Mechanic Lorne Reid.

The Canadian powerhouse was constructed at Gravenhurst and whereas other pilots have had a whirl or two around the lake in their boats Wilson was unable to get here in time for a practice spin.

Heavily Horsepowered.

Miss Canada 2nd has a 12-cylinder motor of 1,000 horsepower and, according to reports which sifted down here possesses several unusual features in design, expected to boost her speed considerably.

Although nine boats originally entered the competition for the silver urn which cost $720 and is now insured for $17,000, the field was reduced to seven by the last minute withdrawal of Hotsy Totsy 3rd and Miss Canada 3rd.

Outstanding among the challengers is Miss Detroit, Detroit, Mich. speedboat driver who will sit behind the wheel of Harold E. Dodge's Impish, which began her racing career in 1928.

Don originally had planned to pilot Delphine 8th, but decided at the last moment to drive the Impish. Beny Hill of Detroit, Mich., will drive Delphine 8th.

Other entries include the midget Torbellimo, driven by Arthur L. Bourick of Long Beach, Calif.; Jay De Tzo, a new contender built and piloted by Jack Dunn of Midland, Ont.; and the 10-year-old Notre Dame, owned by Mrs. Mary Hamilton of Detroit, to be driven by Ciel Perry.

Considered the class centres in the first entry from Canada since 1934, Harold Wilson, 34-year-old Ingersoll, Ont., pilot, will shoot Miss Canada 2nd over the starting line assisted by Mechanic Lorne Reid.

DENY BEACH AREA IS SEWER OUTLET

City Engineer Mott And R. Moncrieff Clear Up Report

Annoyed by rumors that were declared to have been circulated in the city that the site of the civic bathing beach on the bay shore just west of the General Hospital was a drainage point for sanitary sewers, surface drainage water and waste from the city, emphatic denial that this was so was registered today by President Reg. Moncrieff and members of the newly formed Civic Bathing Beach Committee.

"According to the city engineer, the hospital sewer has not been drained into the bay for some years now. It has become completely closed off and sewage is now being emptied into the East Dundas sanitary sewer. This was decided upon some years ago for a sanitary measure," declared Mr. Moncrieff. "The water down there is just as pure as anywhere else in the bay."

"As far as this department knows no other drainage from the city is now taking place at that point," corroborated Mr. Chas. Mott, city engineer today.

NO OVERCHARGING PLAINTS HEARD

Satisfied Customer Idea Has Full Endorsement Here

Restaurant owners, roadside refreshment stand owners and others who annually cater to the needs of invading tourists in this area this year are apparently working on the theory that good will and repeat orders from their friendly visitants pay greater profits that an overcharge in the first place.

To date not a single complaint regarding overcharging has been registered by any of the tourists at the local Chamber of Commerce, it was stated today by Manager J. O. Hertly. Other years, it was pointed out, complaints of this nature were fairly common.

"About the only complaints we have had regarding facilities in this city was the overcharge for brief rest periods at the city council. However, as one city council has now taken this charge off, and it appears that everyone is satisfied and that tourists are leaving the city with a good impression of local hospitality," declared Mr. Hertly.

POETRY

SUMMER HEAT

A fiery fluvial dragon
Has loosed its scorching flame
Has weighted down the wind
And sated that country's breath;
Has loaded them afresh
With brands from Hades own furnace.

Where to those mountain breezes!
Did ever I acclaim them all too cool?
Oh! wander little breeze to me
And I will welcome you
As never was welcome given to you before.

The cattle pant!
Their red tongues give off
A rancid breath: And
In the dried up garden beds
The flowers bow their heads
To Heaven for the harbingers of rain.

George Bernard Shaw continues to make sober thrusts at modern society and judging by his latest volume of plays "The Simpleton, The Six, and The Millionairess", Bach play has the Shavian preface and there is no escape on the idea expressed in the play. "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles" which shows an attempt to create and rulers both political and domestic. "The law is equal before all of us; but we are not all equal before the law." The six of Calais is as the preface explains "a play with no moral whatever" other than the surprising picture of a community of heroes in a foreign land. The play expresses the "unpatented theory" that even man of destiny may be "bespoked". Thus Shaw's theory of the super man is yet or as C. G. Poore of the New York Times words it "He has made many people pay box-office prices to hear what he thinks/ however he has read the world's news in his morning paper than any other man alive."

The story of Jean, Baron de Batz in "The Six" should be a relief from terror during the French Revolution. The biography of this young royalist who organized and led the great plot against Robespierre and his colleagues, is told by Meade Minnigerode in "Marie Antoinette's Henchman". The story of Jean Batz, called an adventurer by his enemies, but by his adherents a hero by the Royalists, has for its setting such varied places as the brilliant salons of Versailles and Paris, the dark stock exchanges and banks and the obscure streets and secret hiding places of the plotters. He carried on many wrecked failures, culminating in a fearful triumph, told in the easy, interesting style of Meade Minnigerode.

explanation of the Townsend Plan by one of Dr. Townsend's followers is given by Morgan J. Dorsi in his book "Age Before Booty." Published by Auxiliary Press of Fore. Canadian readers will be interested in studying the aims of the Third Party in the campaign. Mr. Townsend is the founder of the Townsend Plan presents, also, a picture of economic conditions in contemporary society.

Victor Robert Small, as a young doctor, served for six years in a State Hospital for the Insane in the South. The record of these years and of unusual cases encountered is told in his book "Forty Years Among the Insane". Told in an informal style, the book contains chapters on various types of insanity and general observations on the subject of institution. The London Times says of it "This book is provocative of thought, of sympathy, and of curiosity, rather than of depression."

"OVALTINE" SUCCESSFUL AT THE ROYAL SHOW

At the Royal Show in Bristol, England, recently, the "Ovaltine" Farmer Boy method combined to smash-able record of success by gaining 9 awards.

Entries from the "Ovaltine" Dairy Farm have already gained 31 awards at the principal shows in England this season and a total of 240 awards in all shows.

These fine achievements are indications of the exceptional efficiency maintained at the "Ovaltine" Dairy Farm at King's Langley, England, which was established to set the highest standards of quality for the pure quantity of milk which together with eggs and fruit, is a vital extract, is used in the manufacture of "Ovaltine"—the well-known food beverage.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE REGENT
"San Francisco"

"San Francisco" the feature attraction at the Belle today, Monday and Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, is now in its third consecutive week at Loew's Theatre, Toronto, and promises to become one of the most talked-about pictures of the year.

First, it teams three of the most popular screen stars for the first time . . . Clarke Gable, Jeanette MacDonald and Spencer Tracy. It is a picture brimming with romance, love, comedy, beautiful music and thrilling drama.

The picture takes us into the pleasure-mad excitement of old San Francisco when it was a byword around the world. It takes us into aristocratic Nob Hill, into the old Tivoli Opera House, the historic Palace Hotel and other landmarks of old San Francisco . . . and it takes us through the disaster that levelled a beautiful city to the ground thirty years ago, in a scene of the most realistic disaster scenes ever filmed.

Clarke Gable offers one of his greatest characterizations as Blackie Norton, Jeanette MacDonald is superb as the country girl who gets her start in grand opera in San Francisco . . . and it takes us through the disaster that levelled a beautiful city to the ground thirty years ago, in a scene of the most realistic disaster scenes ever filmed.

Spencer Tracy scores in an unusual role as a kindly priest who chooses the wicked street for his evangelistic work. Jack Holt, supporting cast are Jack Holt, Leon Ames, Ralph Ted Healy, Shirley Ross, Margaret Irving, Harold Huber and Al Shean.

Needless to say the direction of that ace megaphoner, W. S. Van Dyke, director of "Naughty Marietta" and "The Thin Man", adds not a high standard for productions values, "San Francisco" guarantees entertainment that will please all the family. It is a picture not to be missed! The Regent starts daily at 2.30, 7.30 and 9.30 p.m.

"Elmer Elephant" a new, clever and very funny Walt Disney Silly Symphony in beautiful technicolor, and the latest World News, complete a program of splendid screen entertainment. Owing to the length of the program performances will start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.10 p.m.

"Sky Devils" Coming!

A special preview presentation of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" co-starring Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur will be presented at the Belle Sunday, August 2nd at 12.00. All Canada is cheering Mr. Deeds, applauding it . . . agitating it . . . the best picture of the year! The amusing saloon Deeds or Mister Deeds will make you howl with joy. Make a note of it Sunday, August 2nd at 12.00.

EXCOMMUNICATED

A recent photo of James Bunting, of Chichester, Eng., who is planning an appeal against the recent sentence of excommunicated pronounced on him by the Church of England. Bunting, a movie scenarist, was accused of failing to "honor thy father and thy mother." He was charged that he failed to provide support for his parents whose bodies were found in a gas-filled room of their home. Bunting is the first person to be excommunicated by the church in 100 years.

AT THE CAPITOL
"Paint Lady"

"Paint Lady," a film combining murder mystery, music and romance, finds Ruth Donnelly and Edmund Lowe starring at the Capitol, this Monday and Tuesday.

Ruth Donnelly plays the part of Ruth Donnelly, Guy Bates Post, Samuel Hinds, Edgar Kennedy and Irene Franklin, the former vaudeville headliner.

As Marian Stuart, alias Marie Dalmaine, Miss Hill gives an unusually fine performance in the role of an opera star whose admirers are particularly numerous. First it is a man in Texas who is found dead with her photograph on his person. Then it is Mowbray who is mysteriously stabbed in the back. This murder is followed by the death of Norman Foster, Walter Pidgeon's brother.

The trick resorted to to capture the murderer throws Miss Hill and Pidgeon together in such that they fall in love and the realization of the romance is followed by an attempt on Pidgeon's life. The subsequent climax brings the drama to an exceedingly thrilling conclusion.

Miss Hill's performance as the luckless opera star, and Walter Pidgeon's handling of the romantic lead, are two high spots. The star's voice is at its best in the film and compares favorably with her fine singing in "All The King's Horses."

Mowbray as Mayerline whose deft comedy touches give his acting an individuality all its own, and Norman Foster, as Pidgeon's younger brother, are excellent. Ruth Donnelly and Edmund Lowe are a scrappily married pair who travel with the star on her Brazilian tour.

Another beautiful piece of Genuine Hostess Overware is given free to the ladies, matinee and evening on Monday and Tuesday.

Ends Tuesday

A double feature show that combines comedy, thrills, murders and a touch of the Old West. John Wayne in "The Lonely Trail" and Lyle Talbot and Marguerite Churchill in "Arizona By An Aristocrat." Last complete show at 9.10. Two features after 9.10.

Keen bowlers from Kingston, Madoc, Stirling, Campbellford and Belleville, met in competition in the annual district play-downs of the Ontario Provincial Bowling Association held at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club yesterday. The two tournaments included singles doubles and rinks, for the Challenge Shields of the 15th District of the Provincial Association, the winners in each group qualifying for the provincial lawn bowling finals.

What competition was experienced lacked in quantity, only a few entries being received, but the quality up in the high quality of bowling that marked the entire tournament. Only Kingston and Belleville rinks represented in the singles tournament, that resulted in Alex Topping of Kingston defeating John Shaw of Belleville after 21 ends by the score of 23 to 11.

To the Stirling Lawn Bowling Club went the major honors in the district No. 15 qualification tournament however, as the Stirling rink won both the doubles and the rinks. In a hectic battle that lasted well into the night the Stirling trio, Whitty and Solmes defeated the Campbellford pair of Wright and Meyers in the finals by the score of 21 to 15. The Campbellford pair pulled up even to knot the count 13 all at the end of the 18th, and and the score was tied 15 all as the teams opened for the 20th end. In the last two ends, however, Dick Whitty showed some expert bowling and coaxed his mates Duke Solmes won the day's honors. Only three rinks were entered for competition, Belleville, Campbellford and Stirling, the latter drawing a bye into the finals. The rink with quartette easily disposed of their Campbellford rivals in the first round, to win by the score of 26 to 11, but bowed to the winning Stirling team in the final round by the score of 24 to 18 in a hard-fought match. TORONTO LEAFS TROUNCE BEARS IN DOUBLE BILL

Crowding Montreal Royals For Fifth Spot in Standing

WINGS BEATEN TWICE

Last Place Chiefs Make up Some Ground by Wins

The Toronto Maple Leafs are finding the comeback road a long and hard one this season, but no one can say they are not trying their best to overcome difficulties. Early in the season the Leafs climbed as high as third place, then they tumbled, touching seventh a couple of times and finally settled in sixth place in the standing, apparently to stay.

But since July 4 Toronto has played a consistently winning ball-team game and losing only eight, and the Leafs are probably wishing it was a split season as they could do no worse than second. The Leafs, Hap and Miller's home run with Leroy Herrmann chested the enemy.

The 7-to-1 victory enabled the Leafs to register a big gain on the fifth-place Montreal Royals, who took a 6-3 drubbing from Baltimore's Orioles. Jake Weds, whose recent mound performances have not matched his earlier feats, was hammered out by the Orioles that beat in the fifth. Smoky Joe Martin belted his second homer. The Royals got their first blows off Harry Matuzak but two successful evens by Hal King and Bob Seeds.

Meanwhile the last-place Syracuse Chiefs, whose recent feats have been even more startling than Toronto's record, bowed over the league-leading Rochester Red Wings in both games of a bargain bill, 6-4 and 7-6. Bob Olkon's homer with two on in the fifth won the opener while a ninth-inning rally in the nightcap, that of a 14-hit attack on three pitchers, sealed the second game.

The Buffalo-Albany clash was rained out.

Officials Against Lifting the Ban on Eleanor Holm Jarrett

Berlin, July 25 (AP)—What slight chances remained that Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett would be allowed to enter other chance with the United States Olympic team were blasted today when Avery Brundage, Chicago, chairman of the American Olympic committee, said that the executive board of the committee disclosed a "strong" opposition to sentiment favoring lifting the ban upon the party-loving backstroke champion.

"I have not found a single committeeman who believes we should reverse the decision made by one of the most thorough committees of the Olympic," As a matter of fact several of the members communicated to me their views before they made the trip, going so far as to let Mrs. Jarrett accompany the team to Berlin."

Nevertheless Brundage called an early morning visit to the Olympic stadium to inspect the American quarters for the first time and presumably, to learn what, if any, further sensation followed the posting of a petition signed by more than 200 officials urging Mrs. Jarrett's reinstatement.

Asked about the circumstances of Mrs. Jarrett's ouste not being withdrawn from the entry list in accordance with the rule governing her from the team, Brundage explained that the executive board of United States final swimming session without removing the name of the backstroke queen undoubtedly was a result of the rush of activities during the business of getting organized at the Olympic village headquarters.

Douglas "Ted" McDonald, who is residing in Belleville and employed by the Quinte Service Oil Company, recently received a letter of communication from one of the top boxing clubs in England. "Ted" was playing a splendid brand of hockey for the Brockville Maguiresses last winter and doubtless attracted some little attention. In the communication mentioned the Wembley Arena scribe desired information relative to his previous hockey experience, which if found satisfactory will doubtless see McDonald in the fistic "Big Leagues" shortly. "Will you accept an offer to go to England and play hockey?" we asked Red. "Well naturally I would like to go, but I'm not going to jeopardize my amateur standing. If I get the offer officially and can get permission from the A.A.U. of C. then it's me for the "old sod". Then again they are playing hockey over there now and I might be able to catch on with some of those ball clubs, when the hockey season is over," added McDonald.

George Pepper and the other members of the Belleville motorcycle club are going right ahead with their plans for the big International motorcycle meet which will be held in Belleville on Labor Day. "We are receiving entries from almost all parts of the Province and property of the United States are also expected, however, the big event will be the leading Rochester Red Wings in both games of a bargain bill, 6-4 and 7-6. Coming Series to Make or Break Pennant Chances of 'Murderers Row' of Yankees

Meet White Sox, Indians And Detroit Tigers in Order

CLEVELAND WINS

Red Sox in Tie For Fourth Place With Tigers

It's do or die for "murderers' row" in the next nine days.

Starting today against the red-hot White Sox and winding up with the also sizzling Indians, the New York Yankees either make or break their pennant hopes.

With their lead cut to 7½ games through the Indians' tremendous 23-game streak, the 16-4 win over the Athletics yesterday, the Yankees meet the Sox in a three-game series, take on the always troublesome Tigers, and then come up against the clubbing Clevelanders.

An even break or better in those nine games will give them a comfortable working margin and a breathing spell until they can find of their current hitting let-down. But worse than such a break and it's going to be different. For once Gehrig and company is cut down to the size of the rest of the league, it will be anybody's race.

The Yankees enjoyed a holiday yesterday along with the White Sox, while rain gave every club in the National League a day off.

While the Indians were tightening up their grip on the American League League second place, Boston Red Sox pulled a 7-4 win from the Tigers, in ten innings with Pinky Pinx belting his 27th homer. The Senators came from way back to trounce the Browns 10-4, behind Monte Weaver's four-hit pitching.

The Red Sox won boosted them into a tie for fourth with the Tigers and the Chicago Sox moved into third place without raising a bat.

Tokyo, July 25 (AP)—After terrorizing scores of the small congested wards of Tokyo, an escaped black panther was recaptured today. The animal, which had forced its way through the roof of its cage in the night, finally located in a street manhole. It was forced out by smoke into another cage with its companion.

ERRORLESS BALL HELPS WIN GAME FOR FOXBORO NINE

Defeat Melrose 2-0 For Losing Team's 13th Straight Loss

CANNIFTON BEATEN

League Leading Latta Squad Too Much For "Imports"

Melrose, July 25.—Playing errorless ball behind the two-hit hurling of Ken Ashley, the Foxboro aces in the South Hastings League here Friday night, nine their thirteenth consecutive set-back of the current season when they outscored the homesters 2-0.

Ashley, in turning Melrose down here Friday night allowed only two safe singles and a pass but fanned four and walked but another pair to issue. Melrose failed to get within scoring distance of the Foxboro to five safeties, no two coming in the same frame. Foxboro hammered five but a walk and an error paved the way for the two runs that were chalked up against him.

Blakely and Ashley were the only batters for the winners who got to second. Ken Ashley batting for the former getting a double and Ashley getting two singles. Wall and Ashley were forced to get safeties. Robinson and R. Kinnaird ignited a rally in the eighth after Ashley had connected for a single up the middle. Robinson was nabbed in the first when Bailey walked and moved on Ashley's single. They were also nabbed at the plate when Ashley was safe on a Melrose error, Blakely scoring from first on the play.

Foxboro—Bailey, Ashley, R. Kinnaird, Robinson, Gray, Wall, Blakely, Ketchenson, Gray.

Melrose—Bowles, Bernard, Barfield, Smith, D. Kinnaird, Robinson, Riggs, McLaren and R. Kinnaird.

Latta 5, Canniffon 3.

The league leaders took the Canniffon "imports" into camp for the third consecutive time on a Latta ball night when Carl Gray won the call to the mound for the winners, three errors behind Canniffon batsmen with an amazing degree of regularity and although at times was in trouble up to his shoulders, bore down in the pinches.

In the matter of strikeouts Gray was ahead of his rival mound opponent, Hamilton, as nine of the Canniffon sluggers back to the bench via the strikeout route. Hamilton although he mitigated his efforts by issuing three walks, while Gray issued only one.

Both hurlers were nicked for six hits apiece, the majority of the losers' being of the extra base variety as Latta pounded out two doubles and pounded out doubles with Wilkins and Hamilton, while Canniffon batsmen connected for exactly one-half his team's hits when he got a double and single.

The Canniffon players let their pitcher down in the second when they committed errors that really paved the way for Latta's two counter run, one in the first and another in the third. Both teams tickled the ivory with a double apiece, Wilkins supplying the fielding feature of the game when he made a fine one-hand catch of Hall's line drive over short. Latta counted in the first when Hall coupled two errors and a hit to score a run, getting another in the third when Gray hit safely to right and a passed ball and went three bases on a pop fly to short, being singled, stole second and scored on Hamilton's single over the first baseline infield. In the fifth Latta scored two more on a double and single sandwiched in a fielder's error and an infield out.

Canniffon failed to hit in the sixth and averted a shutout when Hamilton was safe on Fleming' Hall's error being followed by a double, a triple and another double by Hamilton who was pinch-hitting for Doherty, driving in a total of three runs for the losers. Fleming Gray plenty to worry about.

Latta—Collins, Gray, Empringham, Jarrell, Mease, Blaker, Simpson, Wilkins and Doherty.

Latta—Hamilton, Marsh, Simpson, Parks, Hall, Young, Nutting and Casey.

Umpires — "Red" Townsend and Garrison.

NAPANEE BATTLES KINGSTON TO TIE

Pointer Allows Only Two Hits And Williams Three

Kingston, July 25.—(CP)—Kingston and Napanee battled through a 10-inning game of a Central Ontario Baseball League senior game here Friday night without either team getting a run across the plate. The game was called in the eleventh inning. The sun was shining and continued so for some time after the ball game had been called, but Umpire Lourks ruled the game was over, stating it was getting hard to see.

It was one of the best pitcher's battles one would wish to see and Jack Williams, hurler for Kingston, and Pointer for Napanee, turned in magnificent performances. The two veterans found it hard the batters eating out of their hands. Williams allowed only three hits, two of which were doubles, and Pointer allowed but two, both doubles. Pointer pested Williams in strike-outs, having nine to Williams' six. Following the game Napanee beat Kingston 4-0 and won the championship in the series.

At six forty-five supper was served to about a hundred and fifty guests at the picnic table by the ladies of Morris Hill Women's Institute. Following the dinner Mr. F. T. Rulin, President of the League, called the meeting to order and extended a hearty welcome to all and the gratitude of the executive committee for the support given them. A brief program of musical numbers by an instrumental trio from Belleville was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. W. J. Rose of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, was the guest speaker and delivered a most interesting address. The lucky ticket holder was Mr. J. M. Dickson of Belleville, and

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

In the industrial list, such issues as Brazilian Traction, Montreal Power, Shawinigan, etc., have been marking time during the recent bullish display. It would appear as if the last two-named stocks are under accumulation. Montreal Power meets with an excellent demand at 30¼ and at 31 considerable selling develops. Shawinigan, similarly, is well bought at 19 and fractionally over that figure a good amount of selling occurs. Both of these securities are well regarded in the Street and some quarters feel that in time they will participate in the general market strength, particularly when it is considered that the output for the utility industry has improved materially in the past year.

In the case of Shawinigan, the company is earning about twice dividend requirements of 80 cents per annum. The plant is subsidiary is expecting excellent business and with the newsprint industry improving by leaps and bounds, additional income from that source can be looked for. Over the next few years, Shawinigan's dividend should be steadily increased.

It is expected that Gypsum Line & Alabastine will, this year, earn sufficient to fully cover fixed charges for the first time since 1931, and explains the current strength in the common shares. A continuation of substantial residential construction would be quickly reflected in this company's earnings.

visions occurred usually when they were route-marching across the ridge at Mont Noir or Mont Des Cats whose Trappist Monks still remember the Canadian soldiers. Annually from the Armistice Day a wreath from this monastery is deposited on the Cenotaph in Ottawa.

From the slopes of Mont Kemmel, where the Canadians held watch and ward for many months, Lille could be seen 18 miles away, on the plain.

Radiating from Lille the pilgrims today were able to re-visit in leisurely fashion many of the towns and villages which loomed large in their scheme of things during the days when they fought in and around the Ypres salient. Armentieres — Neuve Eglise — Dranouitre Bailleul — Locre — Reninghelst — Westoutre Ouderdom — Poperinghe — Dickebusch — all had their place in the Canadian Gazetteer.

FURNACE STOLEN MAN IS ARRESTED

Police Find Same After an Extensive Investigation

Everton Woodcock, who gave his address as 238 Coleman St., was arrested today on a charge of the theft of a furnace from the property of Thos. Holland, Pinnacle Street plumber. Woodcock was remanded in custody until Monday.

Early today Mr. Holland reported the theft of a second-hand furnace to the police, stating he had reconditioned the furnace and was to have installed it locally today. The furnace was left intact in a shed at the rear of Mr. Holland's plumbing business last night, but was missing early this morning.

Plainclothes Constable Laird opened an investigation this morning that resulted in parts of the furnace, worn of the furnace being found on the lot of a local second-hand dealer. Subsequent investigations culminated in the arrest of Woodcock, when a description of the man who sold the furnace was supplied by the second-hand dealer. Woodcock is reported to have had an accomplice and the police are endeavoring to locate the second party involved.

The furnace was removed from Mr. Holland's storehouse and broken into scrap iron before being offered for sale, police stated.

While investigating the theft of Mr. Holland's furnace, however, P. C. Evans apprehended three teenaged lads, who were endeavouring to sell scrap iron, that had been taken from a furnace, in another second-hand dealer. These lads considered they found the scrap iron they were trying to dispose of in a vacant lot in the vicinity of the foolbridge. Their stories will be thoroughly checked, although Chief Kidd was inclined to believe the stories related by the boys, he stated.

Fish Catches Eclipse Those of Past Seasons

Picton Reward county fishermen are enjoying real sport this year with "muskie"(?) catches eclipsing those of former years by a large margin.

An eighteen pound beauty was landed last week by Pat McManus of Picton with Harold Thompson of Cherry Valley and Roy Young of East Lake landing two fine specimens weighing nine and eleven pounds respectively.

Then of course there are the ones that got away. Young hooked what was claimed to be the biggest catch of the season only to lose it after a thrilling two-hour struggle.

Record catches of bass and pickerel are being made by the neighboring county fishermen and tourists, with the record for the biggest fish hooked being held by Mrs. Isabel Martin a Toronto fishing enthusiast.

GRASS FIRE HAZARD ENDED BY RAIN

The record slight downfall of rain while bringing at least partial respite to parched farmlands, has been mainly instrumental in the lack of grass fires during the past day or so, according to an official of the Fire Department.

Tinder-like grass growth, which have been a constant menace in city and district property the past few weeks, was dampened by the rain, removing temporarily, at least, the dangerous fire hazards.

"This, however, is only temporary" said the official. "The warm sunshine will soon bring the grass back to its former dry state, and the general public is warned to exercise the same care in the prevention of fires as before the rain."

FROM EVERY CORNER OF THE WORLD

to the daily newspaper come flashing the engrossing incidents that are at this very moment making today's history. The whole atmosphere of the daily newspaper is comprehensive action—dealing with things of the moment that have just happened, or are about to happen.

When white paper leaves the printing presses in the daily newspaper office, it is no longer some inert material, but an active powerful force reaching the thousands who thirst for its contents.

Practically every Canadian family reads a daily newspaper.

It is an essential part of daily life and without it all would feel a distinct loss—nothing can take its place.

On the newspaper's pages also are advertisements placed there by thoughtful, energetic and far-seeing merchants and producers. The best traders in Canada—the firms which grow in strength and prestige year after year—know that the daily newspaper is as necessary to them as their raw material. When the fight is hardest—they have often proved this—it pays to strengthen their newspaper lists.

Attempts to Cross Atlantic in Motorboat

A daring and adventuresome French artist-yachtsman, Martin-Marie set out from New York on July 23 in a 40-foot motorboat in an attempt to cross the Atlantic to France in his 12-ton craft in 30 days. This is not the first time he has crossed the Atlantic alone. In 1933 he made the crossing in a small sailing boat in 68 days over a 6,000 mile course. His boat, the Arielle, is capable of a top speed of nine knots, and is equipped with a mechanical helmsman which Martin-Marie expects will prove of great assistance while he is asleep.

More Money

Charles Grant

"We're giving a sort of garden party for charity," Laura Ingram explained tactfully—as if Marian didn't know all about it, hadn't known for weeks and begged, with real hope, to receive an invitation.

"We're having all sorts of lovely outdoor theatricals, fortune telling, treasure hunting and a mystery trip-a-dance thing. You know. It occurred to me you might care to come and call afterward."

"Oh, Mrs. Ingram, I would love it!" Marian gasped. "What must I wear?"

"Any little fantastic costume you may have—or just a pretty summer frock. You'll have a tray, of course, with ribbons over your shoulders—and mind you keep your eyes peeled for your cigarettes!"

She was on the telephone, of course, with a gracious nod of farewell.

"I've just asked that little Mrs. Alspaugh to sell cigarettes for us tomorrow. She's a pretty, sly-type to wheedle men. I shouldn't be surprised if she takes in more money than Rose and Mabel together. You're looking very abstracted, Jasper. I've forgotten that I told you I should call for you at four, that you positively promised to put in an appearance with me at Ruth Bartlett's to meet that Spanish fellacia of hers!"

"Did I say I'd do that?" Ingram got to his feet reluctantly, blinking away thoughts of business. "If I did I suppose I'll have to make good. But I feel right now as if I could worry along contentedly for the rest of my life. If I'd never made the acquaintance of a Spanish fellacia!"

x x x

Jasper Ingram used a swift motor yacht for his daily trip from Long Island to the city, but his wife disliked boats and insisted upon using her car. Now he grumbled at the slowness of the procession uptown and over the Queensborough bridge.

She did not reply, being occupied with a final review of her plans for the entertainment. Taking her social activities seriously, Laura Ingram was a successful hostess. To advance her position if society so bid her a career and an art. Her husband had helped her by becoming so rich that—this being American—he had made her hereditary position unimportant. When he married her, she was a well-bred, middle class girl, living with her father, who had a professorship in a small college.

To the professor's discontented daughter Jasper Ingram represented opportunity. Ingram she was the coolly adequate instrument of a purpose he had at heart.

When he decided to marry, he proposed to Laura Seward for reasons assessed to him a number of good reasons. She was handsome and apparently healthy, she had a scholarly background, and he had vaguely somewhere that a child derives its intellectual equipment mainly from its mother. Great men, he had heard, have, as a rule, remarkable mothers and mediocre sons.

Marriage opened his eyes to the fact that Laura's health was not altogether sound and that his lovability and sweetness and disposition she had shown during courtship masked a bloodthirst that was not entirely angelic. He had naively hoped for her love of children and in joyfully given her high marks on her conscience, but with the birth of Seward she seemed to have no other child.

Seward, who was an only child, had, surprisingly enough, he was a charming boy. He had passed through school and college and now shared nearly run after by half the girls on Long Island.

Ingram, somehow, had never been able to get close to his son. As Seward grew older and heard certain rumors about his father and other women, the gulf between the two widened—and the boy became a violent partisan of his mother. In it was he relieved to parade his cynicism and disillusionment in which she alone retained his reverence.

Laura Ingram's life was eminently satisfactory to her. If her husband gave her little of his confidence or his company, he gave her all the forms of respect, unlimited money and reasonable compliance with her wishes that required his assistance. Social ambition, supplying her with an occupation, gave her something to think about and work for.

While Ingram mused silently of mergers and stock manipulations, she thought now and then about the second cousin to ex-King Alfonso, whom a rival hostess, widow of a former Ambassador to Spain, was entertaining. Laura had tried to secure this lady for tomorrow, but Ruth Bartlett was whirling her arms to Bar Harbor. After all, however, she reflected, the princess was only a plump, middle-aged woman with a moustache, heavy acclaim and physically; let Ruth keep her, although, of course, it is considered awfully well to have an Infanta staying with you.

It developed when the Ingrams had joined the party on the Bartlett terrace, that only a few of the more intimate members of Doña Josepha's entourage were going with her to Maine. The Marques d'Allmas y Silva, certainly the most attractive member of her party, was to remain at lonse ends in New York.

"But then, I am enchanted with your New York," he told Mrs. Ingram, "your so beautiful women and so many cars, your sky-scrapers such as we have not in Spain. What is Bar Harbor but another dan debasement and leads in an old story."

"You don't find it frightfully hot in town?" asked Mrs. Ingram.

"Heat does not incommode me, Senora—no more than society. After the revolution we went first to England. I—I still carry the chill of that England in my bones!"

He had a charming laugh that showed a flash of white teeth in his dark olive face and showed teeth, startlingly white in contrast to his general swarthiness.

"Well, you come to us tomorrow, Marques!" Laura begged. "We will promise not to freeze you, and you might be amused."

"I shall be most happy," he assured her, and gazed soulfully into her eyes as he kissed her hand in parting.

CHAPTER IV.

Turning into their own drive, Jasper and Laura saw their son waiting across the lawn accompanied by a girl whom Laura identified as "the little acting person named Martin, or something like that."

"He seems interested," Ingram said.

The way Seward walked, the way he tilted his face to the girl, it would not have been glamour, had he worn a collar and chain, that he was Aline Martin's captive.

"I do hope everything will go off well," Aline was saying. "It will mean so much to me if I can have a real success."

"Of course you'll be a success. I thought you were perfectly great when you rehearsed last night. It's a fine play, and I think the whole thing is going to be a knockout. I know it is!"

"It's sweet of you to be so encouraging," Aline murmured. "The way it's helped a lot to see the arrangements for the party and myself but having you the only member of the family at home, was a bit of luck for me. It's a wonderful spot for an outdoor performance, a sort of natural amphitheatre, isn't it?"

"I don't know about the natural part of it. I believe this whole place has been landscaped within an inch of its life. I was awfully glad to show you around, Miss Martin. I wish there was something else I could do, really. You'll let me know if there is, won't you?"

She nodded her lovely head. She was almost as pretty as she appeared on Seward's dazzled eyes. Beyond the harmony of delicate, well modeled features and appealing curves, beyond the charm of youthful coloring heightened to perfection by the skilful use of make-up, was the almost startling beauty of her eyes—blue as the depth of Arctic water and the low sun shining through it.

"You can clap, tomorrow," she told him. Their progress, slow as Seward had tried to make it, had brought them to her waiting car. "I shall rely on you to help my personal claque. You know how it's done, don't you? Wait till the rest of the audience is acting up a bit and then come in strong—you can nearly always start them off by all over again!"

"I sure will." Seward promised. "But it won't be necessary. You'll never run without any help from me!"

Aline gave the handsome boy her best smile as she slid behind the wheel of her roadster. He was Jasper Ingram's son and therefore a conquest of some importance. Perhaps Mr. Martin was on the make. Beneath the softness and grace of her entrance, she was as ruthlessly ambitious as Ingram himself. Whoever served her purposes was made use of, whoever was not useful, she discarded.

Her temperament made her honestly nervous about her success in the chief clou of a society vaudeville. A clever young actress, not long a professional, she was used to the exaggerated acclaim of her friends—and shrewd enough to discount their enthusiasm. Yet, if even half of what they said was true, there ought to be a future for her.

He appeared that Mrs. Ingram's patronage, gave her, by far, the best opportunity to parade her talent she had ever had, for the Ingrams were not merely rich but also decidedly influential in professional circles. Everyone knew that Jasper Ingram was interested in music and the theatre. He contributed largely to operatic and non-commercial theatre endowments. Who knew but she might interest him? If she played well, anything might happen.

Marian Alspaugh had good cards and good partners that same afternoon. Her winnings, of course, she had to leave behind her for charity, but she still had her hundred dollars and she would tell Homer she had been cleaned out.

She drove home in high spirits, her self-esteem restored by the evening's success. Her car, taking her past the long eight-foot wall of the Ingram estate, Orangefields, with its wrought-iron gates she took her eyes from the road; drove slowly and explored all there was to be seen of green velvet lawn, rhododendrons bordering the drive, rose-trellises and planned tree-groupings. A flash of steel like a gun's glimpse of an artificial lake, and then a glare—of the distant house. Marian had never been inside those gates, but soon she would know the secret beauties of those guarded grounds!

On the other side of the village, the unfashionable side, lived the Alspaughs. Marian had known no better when she urged Homer to buy that house. She had supposed that, since the town was growing, it would be somebody in this town if you'd give me a chance."

But tonight as she drove the car into the garage she was almost cheerful. Even if she did live on the wrong side of the village, she wouldn't be easy for the Country Club crowd to ignore her after the next bet at Mrs. Jasper R. Ingram's!

She went into the pink house and into the living-room where Homer reclined in one of the over-stuffed chairs, listening to the radio. All the furniture in the room was dressed in summer covers of flowered cretonne. On a refectory table, back of the davenport, were scattered papers and magazines dealing with talking picture. Copies of Vogue and Harper's Bazaar added an intellectual note. Other furniture included occasional tables and chairs, two Bridge lamps and a bowl of flowers—that needed to be changed. The room was exactly like a million other rooms in American homes, except for a couple of bright jacketed novels from a rental library, there was not a book in evidence, nor books, barring the cook-book in the kitchen, was there another in the house.

But suddenly there came a sound of ripping wood, and the giant tree crashed earthward. Tarzan—

Then he leaped; but he was too late; a great branch struck him and pinned him tightly to the ground, where he lay now helpless and hopeless.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

When Gowando's village offered no hope of solving the mystery of the Talomed Death, Tarzan decided to venture to some distant place where he was not known, there to continue his investigations, for now the Killer-Thing was striking swiftly in many places.

As Tarzan travelled through the gloomy jungle, he was overtaken by a storm of extraordinary violence. Lightning flashed, thunder crashed, and the mighty forest trembled beneath the fury of wind. The ape-man, in his haste, sought welcome shelter beneath a tree.

There, to his surprise, he found his friend Nkima, the monkey, cowering from the storm. With a wild shriek of joy Nkima leaped into Tarzan's arms, for he was taking her past the long eight-foot wall of the Ingram estate, Orangefields, with its wrought-iron gates she took her eyes from the road; drove slowly and explored all there was to be seen of green velvet lawn, rhododendrons bordering the drive, rose-trellises and planned tree-groupings. Veteran Telegrapher Recalls Early Associations With R. R's

Colin C. Stewart, Moira St., West, Tells of Railway Traditions

YEARS AT KEY

A veteran telegrapher whose steady hand and still keen eye chatter-ing messages in Morse over the wires", with the best of them, is Colin C. Stewart, well known resident of 136 Moira Street west of this city and for many years one of the best-known telegraphers of the old Grand Trunk Railway, and later the Canadian National Railways, as well as other well-established modern services of railroading in this country in the early days aerobatics by the present celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the first railway in Canada.

Railroading has come naturally to Mr. Stewart. Born in St. John's, Quebec, where the first run in Canada's railway history was started over one hundred years ago, Mr. Stewart first saw light of day in a house that was situated right beside the country's first railway yard bed. As a child he recalls that it had been abandoned for many years, but the rails and ties remained. Built in those days of wood, they were laid the same as the heavy, steel ones of the present day. In the early days they consisted simply of flat strips of iron mounted upon wooden stringers. With the coming of the puffing, woodburning locomotive were necessarily heavily flanged, for the greater stability of the tracks, but even with this precaution, derailments were frequent. Speed, however, not being considered a most essential factor of either passengers or train crews serious accidents, or loss of life were rare.

Stories of Long Ago

Stories of railroading a century ago have been handed down in the family from father to son, and he recalls the stories told by his grandfather of the description of the first railway train and the trials of the "Dorchester" — one of the first locomotives which filled the residents of the section with wonder and awe at its accompanying sounds. First passenger service was a slow process made slower by the lack of proper signal devices and the necessity of stopping frequently for fuelling and servicing wood-burning units.

During his many years as telegrapher, a vocation which he took up as soon as he was old enough to fill and hold a position, Mr. Stewart has witnessed many changes in the system, and the gradual revolution of trains and locomotives past the wood stage and the coal stage to the present day of super engines and average hundred car trains. In all phases, the bright service remembrances changes have taken place during the past decade.

Born at St. John's, Quebec, on "Ile Jesus", Mr. Stewart left there when he had my first position, they studied a string of one cars of fruit, sometimes by the pound. This was considered the limit in the old days. Expressions of the time generally reflected that the peak of transportation had been reached, but the modern gave them bigger weights. Gradually the number of cars grew and in the early '70's to one hundred cars or so is common. Old timers would shake their heads and wonder at the loads hauled today.

"Why, this morning," said one, "I saw from twenty-five to forty-five cars, and now by one manifest I am charged with. We have kept up with the growth of the trains by better roads, by stronger bridges. Fifty wooden bridges which used to replace the old ones, have been passed over them, have been replaced by solid iron and steel structures which will carry the heaviest loads. Whether the passing has been necessary or not remains to be seen, but it does appear as if the ultimate in the way of speed has been reached with the construction of the new "40's". Only time will tell whether or as long as a whole train of the early days", declares Mr. Stewart.

Resident of Belleville for the past many years, Mr. Stewart is a past member of the Board of Education for several years, several motions and ideas advanced by him while acting in that capacity are now in practical use. Even yet he keenly interested in matters connected with telegraphy, he was chief operator of a suggestion that this study be incorporated in the classes of local collegiate institutes, the success which greeted his efforts as instructor of telegraphy at the Ontario Business College of the city for seven years.

TO-MORROW ON VIMY RIDGE

"This pilgrimage to Vimy is a fine episode in a burly-burly world. These pilgrims in their berets returning to that zone where for unwanted months and years they wore the halo of the hero—they are worthy all honour that will be paid them. Especially those who with the scars or disabilities of their service show new bravery of body and spirit in thus adventuring forth.

"We follow with interest the Vimy Pilgrims as they revisit battlefields and those less grim spots back of the lines and in dear old Blighty, where many friendships were born and bred. And to-morrow we shall stand in reverent thought before that proud, poignant monument to be unveiled by King Edward, he who, as the Boy Prince of the War years, was adored by his comrades in arms.

"Canada's War Memorial has been reared dramatically on the crest of the Ridge identified for all time with Canadian valour. It will be a shrine none the less sacred because the bodies of many of whom may never see it is the actuality of its heroic beauty.

"The Canadian Department Stores Limited offers respectful tribute to Vimy Pilgrims, particularly to Ex-Service Women . . . to the Women of the Silver Cross . . . to the Veterans from Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg and other Canadian towns who represent the 3327 employees of the Parent organization who served in the Great War—of whom 238 made the supreme sacrifice."

King Edward Praises Heroism And Devotion of Hallowed Dead

By CAPT. W. W. MURRAY, M.C. (Canadian Press Staff Writer)
Vimy Ridge, July 27 (CP Cable)—Canadian pilgrims—veterans and their kin—turned toward home today, or scattered on special journeys to fields of their own choosing, scenes of old battles, acres of fading memories.

King Edward was back in England, carried by air across the Channel to Affaire de Stain. President Lebrun was in Paris. The men and women of Northern France returned to their tasks in field and factory and mine.

Alone on the crest of Vimy Ridge two pylons breast the sky with heroic symmetry. Alone, except for the

His Majesty King Edward, who unveiled the Canadian War Memorial at Vimy on Sunday, is here sh own as the Prince of Wales in his war days in France.

FRANCE MOVED BY DEDICATION

Special Vimy Stamp is Eagerly Bought By French

Paris, July 27 (C.P. Cable) —The ceremony at Vimy Ridge yesterday when King Edward unveiled the Canadian memorial to its soldier dead made a deep impression in France.

All French post offices this morning opened sale of a special Vimy stamp that went so rapidly yesterday in a temporary little wooden post office at the Ridge that.

On the grand boulevards of Paris movie theatres feature pictures of the ceremonies and the Paris newspapers give first page prominence to stories told in moving words and appreciative sympathy.

Le Matin speaks of the appropriateness of the Vimy ceremony at lightening the links with "our British and Canadian friends . . . it recalls that to defend the pacific ideal it is necessary to be devoted to that ideal, to defend it even unto death."

Albert Petit writes in The Journal Des Debats: "Canadians died not for their own country which was not menaced but for the motherland of mankind (Patrie Humaine) that is, to say for the common country of all men of peace and good will. Vimy Ridge is one of those spiritual summits of a better world wherein the dead who lie there had the convictions they were preparing the magnificent advent."

In Comedia, Maurice Champel draws a lesson of Franco-British friendship definitely verified. "When clouds gather over Europe that is something which in a diplomatic sense is not lacking in comfort. Finally, and it is our great reward of this day, frontiers really exist no longer either by land or sea. Armament manufacturers may die of vexation; this century counts on them no more. It denies them. This century has other cults, other fires.

This century decided that for realization of 'Emancipement,' its ideal, there is only one motherland, the peace of the world."

Karpis and Fitzgerald Given Life Terms

St. Paul, July 27 (AP)—Alvin Karpis and Charles Fitzgerald, participants in the $100,000 William Hamm, Jr., kidnapping today were sentenced to life terms by Federal Judge Joyce. Both had pleaded guilty earlier.

Before sentence was imposed, Karpis asked by the court whether he had anything to say, declared:

"Jack Peifer is absolutely not guilty because I know the circumstances. He had nothing to do with the kidnapping."

Peifer, St. Paul night club operator charged as "fingerman" in the case, was convicted of a part in the abduction plot by a Federal court jury Saturday.

The King's Address At Vimy Memorial

Vimy Ridge, France, July 27 (CP Cable)—Text of the King's speech at the unveiling Sunday of the Canadian war memorial, the first part of which he delivered in French, follows:

"I am very grateful to you, Mr. President, for having made the journey to Vimy to join with us on the occasion of today's ceremony.

The presence of the President of the Republic will touch profoundly the Canadian people. For my part I congratulate myself that you have given me the opportunity to express from the bottom of my heart to the French nation my thanks and all gratitude of the people of Canada for the honor you have done to those whose sacrifice is inscribed on this monument and for the welcome you have accorded to their parents and friends who have crossed the ocean to be present at this inauguration.

His Majesty then continued in English:

In the capital city of Canada, at the heart of the Dominion, there is a memorial chamber set apart as a perpetual reminder of the service and losses of Canada in the Great War.

Recalls Ottawa Ceremonies

Nine years ago I had the privilege of dedicating an altar within it where will lie forever a book of remembrance recording the names of more than 60,000 Canadians who gave their lives for the cause which Canada made her own. Above the door is graven: "All's Well, for Over There Among His Peers a Happy Warrior Sleeps." These words reveal the inner meaning of what we do today. They tell us that, beautiful and impressive as is the Ottawa memorial, the Canadian people would not feel it was complete. It was "over there" that Canadian armies fought and died. It is "over there" that their final monument must stand.

Today, 3,000 miles from the shores of Canada, we are assembled around that monument—yet not on alien soil. One of our English poets, Rupert Brooke, whose ashes lie in an Aegean island, wrote that "there be lay what was "forever England"—that England for which he died. He spoke in parable; but here today that parable is living truth. The realization of it will I know bring comfort to many thousands of Canadian men and women. For this glorious monument unveiled by the hill of Vimy is now and for all time part of Canada. Though the mortal remains of Canada's sons lie far from home yet here where we now stand in sacred Artois their immortal memory is hallowed upon soil that is as surely Canada's here as any acre within her nine provinces.

By a gesture which all can understand, but soldiers especially, the laws of France have decreed that here Canada shall stand forever.

Sees Deeds of Valor Perpetuated

We raise this memorial to Canadian warriors It is an inspired expression in stone chiselled by a skilful Canadian hand of Canada's salute to her fallen sons. It marks the scene of feats of arms which history will long remember and Canada can never forget. And the ground it covers is the gift of France to Canada.

All the world over there are battlefields the names of which are written indelibly on the pages of our troubled human story. It is one of the considerations which time brings that the deeds of valor done on those battlefields long survive the quarrels which drove the opposing hosts to conflict. Vimy will be one such name. Already the scars of war have wellnigh vanished from the bare landscape beneath us. Around us here today there is peace and rebuilding of hope. And so also in dedicating this memorial to our fallen comrades our thoughts turn rather to the splendor of their sacrifice and to the consecration of our love for them than to the cannonade which beat upon this ridge a score of years ago.

In that spirit, in a spirit of thankfulness for their example, of reverence for their devotion and of love for their memory, I shall now veil this memorial to Canada's dead.

TRIBUTE PAID TO SACRIFICE AND SUFFERING

Manchester Times Refers to Memorial at Vimy Ridge

YOUTH OF CANADA

Lapointe's Reference to Justice And Truth Extolled

London, July 27 (CP)—Most British newspaper correspondents at the Vimy Ridge Canadian war memorial ceremony themselves are ex-service men or former war correspondents.

One Canadian speaker yesterday recited quite appropriately part of Kipling's famous "Recessional" hymn:

"The tumult and the shouting dies. The captains and the kings depart."

It remained for one of the correspondents of a classic blunder by the press censor in 1918. One correspondent, describing the finish of a big engagement, likewise inserted this couplet. The censor, evidently not recognizing even so memorably a poem deliberately deleted "and the kings."

The matter was raised indignantly in parliament where the Secretary of War, Sir Lamington Worthington-Evans, treated it with mock seriousness.

It was quite correct, he said, that there had been tumult and shouting and captains present but the censor deleted the other three words because there were also kings present, it would have been improper to say that they had been there.

This restored the good-humor of the House of Commons, although one member demanded to know if "this idiot" was still in the government service.

"The King of Canada"

In a streamer headline and throughout its description, the Daily Mail speaks of the King of Canada. It stresses that Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Canadian Minister of Justice, was the Minister in attendance.

The Manchester Guardian editorially specially commends Mr. Lapointe's sentences about humanity's great determination to seek sanctuary in justice and truth. The Guardian describes the memorial as less a commemoration of victory than a memorial to the suffering and sacrifice of the Canadian volunteers.

A. J. Cummings, writing in the News-Chronicle, says: "What struck me most in the Canadians at Vimy-evans was the lightness with which they carried themselves. . . I do not think I saw one unhappy or ill-tempered face or one man looking as if life had defeated him."

SEARCH IN SWAMP FOR WANTED MEN

Surprised, When Caught Carrying Out Safe From Wiarton Warehouse

Owen Sound, Ont., July 27 (CP) —Twenty officers under Provincial Police Inspector Jordan, of Kitchener, searched today through the swampland at Dornoch, 20 miles south of Owen Sound, for four men wanted for breaking and entering a Wiarton, Ont., beer warehouse a few hours earlier. At least one of the four was wounded.

The men were carrying the warehouse safe, containing about $2,000 to their car when police surprised them. They fled in a fusillade of shots fired by Provincial Constable W. A. Embleton but he believes one was wounded.

As they sped south from Wiarton to Dundy, Constable C. McClelland fired on the car. He hit the vehicle at least three times, he said, one bullet going through the windshield and another through a rear door.

Abandoning the auto, which had no license plate, the bandits then sought refuge in the swamp. When police found the car, there were bloodstains in the rear seat.

Occupants of a farmhouse about two miles away told police a stranger, believed to be one of the bandits, came to the house and asked if he could use their telephone to call Dundy. They told him they had no phone and thought he boarded a bus for Guelph.

GOV'T PLANES BOMB SAN ROQUE NEAR GIBRALTAR

Rush of Food to Madrid Upsets Rebel Hopes

FASCISTS WAIT

Power is Cut Off in Cities Held By Rebels

Gibraltar, July 27 (AP)—Spanish government planes today were reported to have bombed San Roque, (San Roque, in the province of Cadiz, is six miles northwest of Gibraltar and separated from the rock by a sandy isthmus of land. It is a popular summer resort for British families).

Madrid, July 27 (CP)—Hundreds of tons of food brought into Madrid today from the province upset rebel hopes as the government announced rebel forces have been routed from the Guadarrama Mountain region to the north.

Radio Station Struck.

At the same time loyal government plants bombarded rebel strongholds and ordered all electric power cut off in Seville, Cordova and Algeciras, bay cities held by the insurgents.

The radio station at Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, was reported wrecked by bombs dropped on it. The government also announced that fires had broken out at Melilla, after an aerial offensive by Loyalist aircraft.

With the Rebel Forces at Pamplona, Spain, July 27 (AP)—Besieging rebel troops waited today for an expected final attack to open an avenue into Madrid.

Unhurried and patient, the Fascist general staff guarded indefinite vacation periods to weary forces while asserting its columns many miles southward in the Guadarrama Mountain passes had won new victories from loyal defenders.

"Our positions around the capital are strong," one of the commanders declared. "We do not intend to rush in on Madrid like Paris fell.

"A food shortage will soon be felt. When the famine comes, it will be easy to force Madrid to capitulate."

The rebel Junta (provisional government) moved to solidify its political position in the Fascist-dominated region under the leadership of Gen. Miguel Cabanellas, white-bearded veteran.

City and District News

GRASS FIRE SOON UNDER CONTROL

Fire of an unknown origin threatened the district immediately north of the city, about 4 p.m. Sunday, in what is commonly known as Sheaffer's Bush, early this afternoon. The assistance of the local fire department was also asked. Fire Chief Ross and two of his subordinates taking the emergency fire truck and chemicals to the scene of the fire. With the assistance of neighbors, who had the fires well under control and overgrown, coupled with the department's chemicals, the blaze was finally subdued, but only after a number of trees had been scorched. The fire was fanned by a very stiff northwest wind, that drove the blaze into a dried-up swamp and blown into the pines on the east boundary. The fast and untiring efforts of the brigade materially assisted in the halting of the fire in spreading to a serious and threatening blaze. Residents immediately north of the city limits on the Percy Road report considerable excitement as the fire raged towards their homes, but fortunately was established before serious damage was done.

QUEEN MARY RIDES INTO N. Y. HARBOR WITH NEW RECORD

Wrests Blue Ribbon of Atlantic From Rival Normandie

CLIPPED OFF 3 HOURS

Officials' Stake Queen of Seas Averaged 29.61 Knots

New York, July 27 (AP)—R. M. S. Queen Mary docked today after smashing the Atlantic crossing over record for a steamer between Europe and New York—but her commander did not claim the blue pennant of Atlantic supremacy.

"We very well do not deserve it," said Sir Edgar Britten, in command of the liner.

So the blue ribbon, emblem of Atlantic speed, remains with Pearson's Normandie, which in June, 1935, averaged 30.84 knots for the crossing as compared with the Queen Mary's 30.31 knots.

The reason is the Normandie's start. She let her rest from Southampton and traveled 3,180 nautical miles. The Queen Mary docked from Cherbourg, 3,098 nautical miles away.

The British ship made the crossing in four days, eight hours, 37 minutes; the French ship covered the longer route in four days, 11 hours, 48 minutes.

Aboard the Queen Mary were 1798 passengers. Many of them witnessed the crash of a seaplane, killing two men, off Nantucket Lightship yesterday.

Sir Edgar said he believed the crash was caused by the vacuum aft his ship. "That's what brought him down," he said.

700 Miles in One Day

The Queen Mary's fastest time on the voyage was 700 miles in an average speed of 30.40 knots from noon Friday to noon Saturday. The highest speed made by the Normandie was 31.2 knots.

The record voyage of the British liner was made over smooth seas and under ideal weather. The maiden trip in May fog slowed down her time.

The crossing nearly was marred by an airplane accident as the ship passed Nantucket Lightship yesterday.

A welcoming plane, circling over the liner, crashed into the sea with three men. One of the plane's passengers were killed, and the eight others were rescued by the American steamship.

Meantime the Queen Mary's fourth voyage was without incident.

French line officials, who say the Normandie will not surrender the Atlantic speed crown by Monday, declared the Queen Mary in tonnage and length, but admitted the Normandie would not surrender the blue ribbon without a struggle.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair, and ma said, it is her very favorite way of shopping today, Willyum.

I suppose you mean successful for the store, pop said, and ma nodded, quite the contrary, I never heard of such bargains, in fact I dont know what we can sell as such prices and live to tell the tell. For instance what would you think of an imported linen luncheon set marked to be sold at 36 fifty and actually priced to 16 ninety five? she said.

I've never thawt of an imported linen luncheon set at any price, and I suppose I'm too old a dog to be taut new tricks, pop said, and ma said, Well just a sean that's one bargain I picked up in Stockbinder's department, that colored bath towels 2.9 dollers a dozen reduced from 14 a'nt' to be sneezed at either.

It's probably bee cleanroos to access all a colored bath towel than at a while one, but we'll let that pass, pop said, and ma said I got a 3 piece carving set made of pure stainless steel for 4 eighty and the sean showed me the original price tag saying six 35, so thank goodness my carving troubles are over.

If we never had anything but liver and onions you'd never have any carving troubles, pop said. But for Pete sake dont you ever buy anything that's not marked down? My golliee it would be a relief to hear you yeak about a shopping exsperition for 5 and 10 cent store, he said, and ma said, As a matter of accurate fact that was the last day I was in Woolsh Five and Ten. I got some lovely rough and ready coffee cups there for 13 cents apiece not including the saucers, and a lovely bread board for 10 cents, she said.

Yes gods and little 19 cent fishes, if anybody asks for me tell them I'm behind the newspaper, pop said.

Wich he hurry up wa.

W. J. SQUIRRELL AGRICULTURIST FATALLY INJURED

Car He was Driving Collides Head-on With Another Car

TWO ARE DROWNED

Five Others Meet Death in Variety of Road Mishaps

(By The Canadian Press)

Automobile accidents claiming death to eight Ontario people over the week-end as six persons died in a variety of road mishaps, a woman drowned, when thrown out in a catch-type semi-lobby boat as it was struck by a speeding motor boat, and a man drowned when he fell from the wharf on which he was attempting to start a motor boat.

One of Canada's leading agriculturists, William James Squirrell, 58, of the Ontario Agricultural College staff, was fatally injured in a crash when his car, driven by his son, was driving collided head-on with another automobile. Mrs. Squirrel was critically injured and Mr. and Mrs. Catherine Noonan, Toronto, occupants of the other car, also suffered severe injuries.

Miss Dorothy Ling, 27, Toronto, drowned in Lake Ontario off Toronto's Lenty Avenue after being thrown out of a motor boat in a capsized catch-type auxiliary sculler upturned by a freak wave. She was one of a party of 12 persons who were out on a pleasure cruise, but a Harbor Commission launch, piloted by Tommy Holmes, V.C., came to their aid.

Drown Under Ice

The other three managed to struggle back to the overturned craft and cling to it until help arrived, but Miss Ling was drawn down by the force of the strong undertow and one-half hours later.

William Gerrard, 20, Cochrane, drowned in Deer Lake in the Burke Falls district, when he fell into the water, while attempting to start the outboard motor on the boat in which he and his wife were cruising. Unable to start the motor or help her husband, Mrs. Gerrard screamed for help but when aid arrived Stewart had disappeared.

When his automobile collided with a Canadian National Railways passenger train near Ottawa, George Simpson, 33, Vars district farmer, was hurled 25 feet through the air and died instantly. At Guelph, 30-year-old Mrs. Ada Hunter, died in the hospital from injuries received when her car was struck by a truck on the Guelph-Hamilton highway.

Provincial Constable Killed

Provincial Constable Alfred E. Storey, Owen Sound, died when the motorcycle he was riding was involved in a crash between two automobiles about 10 miles south of Owen Sound. He was riding alone when one car and a second machine coming in the opposite direction went out of control and crashed into him and the first car. He suffered a fractured skull, broken limbs, internal injuries and arms and internal injuries.

Assisted into a doctor's office a few minutes after the crash the man who was riding with her son was involved in the collision at Toronto's intersection, Mrs. Thomas Goldring, 57, died within a few minutes. An autopsy revealed a heart attack.

On her way to a christening at which she was to have been godmother, Mrs. Thomas Goldring, 57, Hamilton, died in the hospital to which she was removed, after the car in which she was riding, driven by her son, collided with another car, also in the car, received minor injuries.

Whittalls Beat Alnwas.

In seven innings a thrill a minute ball at Dundas Park Diamond Saturday night the Whittall Cans defeated the R.C.A.F. by the score of 14 to 13. Tommie Hicks scored batter up in the first the R.C.A.F. procured three runs and as the Whittall went scoreless in the first of the second and the fourth grabbed off another three to make it four at the end of the second. In the fourth inning for the canmen. Both teams missed out in the third but the fourth inning was the Canmen's big moment. They started the ball rolling. He laid down a neat bunt that started a rally which gave the canmen six runs before it was completed. Gibson, R.C.A.F. pitcher, started to go up in the first of the fifth and with two throwings them high and low the canmen procured three more runs to mount their total to 10. In the meantime the R.C.A.F. had brought four runners across the home plate. With the score 10 to 8 with only two innings to play it did look as though the Whittall had easy pickings. To make it look more so the canmen received two more runs while their opposition marked three upon the scoring in the last of the seventh the airmen almost pulled that old last minute inning rally when Hicks and Gibbs were on bases and Gibbon came through with a long triple to bring them home. With only one down and a base on base the Air Force boys had a real chance but Chambers in the Whittall box tightened and cut the rally short with a batters short.

'FOREVER CANADA'

Canadians at home or those Canadian pilgrims, veterans, mothers and wives, who stood on the sacred territory in France on "Forever Canada" where the Canadian War Memorial on Vimy Ridge, were awed, not by but one thought on Sunday as King Majesty the King unveiled the imposing monument so rich in its symbolism of a young nation's endeavor in humanity's service and so far-reaching in its suggestiveness of that peace which must come day by day guaranteed the nations of earth. French people from the villages near the war-swept slopes of Vimy, their first citizen, President Lebrun with representatives of the Republic, Britishers from across the Channel came to participate in that event, all moved by the same solemn thought.

To France the presence of this memorial, the sight of this band of pilgrims, representative of the living ex-servicemen who fought in France and brother-in-arms of the gallant dead and those mothers, wives and families of the living and the dead, the presence of these guards, bandsmen and pipers and representatives of the Canadian Government, were but the simple companionship that France had done as a colonizer for many years as she attempted to build up the New World. To Canada it meant the rededication of a tie of association and heart and blood with France, as it meant the due honor paid to Canada's glorious dead of the war and at Vimy Ridge particularly.

As for those Canadians at the memorial particularly the mothers who have mourned for the unreturning, no words can tell what those hallowed moments meant, as they in truth exclaimed the tryst or rendezvous with the departed at the Ridge. To all Britishers it meant the tie of an Empire, represented by King Edward; It meant also a brotherhood.

It is nineteen years since Canadians went up Vimy. Today signs of war are disappearing under the sward and under the restoration plans which have been carried out. All who were on the scene had in the passage of time learned to forget hate of the foe, even though marks be left on men and on the lives of women and children. Time cannot wipe out the colossal tragedy of the World War, but it has lessons. It was these that people read Sunday as they stood before the memorial or saw it in their mind's eye from across the ocean. The words of His Majesty King Edward were beautiful in their simple directness as he spoke of the memory of those who are gone. His gracious reference to the people of France cannot but cement the ties binding these two great countries, Britain and France.

In characteristic French idiom and with that oratory in which the Frenchman is supreme, President Lebrun spoke words which will live Canadians and Frenchmen to that great spirit which has always marked these peoples in their associations. His words will long hold a place in Canadian memory as the glory of the feelings of Frenchmen for that new land which sent her battalions across the seas to help France.

In a world which is obsessed by fears and with appreciation of what war means, it was but natural that there should be an undertone of anxiety. But the spirit of the memorial points to that serenity which comes from peace even as it points in silence to the sin and horror of internecine strife. May this memorial be more than a memory of the dead, may its scene be so powerfully impressed upon the spirit of man that nations shall see the insanity of war and breathe the spirit of accord.

Could nations which speak only of nationalism see this scene and feel it as it should be felt in the spirit of world brotherhood, there would be an object lesson of peace and happy accord of different races. They would see Canada, a land of two racial origins, yet untorn by internal strife and with no race problem. And it is fitting that in the midst of the Republic of France there should be a spot designated forever Canada, another symbol of human brotherhood and racial bond.

BREAKING TWO RECORDS

Concluding its deliberations with unprecedented celerity—in two sessions of about two hours each—the conference in London on Thursday of the representatives of Great Britain, France and Belgium broke also a second record: it accomplished its objectives. These were three: First, to satisfy the French insistence that a preliminary Locarno meeting be held without yielding to Italy's demand for the inclusion of Germany; second, to assure Italy and Germany that at the meeting nothing was being prepared without their knowledge which would preclude their active participation in a five-power conference later; third, to lay the basis for the negotiation of "a new agreement to take the place of the Rhine pact of Locarno and to resolve, through the collaboration of all concerned, the situation created by German initiative on the seventh of March (the German reoccupation of the Rhineland)."

The first two of these objectives were merely diplomatic manoeuvres, considered essential to placate French public opinion and avoid offending the delicate sensibilities of Mussolini and Hitler. The third was substantial. Its achievement open the way to negotiations for the consideration of peace "by means of a general settlement." In this phrase, "a general settlement," lies a new and hopeful conception For the first time since the war France formally, though almost covertly, admits that no longer is it possible to try to maintain the balance set up by the peace treaties. It was inevitable that French realism, whether aided by the victory of the Popular Front or the new fixed purpose of Belgium henceforth "to follow the policy "of avoiding war and not that of seeking to impose peace at the constant risk of war," should arrive at this salutary conclusion.—New York Times.

A POPULAR FRONT

Political arguments bore me;
I turn with impatience away
From orators placing before me
Their cure for the ills of the day;
No party commands my devotion,
Whatever the tenets (or stunt),
But, frankly, I fancy the notion.
Of seeking a Popular Front.

In fact, the mere thought of it kindles
A spark of excitement in me;
My former indifference dwindles,
For that's what I'm longing to see.
It lends life additional savour.
And loudly I utter a blunt
Affirmative wholly in favor
Of seeking a Popular Front.

I might be a little bit clearer
On what it is like to achieve,
But August gets nearer and nearer
When I shall be going on leave,
And, labor successfully dodging,
At care to the background I'll shunt,
Having sought—I have chartered a lodging—
A pier and a Popular Front.

SIDELIGHT FAMILY MEMBER expresses approval of paragraph in this column urging investigation of flood control. Says he, "I was congratulating myself up on getting through the winter fine financially when all of a sudden the flood let loose and nicked me for about $1,600. I can't afford to lose that and I don't want to go through another such experience. I can't understand why the flood is forgotten so quickly and nothing done to prevent a recurrence. This is a serious matter for many who lost thousands of dollars last spring. Surely engineering skill can control the Moira, hold back the ice and a reserve of water to be loosed in the summer when needed."

PIZARRO, ONE OF SPAIN'S GREATEST CONQUISTADORES raised hob in South and Central America in the days of the greatness of Spain when her fleets and warships ranged the world. Pizarro like Cortes, conquerer of the land of Montezuma, was not gentle in his methods and made it a point to commandeer all the gold and precious stones possible to take back to his sovereign, for conquests in those days were measure in importance more by the royal loot than anything else. Pizarro did not get them all, nor did Cortes, but one major stroke of Pizarro was the seizure of the "Gold of the Andes" in the sixteenth century, a statue with a crown a foot high. This crown has just been sold by Roman Catholic Archbishop Maximiliano Spinola of Lima, Columbia, to a Chicago gem syndicate. The crown contains 453 jewels and is appraised byt its new owners at $4,500,000. Pizarro looted the jewel from the collection of Atahualipa, last of the Incas, and it found a home in the church. Permission for its sale was given by Pope Pius X in 1914 and Columbia will use the proceeds to build a Catholic hospital and orphan asylum at Popayan.

sleeping thousands buried in those plains in whose honor the symbol in stone was raised.

Today the families took in remembrance of the king held up triumphantly for his desk; a score of years old times at the cost-face; a farmer sees new orchids like the grey-green scar of a parapet.

King and commander and veteran came yesterday to a rendezvous with memory, unveiling and dedication of Canada's memorial to the youth, dead in war, of her last generation. King Edward unveiled it; President Albert Lebrun spoke; a message was read from Premier Minister Mackenzie King; two Canadian ministers addressed the Canadian thousands; three wartime chaplains prayed for peace.

Moving Ballyard

Six thousand pilgrims, men and women, who had crossed the sea to renew the wartime bond, or to look on this land where son or father or brother died, stood silent as His Majesty unveiled the memorial to the dead "in a spirit of thankfulness for their devotion and of pride in their comradeship."

Great names were there also, names grown legendary wherever people talk of the Western Front: Petain and Gouraud, Serrail and Maxwell, MacDonell, Brutinel, Perching, the American, and a score of others from British, France and Canada, to whom men trusted their destiny at zero hour. The widows of Courts and Byng were there, sharing the moment with other widows, whose grey hair was tucked neatly under the edges of the plain berets that marked the overseas pilgrim.

Came With Legions

The King arrived with Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Canadian Minister of Justice, to find vast crowds already amassed and they encountered, with French soldiers holding clear a road for the Canadians, Pilgrims and there who had a part in the service. A fine figure in gray morning coat, with gardenia in lapel, he received presentations. Inspected the guard, and then joined in the talk of the visiting veterans at the Memorial's base. President Lebrun came while the band struck up "Le Marseillaise." Then the King moved to the dais with the Canadian Ministers and the officiating chaplains.

There Maj.-Genl. Ormond Gwyn of Vancouver, Rev. G. O. Fallis of Toronto and Rev. Canon Scott, D.S.O., in charge of Montreal addressed the throng, each speaking briefly of the heroism and self-immolation of the dead, and urging acceptance of Christ's precepts as a pathway to peace.

Message From France

Then came the message — from Prime Minister King, read by Hon. G. G. Power, Minister of Pensions and National Health. Then the King unveiled, appealed to the nations to strive to cultivate the spirit that makes for war, and held up "A nation's honor as the only true memorial worthy of those who have given their lives in war.

Mr. Lapointe, Hon. Ian MacKenzie, Minister of National Defence, and Hon. Mr. Power, of Canada's fold heritage, derived from France and Britain, then spoke briefly of the obligation on the part of all nations to look forward to a lasting peace, a sympathy implied by the sacrifices freely made by those thousands, who died in the cause of war.

Self Purely Canadian

The land on which the memorial stands, a gift from France to Canada, is described by the King Edward "soil that is as surely Canada's as any slice within her nine provinces".

"By a decree which all the world has denied but soldiers especially, the fortunes of war have decreed that here Canada shall stand forever."

The King went on to remark that "it is one of the compensations of these tragic times, that the deeds of valor given rise to comradeships long and strong, which prove the saving grace of the opposing hosts to conflict." Vimy was one of these.

"The Last Post" with two minutes' silence followed, and the ceremony ended with the King's address and that of President Lebrun. The President spoke in French, and the King George, referring to him as "my friend and ally." The whole of France learned "with infinite sadness of his death, it joined with brotherly sympathy in the grief of the English people."

"To the laborer lying on the greensward resting his tired body, to the miner coming out from the earth's interior, the majesty of these scenes will recall the urgent lessons, which have to be learned from the past," said the President.

Noble Example

"Canada's action in the war was a noble and great example." The memorial should teach that more powerful and more profound than community of race and blood, "there exists a higher solidarity which should always guide the actions of men."

His Majesty and the President left, together, after "Land of hope and glory," "Le Marseillaise" and "God Save The King." Wreaths were also laid their tributes on the monument. Pilgrims crowded up to search out names among the 11,285 recorded on there of men, who have no known graves.

Today there were no crowds about the hill; prince and the cowled woman in stone who bowed, with bowed head, over the slopes where dead Canadians lie. But a hundred thousand carried in their hearts some share of the memories, the emotion has, some part of the exaltation that comes from commemorating the honorable service of a nation.

May this monument henceforth dominate with its imposing mass the immense plain which lies before us.

Here, where during four years the dictatorial cries of battle echoed and the smoke of combat arose above the earth tortured by artillery and furrowed by trenches, there no longer rise to the peaceful skies anything but the smoke of chimneys.

One no longer sees anything but the carpet of the countryside and the reaping of the harvest.

Symbolizes Great Lessons

'Tis the laborer lying on the green award resting his tired body, to the miner coming out from the earth's interior, the majesty and solemn aspect of these scenes will recall the urgent lessons which are to be learned from the past.

It will recall to them that here several hundred thousand men, come from a faraway land, spilled their blood to defend their hearth, that they were willing to sacrifice their lives, not for the satisfaction of material interests, but for the beauty of an ideal and the nobility of a memory, that many of them, faithful to the call of blood, recalling the Champlains, the Maisonneves and the Cavaliers de la Salle, the Montcalms, returned to their ancient Motherland to defend her territory ill by mingling with it again.

It is a noble and great example, which this magnificent self sacrifice must be for the lessons of the future. May this memorial, a vigorous sentinel in the centre of the fields still echoing with human grief, teach us that more powerful and more profound than community of race and blood, there exists a higher solidarity which should always guide the actions of men.

May this solidarity, to the development of which the British and French democracies, both passionately attached to liberty and justice, never ceased working, always bring closer the fraternal peace the peoples troubled by the uncertainties of the future.

In the name of the entire Government of the Republic of France I thank His Majesty King Edward VIII for having paid such honor to the honor of his august visit to this place where the British and Canadian armies fought side by side.

I salute the honorable persons of the ministers representing at this ceremony the Canadian Government, whose kind initiative has permitted to the French parcel of French land the dedication of a Canadian monument, which throughout the ages our compatriots will embrace with their pious solicitude.

I salute the veterans of the Canadian army who have traversed the ocean to come and dwell on the soil where they and their brothers fought in the war, I address the most fervent expression of sympathy from France.

In faraway France six thousand Canadian pilgrims on Sunday joined with 100,000 Frenchmen, including many villagers from the region about Vimy Ridge, to do honor to the Canadians who fell in the war. The memorial with its symbol of peace was unveiled by His Majesty King Edward Eighth. Unity of Consecration Moves French President

The text of the speech of President Lebrun of France at the unveiling of the Canadian war memorial here Sunday, which he opened by addressing His Majesty King Edward, follows:

Sire: Four years ago we met a few leagues from here at Notre Dame de Lorette at the dedication of the Memorial to the Canadian Militiamen and the officiating chaplains.

Then Mgr. Cecil O'Brien of Westminster, Rev. G. O. Fallis of Toronto and Rev. Canon Scott, D.S.O., in charge of Montreal addressed the throng, each speaking briefly of the heroism and self-immolation of the dead, and urging acceptance of Christ's precepts as a pathway to peace.

CANADA URGES UNITED EUROPE

Nations Asked in Premier King's Message to Obliterate International Strife

Vimy Ridge, July 27—(CP Cable) Here is the message of Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, read at the Vimy dedication service Sunday, by Hon. G. G. Power, Minister of Pensions and National Health:

"O valiant hearts, who to your glory came Through dust of conflict and through battle-flame;
Tranquil you lie, your knightly virtue proved,
Your memory hallowed in the land you loved."

In your name, Canada appeals to the nations of Europe today.

This she does in the honoured presence of her King, and of the President of the Republic of France, and of numbers of those who were once your comrades in arms.

Canada wishes the nations of Europe to know that her thoughts, while of you, are also of the many more lost of their lands, who, like you, lie silent in their graves.

In their name, as well as yours, Canada speaks today.

Canada asks that the nations of Europe strive to obliterate whatever makes for war and for death.

She appeals to them to unite in an effort to bring into being a world at peace.

This is the trust which we, the living, received from those who suffered and died. It is a trust which we hold in common.

"A world at peace," Canada believes, is the only memorial worthy of the valor and the sacrifice of all those who gave their lives in the Great War.

KING EDWARD VIII CANCELS HOLIDAY

Will Not Visit France Due To Trouble in Spain

LONDON, July 27.—(AP)—King Edward has cancelled his plans for a holiday at Cannes, on the French Riviera, it was announced at Buckingham Palace today. His decision, it was understood, was due to the troubles in Spain.

King Edward, it was stated, realized the responsibilities of French authorities had been increased tremendously as a result of the Spanish Civil War. Consequently, he did not wish to add to them.

It was understood the King had discussed the question with President Lebrun of France while at Vimy Ridge yesterday and had told M. Lebrun of his decision. King Edward flew back from Vimy where he unveiled the Canadian Memorial.

Originally, he had planned to occupy the Cannes Villa of Martine Elliott, the actress, for two weeks early in August.

The Royal Yacht Victoria Albert is in Commission, ready for a cruise to the Mediterranean, should an alternative for his holiday.

Franco - Canadian Tie Theme of LaPointe

Vimy Ridge, France, July 27.—Following is the text of the address delivered here Sunday by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Canadian Minister of Justice, at the unveiling of the memorial to Canadian war dead:

Mr. President, in the name of the Canadian Government, I beg to thank you for the honor you have conferred upon me by assisting at this unveiling of our national monument. To your Government, also, and to the people of France, I wish to express the gratitude of the people of Canada for the delicate and almost unprecedented mark of affection which now and forever makes, by the free gift of your people, this portion of the sacred soil of France the property of the Dominion of Canada.

Your Majesty, in the name of the Government and people of Canada, who are proud to hail you as their foreign, I desire to offer to your Majesty our respectful thanks for the great honor you confer upon us by coming to unveil our Vimy Ridge, an honor which signally increases the solemnity and grandeur of the tribute which Canada desires to pay to her heroic sons who laid down their lives during the Great War.

Ladies and Gentlemen, today's ceremony is one of remembrance. Before the stone, which we are going to award high heaven, is the symbol of the eternal gratitude of the Canadian people to those who died for them on the field of honor. The grateful mother land of France sleep their last long sleep the lovely sleep of her ardent and generous youth. They fought in the greatest war in history with valiant hearts and a courage that never faltered. Today there is here assembled, as a symbol of France, an ex-soldiers, representatives of all classes which make up our population, a Canada proud of their heroism, loyal to their memory; in a word, the whole Canadian people today after a unique pilgrimage to the tomb of their heroic dead a testimony of their remembrance, their gratitude, and their proud sorrow.

Canada wishes to emphasize the special character of this great ceremony.

On the soil of Canada two races, united by the blood of all France, reared and brought to national maturity by Great Britain have faithfully preserved the ideals of civil progress and democratic liberty which are the foundation of modern civilization.

The laws of two great nations, the guardians of Western civilization, Canada was the first of all this peoples of the American Continent to enter the conflict of 1914. Inspired solely by the lofty ideals which had endeared themselves to her people, moved only by traditional inheritance from her forbears, our country's response was spontaneous and immediate. The call to arms which echoed throughout the vast spaces of our Dominion took on the fervor of a crusade.

Five hundred thousand men crossed the seas to stand shoulder to shoulder with the sons of the lands from which they spring allied in defense of small peoples and free democracies.

The monument which we are unveiling today is erected in commemoration of the sacrifice of the bold and courageous spirits and of the loyal devotion of Canadian to Canadian nationhood. This impressive gathering around a monument dedicated to the soldiers of a country across the seas takes on a symbolic significance at the present time.

It is old Europe and young America which by the mingling of the confusion of that great conflict. This conception, this noble ideal a higher plane of civilization, in which recourse to brute force will vanish before the rights of the helpless, the revolt of conscience, and the cries of sorrowful mothers.

Nineteen-fourteen to 1918 was the bloody Golgotha of mankind. Its progress was interrupted, its mental outlook was distorted, and its soul was crushed. But humanity is now determined to rise above this level and to seek sanctuary in justice and in truth.

The world is athirst for a peace based on fair dealing and international solidarity and on the purpose of nations to come together in order that the ideal of peace, which in their hearts they have longed to cherish, may become not the possession merely of a single continent, but a part of the common inheritance of mankind.

It is this noble ideal which gives overpowering significance to today's ceremony. It is this noble tribute which we can pay to our Canadian soldiers is to be able to state that the sacrifice of their lives in cause their contributed to bring about in the relations of international relations, namely, a spirit of mutual good will, the reconciliation of the immutable right of all peoples to the free enjoyment of liberty and justice.

To the triumph of this ideal, Canada, faithful to the memory of her heroes will devote her energies and untiring efforts, whatever may be the obstacles which, at the moment, appear to prevent its immediate realization.

IAN MACKENZIE THANKS FRANCE

Says Canada Honored by The King's Dedication of Memorial

Vimy Ridge, July 27.—Following is the text of the address delivered Sunday by Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Canadian Minister of National Defence,at the Vimy Memorial unveiling:

To the valor of their countrymen who fought in the Great War and in memory of their 60,000 dead this monument is raised by the people of Canada. Here Canada has poured forth her soul in sculptured pillar and immortal stone; here we see the veiled figure of our nation, mourning her valiant dead; here the impregnable wall of defense; here the two civilizations, British and French, united in those dark and testing days, as they are united here today in this solemn service of commemoration—and as they have been united in our Canadian land for well-nigh two centuries—devoting the best that is in the genius of the two peoples to the steadfast upbuilding of a united, Canadian nation, hotly, Longmans and free.

And between these two forces we see the spirit of sacrifice throwing the torch from fallen hands. What, as we gaze today on this great memorial raised to the memory of Canada's glorious dead, our thoughts and our hearts go out to those for whom the sun was darkened when a Canadian soldier died here.

Next we see the figure of Peace, Justice, Honor and Faith, and they are the great realities. What of Justice? What of Honor? What of Faith—and what of Liberty? Not, I trust, despair, for we are gathered here not only in the commemoration of those who died for the rededication of the nations here represented to the ideals of peace.

That is the sublime purpose of this great throng. In the immortal words of Lincoln, we must strive not only "to care for him who has borne the battle, but for his widow, and his orphan," but also "to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

And that is the deeper figure of the cross. In it 'tis the cross for a weary, soul-sick, tempest-tossed world to turn its face to the cross and find in Christian brotherhood the spirit of good-will the tranquil calm that never can be found in United and Christian strife.

To the cross, emblem of faith and hope, we look for inspiration and for the invisible crosses that in the mental realm of the spirit, hold mankind together in the ties and vows which are not known to men.

And today, from the gifted artist Allward today, the man whose great vision and whose consummate skill in creation of force and soul and beauty, Canada and the British Canadian Legion were sponsored this great pilgrimage. Canada thanks the trustees of the Battlefields Memorial Commission for their magnificent co-operation.

Canada thanks all who have gathered here at this, the nation's shrine of remembrance, to sorrow with us and to pray with us.

Just as France in the earlier years of the Great War poured out, from her sons and daughters, our first pioneers in settlement and in development, so in the years of peace France in 1921 sent a mission across the Atlantic which placed upon the gift of Roslin's "Victoire", with the Vitalvious inscription, "Canada, France has poured out the blood of her sons for the liberty of the world and for the peace of the world."

So, as we now recall this other great mission, let Canada of the sacred soil of France whereon this great memorial stands, the soil of France which is consecrated with the blood of Canada's sons, so today we would say to France, the world's best friend, and to her people, an expression of our deepest love and deep gratitude of Canada inscribed not on stone or statue, but upon the hearts of the Canadian people.

Canada today gives thanks and praise for the cherished memory of those who fell. We are filled with increased devotion to that cause for which they died, and for the ideals of service. But in the words of the great Athenian:

"Their country, like every man, has won imperishable praise, each has gained a glorious grave not only the sepulchre of each wherein they lie, but the lives of those who live on, remembered that will live on the lips that will blossom in the deeds of their countrymen in the years to come.

Canada remembers today, with sympathy and reverence, the widows and orphans and parents of the fallen; prays for the league of the Allied, the heartstrings of our people will reach through all time to the graves of those who died. Canada remembers today, and deeply honors those who in the years of thousands of Canadians ringed around the memorial today, and the comrade and friend in days of war of thousands more who, amid their new quiet places of these hills and valleys, sleep their eternal sleep.

Canada is gratefully and proud that our King has come amongst us to-day. Long live the King! Long live his Consort!

Canada is gratefully and proud that our King has come amongst us to-day. Long live the King! Long live the President! God save the King!

STAY AT HOMES ADDED RESPECTS

Special Church Services Held in Many Parts of Canada

Advice to the Lovelorn

Can Girls Be Flat-Mates Play Fair and Be Happy?

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

What's your substitute for a home?

That is, if you are a working-girl with a city job and a family who live in the country, just a bit too far for commuting.

One very pleasing arrangement is that whereby several girls combine in renting a flat, dividing the expenses both of the flat and of whatever light housekeeping they may be moved to go in for. It is looked on, on the scene friendly and delightful, even if the moment that's all get swept or if some of the dishes back balance.

What do girls themselves think of it?

In general, I am convinced it is a deservedly popular way of living. And a fine substitute for the cramping horrors of the hall bedroom. Recently I have but received a letter from Helen H. in the opposition of which 'I' feel obliged to differ with her. Helen's one alarming girls to select their flat-mates carefully.

"For a year past," Helen writes, "I have been keeping house with a bunch of girls, sometimes there were three of us sometimes four. We had on the whole a good time —too many, probably, for our health and comfort. However, I realize as you do, that if you plucked up the courage to break with her you would be married now, but I'd be through with that sort of life in any case. For Jake it from me, girls are selfish, may spoil the "Girls aren't always square with each other about their boy friends. Dozens of boys come to see the girl first and, finally, the girl proved to be the snake and felt free to annex any boy, no matter whom he came to. And then there were a few mix-ups, and some hard feelings. After a while, some of us learned to meet our favorite boys at movie or somewhere instead of having them come to the house, but how like to do that when you are supposed to have a home?

"There are other things, too. For instance, some girls are always borrowing your clothes and cosmetics. They keep your things in order, of course, but it's really because they want to save their money. And when it comes to shabby clothes, you fairly had to fight your flat-mates to get them to do it."

I'm sure Helen has summed up the possible disadvantages of co-operative living for girls, but if you get together the right group, it is a hundred times better than boarding. But if you are not naturally hard-boiled you must be on your guard against the one who is always borrowing.

Indignant.

This letter is given as typical. Many have come in answer to a letter written to this column by a man who wanted his wife to wear an apron, and regard his word as law.

This column is a forum where any correspondent is free to offer his views on domestic arrangements. Mine are that running a home and rearing children are a fifty-fifty proposition.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Evening Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I, Mr husband and I have received a formal invitation to the wedding of my husband's cousin. As we live out of town will we stay at a hotel? Is it necessary to attend the wedding? Should I wear a white organdy dress? And what about gloves?

1. Yes, it will be correct for you to attend this wedding alone.

2. Since there may be a chance that at the last minutes your husband may be able to go—and even if he isn't able to go—I think it would be best for you to accept the invitation for both you and him. Then, if he cannot go, you can explain to the hostess that you attend. So your reply to the formal invitation would be written on your personal paper (the double-sheeted note paper on which you write to me will be all right) on the first page, like this:

Mr. and Mrs. George Smith

accept with pleasure

Mr. and Mrs. (bride's parents's) kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of September at eight o'clock in the evening.

3. I should think it would not be worn at a church evening wedding. But in some denominations women are required to wear hats in church. That is a scarf of tulle or net is sufficient to wear for the church ceremony. Maybe there will be time for you to buy a hat and shoes, but wear it to church in which this wedding is to take place. Gloves are not necessary.

Wedding Cake

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please answer my two questions about the wedding cake?

1. Is it correct for the bride to be given in marriage by her stepfather? There are no nearer male relatives.

2. When the bride wears a veil is formal attire necessary for the bridegroom and his attendants? Is three-thirty afternoon wedding?

3. If there is to be no reception would it be correct to have the wedding cake in small boxes given out from the church by everyone attending the ceremony?

4. Directly before the wedding should the bridesmaids, dest man and the bridegroom go to the vestry and the girls from the bride and groom down the aisle?

Brenda.

1. Yes.

2. Yes.

3. No, it would not be appropriate to give wedding cake to everyone in the guests at the church. These are usually invited at the reception, not at the church.

4. Usually the groom gives his bestman and the ushers presents after the wedding, and at this dinner he gives a big gift to his best man and ushers. The bride may give a luncheon for the bridesmaids two or three days before the wedding and at this luncheon she gives her gifts to her attendants. These parties may be combined, a dinner given for the bride and groom's attendants, and then all the gifts may be given at this dinner.

Perfect White Does Not Exist

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Associated Press Science Editor.

Cambridge, Mass., July 27.—(AP) —The perfect white object does not exist on earth. Closest to it are the white clouds and the paper mills. Third comes the whites made by science and industry.

These facts were given today at the annual conference of Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Department of Chemistry, held at the Institute's campus.

Previous to this, it may be said, scientists recognized only the color of materials as white, the nearly perfect white of a thick layer of new fallen snow and purest chalk.

Plan Hair Carefully

Allen Face

She chooses her hair to conform to her coiffure.

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE IS LITTLE thinking of hair going on, especially this autumn. The reason for that is the simplicity of the fashionable hairdo. This means that hair is somewhat longer, but if you like your hair, you won't cut of it. It is a go-as-you-please reign with something always ahead.

If you have the wavy hair that won't see that a man no longer has to be bald to be bored by her presence, it's far better to let your hair grow.

For people who do not love each other to attempt to go through life together is a ghastly ordeal.

Thinks Home Authority Should be Fifty-Fifty

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Referring to a letter published in your column not long ago, please let me say that any woman who would let a man's word be law in the household is a fool and only trying to have a home. Such a woman doesn't need a home but a correctional institution, maybe jail, or for that matter a lunatic asylum.

When I read that man's letter, saying that his father's word was law in his family, I didn't wonder that the man produced such a book for a son. That book was the buggy ride the co-ed would be given credit for writing.

Indignant.

This letter is given as typical. Many have come in answer to a letter written to this column by a man who wanted his wife to wear an apron, and regard his word as law.

This column is a forum where any correspondent is free to offer his views on domestic arrangements. Mine are that running a home and rearing children are a fifty-fifty proposition.

Fashion Flashes

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

TURN ABOUT is a new idea when it applies to handbags. One featured bag is a flat square that has one side of blue alligator grain; the other side is of white washable patent leather. The bag is easily turned to be worn on either side.

TAKING THE AIR are toes and heels this Summer as the toe-less, heel-less sandal continues to reign-ler for beach, day and evening wear. A white buckskin pump-sandal model has had no toe and an open heel. The front section and heel were carrot-colored.

A BIG LIST of things to do in town, plus a long, dusty ride on a cool dark costume. Such a suit is of dark blue sheer wool with dots, for the skirt and horizontal tucks for the dress top and sleeveless jacket. Hat, bag and shoes are white accessories.

FLORAL FANCIES continue to lend glamor to beach costume for the evening. Chanel favors a Russian cladon of tiny pink roses on a chignon of les roses in pink and creamy tones with dark green, leaves. A decided note is struck when the hair will lend charm to the simplest or the most elaborate costume.

SOMETIMES we become tired of berets with little brims—except during for a real hat. That's why there was an immediate sale when a ready tailor hat with a large model, with brim of black canesoel straw bound with black velvet ribbon and a crown and intricate bow of contrasting straw.

OUT TO PLAY wearing a smart suit makes pleasant a Summer day. An ensemble consisting of tailored slacks and fashioned jacket of brown linen with blouse of yellow linen.

GOING UP to a roof means an ultra-smart party for one of the most fashionable crowds who come up in town during the Summer. A cool evening frock is of gray chantilly lace with a matching bolero jacket. The skirt is circular, made entirely of rows and rows of the lace. The sleeveless jacket has line contrasts with the skirt full-ness.

NEVER ENDING is the description that can be applied to the fashion for silver fox. No matter how many changes in everything else, this luxury pelt goes on forever. So, although it is Summer, the woman waits for evenings cool enough to wear a short coat of fine silver fox worked in vertical lines.

KEEP COOL by thinking about next Winter's fur trimmings. Some suggest wide fur capes with hoods attached, done in leopard or muskrat. Also double-breasted jackets of white furs such as sheepskin, white lamb or white caracul, with colored leather pipings and buttons.

Doubling for Cupid

By NAT. B. HATCHER

The picture was terrible, and Royal shuddered, thinking of the crazy label hung on the three blocks of steel and muck he'd have to walk through to get there. He hesitated uncertain for a moment, and then settled back against the seat and closed his eyes. At least the theatre was warm.

The chief shock, disturbing his doze, and he looked up irritably as a dim shape slid into a seat beside him. He made out a glimpse of a white face and then, with no preliminaries at all, the girl produced a tiny handkerchief and proceeded to cry into it with quiet abandon.

Royal watched with a detached sort of interest wondering idly if she had married him as the victim for some burlesque racket of which he had never heard. But after a while Royal stood out and took the hand in his own.

There was a frankly and unconscious thrill to it, and then the girl turned to him, clutched gratefully at the empty seats all around them.

"If you dream I'll turn you loose," Royal warned her. "But let her consider that possibility for a moment—and went on: "You were crying, you know."

"I'm the cause of the plot-ters."

"It is a lousy picture. It almost moves me to tears, too."

There was another half-hearted sob. "You're laughing at me."

"I'm not conscious of it. I feel very much like crying with you. Perhaps I will, after a while."

"There isn't anything to tell."

"I thought perhaps there was a boy——"

"There is not!"

"—who is this very moment is being nice to some blond siren."

"He has been banished!"

"The color doesn't matter. She's a cat just the same."

"I'm not going to him again."

"Serves him right for running around with a girl with a glass eye—if even when he could be with a beauty."

"Blond," she replied. "How did you know that he took her out to lunch?"

"Trust a woman like that to take a man to lunch. It's a sure way of becoming evening gown. They're probably at the Blue Bonnet Night now."

"Pfaw!"

"What a coincidence! I wanted to go there tonight, but I detest dining alone. Let's have dinner there, on cantingly: "You could go home and dress and I'll call for you in an hour."

By seeking out the exact spot that Royal's companion would naturally go to ignore, Royal recognized The Boy at once. He was a lanky twerp of a youth played geared on his football team, and Royal reflected, with the smug satisfaction of the sadly battle ground of the restaurant.

"Hello, Daniels."

"Betty."

"Hello, Betty, you like me fine, and I am very fond of you. We can't have Oscar——"

"My name is Bill."

"We can't have Bill thinking you're really going to break your heart over him. That's not the idea at all. I'm going to be your knight clock soyset, and—Stop looking at me as if I was your father!"

Betty had to admit that she was doing a very good job of liking him. She gave over crying, and looked at him tenderly. It was their second dance together, and to a girl who had been startled when an abrupt head fell on his shoulder, and Bill looked with outstretched toward the girl, ignoring Royal.

Betty's pretty face was softly pulsating. "I haven't seen Oscar for ages."

Betty's answer stuck somewhere in her throat. Royal had executed a flourishing reverse step that left Bill blinking his astonishment.

Betty, who had never mumbled an incoherent excuse and slipped from the arms of a man, Royal noticed that the red-headed girl had deserted Bill and was dancing with him.

The red-head was beautiful in a vivid sort of way. She met his gaze across the dance floor, and there was a challenge in the way she held her head.

Couldn't we make Bill a——partner?" he managed to say to Betty.

"Why, Bill is all you and Bill. You see, there are so many jolly people in your set——"

"I'm afraid we can't," she answered. "You see, your——Betty is gone."

"Gone?"

"Yes, and so is Bill. They left together, I just saw them slip away."

Royal pondered that startling information for a moment.

"Then I'm afraid," he let's make it a party of two. There are so many jolly things you can do."

He was thinking that one of the jolly things he could do was to sit and look into her eyes.

"JUST NOW new fashions are commencing to appear at smart resort gatherings in town. A delightful new evening gown is of black velvet with a print of little flowers, pods and flowers. The motif is embroidered in white. An interesting thing with this is worn a black headband similarly embroidered.

NOW IS THE TIME to carry a fluffy evening bag. A charming novelty is a bag, a diminutive round affair, made entirely of white silken violets with tiny rhinestone centers. Frame and handle are of gilt metal.

A LITTLE MORE formality is considered by those in the know this Summer. Typical of this trend is a bag of white cape-skin with an all-over lattice design of dark blue taffeta ribbon appliqued on, with ring top mounting.

Praise Child Who's Good Always

More Deserving Than One Erratic in His Behavior, Says Lisa

By LISA GRENVILLE

ONE DAY Isabel found herself with nothing at all to do, so the inspiration came to her that she might as well try to be good for once; and if she did it, like Angelic Alice. There was her room, for instance; she might begin at that. Wonder what it would look like, all tidied up like Sister Alice's.

Isabel looked about. It certainly was very different! There were clothes, shoes and socks scattered over the floor. None of the drawers was tight shut; all bulged and spilled over with wrinkled clothing. And the table and bed were piled high with every kind of junk.

So Isabel tidied for once—feverishly, as she did everything — picking, brushing, stacking, smoothing. She even threw away a few things, and dusted off, with the palm of her hand, one or two particularly horrified surfaces. By the time she was through the place looked respectable, almost as clean and neat as Alice's room looked every day in the week. It would give the family a shock!

It did. Mother got almost emotional about it, and promised Isabel a new dress. Father was pleased, too, and said so. Father was dragged up to see when he came home, and was property appreciative. Even Isabel's big sister approved. All through supper everyone made a great fuss over Isabel.

Alice Ignored

But Angelic Alice, who was always good, and whose room was always tidy, who was no problem and never gave any trouble, was completely ignored.

It was always like that, Alice's good behavior was so customary, taken so for granted, that it was hardly noticed. Alice was never given a dollar or a dime for being good, for the reason that she had always done it free, without hope of reward. Isabel had really reformed; Isabel kept them guessing.

Isabel, like anyone else, enjoyed having a fuss made over her. She knew perfectly well that the status that followed her rather rare good deeds was not to be found in a while—not too often, like Alice. If you were good all the time, like Alice, no one noticed. There was no fuss and no reward. It was like the return of the prodigal son.

Not So Dumb!

Children, like some adults, are quick to work out in their own minds what pays and what does not. In such personal matters the average child is anything but dumb—probably at least one jump ahead of his honored parents!

If you want your children to form habits of telling the truth and being orderly and co-operative, you must make those virtues pay. The reward doesn't need to be material, be larger should be the dividends received.

Isabel should have been praised, encouraged, perhaps even rewarded for her occasional good moments. But Alice, whose good conduct was the rule rather than the exception, had been ignored. Her reward should have been at least double Isabel's and the praise she received higher and warmer.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Trial Lady"

When the actors as well as the audience can be kept in ignorance of the real identity of the master criminal in a mystery picture, then a director believes he has something.

Such was the result sought by Edward Ludwig in Walter Wanger's production "Trial Lady" now playing the Capitol theatre. Ludwig tried the novel experiment of keeping the players in the dark as to which of their number was supposed to commit the several murders and a striking effect was achieved.

Although the customary reading was given, the players listened attentively for the climax which would disclose the murderer of three of a prominent opera singer's lovers, as they were forthcoming. Only the producer, Walter Wagner; one of the principals; and Ludwig knew the solution of the plot.

The unsolved murders which occur in several parts of the worn have left complete confusion with the players virtually in the air. The feeling this situation created was capitalized, throughout the making of the picture, and the effect has served to stimulate the element of suspense.

Walter Pidgeon, Alan Mowbray, Ruth Donnelly, John Halliday, Ivan Kennedy Norman Foster, and Osa Massen Post are the chief players who are individually suspected at one time or another as the real murderer. Most one of these actors knew definitely just who the criminal was until the picture was previewed privately.

The story of "Trial Lady" involves a famous opera singer whose love is fatal to three suitors who are mysteriously murdered. The fourth narrowly escapes a similar fate and the killer is uncovered.

AT THE BELLE

"San Francisco"

A new and truly romantic team is brought to the screen in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "San Francisco", now at the Belle today, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, in Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald.

For the first time the rugged, two-fisted, jaw-socking Gable of old and the lovely Miss MacDonald with the voice that thrills, are brought together with Spencer Tracy sharing stellar honors.

"San Francisco" has drama, love and romance in its every episode. Gable has the rough and tough type of role in which he scored public films him best. Miss MacDonald has the ideal part to give her opportunity to sing, and when she sings there is a reason for her singing for her songs are a part of the plot.

The story directed by W. S. Van Dyke, opens on New Year's Eve, 1906, and continues through one of the most disastrous dramas of the century, the San Francisco earthquake and fire.

Gable is the boss of one of the honky-tonks in the city. Miss MacDonald is the small town girl who has left home to follow the bright lights the man she loves.

Gable has designs on her, to greater advantage than in his private life which he gives a performance that stands out for its power and sharply etched characterizations. Miss MacDonald sings the songs from simple ballads to glorious operatic arias, surpasses even her superb work in "Rose Marie" and "Naughty Marietta."

Perhaps the greatest surprise of the picture, however, is the strikingly different portrayal of Spencer who abandons his usual tough roles to contribute a sincere and unforgettable portrait of a priest, Father Mullin.

Starring in the supporting cast are Jack Holt, Shirley Ross, Margaret Irving, Harold Huber, and twenty former film stars who may be discovered in minor roles. "San Francisco" is a picture that must be seen.

Belle Isle World News, and Walt Disney's new Silly Symphony delight in which Mickey Mouse's "Elmer Elephant," precede the feature attraction.

The entire program will be repeated again tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 8.10; "San Francisco" starts daily at 1.30, 7.20 and 9.35.

Mr. Deeds", Sunday

The year's best comedy "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," co-starring Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur is announced for a special preview presentation at the Belle Sunday, August 2nd at 12.05.

ALL ROADS LEAD TO NORTH TOWN

Callander And The Quints Means Few Thousands of Tourists

Toronto, July 25—(CP)—The Ontario Government Information Bureau on the Lake Shore Road just outside of Toronto city limits seems to be located on the same sign post along the road to Callander, home of the Dionne quintuplets. One out of every two or three cars stopping there has passengers heading for the little northern town, official report.

Apparently there are a few other points of interest in Ontario however. Four school teachers from Detroit, Michigan, stated what they was the capital of Canada, and then decided they already knew. Two fishing districts of Muskoka take their quota of American visitors; Lake Simcoe another two districts and Lake of Bays another two districts.

Toronto, of course, is the city. Toronto, Ont.—(CP)—With the new play-ground giving visitors a better view of the children, the Callander bonanza became more popular than ever with tourists. Two million, 1,200 automobiles, each carrying about 7,260 persons, the total was the largest of the season, Provincial Police Chief Hugh Bell, Toronto.

They come from all over the world. Early one June three Australians arrived a few days after a father and three children have visited Callander from Hawaii; however the visitors from the United States are frequent.

SMITH'S "JOKA" WINS MIKEL CUP

Five Punts Race For '37 Veterans In Puffy Breeze

For the third year in succession Frank Smith's "Joka" won the W. G. Mikel Centennial punt trophy in the annual race of the Belleville Yacht Club course sailed yesterday. The Joka moved out in front during the last lap and finished over three lengths ahead of Harry Sweatt's Alaska 2nd.

A stiff north-west wind welcomed the punt sailors, when five craft faced the starter's gun, only Belleville boats entered, however. The Joka and Rose Salisbury's Presto were the first to cross the starting line with the latter crowding on Joka until the main-stays of the snow broke and repairs were necessary.

The breeze proved quite puffy all afternoon and resulted in leads being shown clear of the water as the boats rounded the buoys before the wind. Occasionally the boats' sterns dipped deep into the water, but the handsome specimens stood save, but the helmsmen proved masterful sailors and averted possible capsizings.

The Joka finished first, Sweatt's Alaska 2nd and Rose Salisbury's Presto third while Maurice Gallagher's "Mist from Sea" and Jack Hinchey's Allegra, also competing two starters, failed to cross the finishing line. A large number of out-of-town craft were present during the day, many which that blew across the bay yesterday are attributed the paramount reason for the absence of Belleville boats, being present. Secretary Harry Sills stated that the conclusion of the Mikel Centennial Regatta yesterday. Mr. Smith was presented with the trophy of the day following the race.

WEST HILL BOYS WIN GAME 10-4

Hall Pitches Steady Game And Fanner in Trouble

In an interesting and scrappy baseball game the West Belleville nine defeated the East Belleville boys in a regular league fixture of the local playground league by the score of 10 to 4 on Saturday. Hall, West Belleville hurler, pitched a steady game and was never in trouble, his teammates giving him an early-game advantage in the batting, notwithstanding six runs in the first two frames.

Hall possessed a splendid curve while his control was equally as good in victory. The slugging West-end-ers batted Fanner, pitching for the East End hurler, hard the first two innings, however the Eastenders outplayed and outscored their playmates, West Belleville, but could not cope with the leading Westend boys.

The line-ups—West Belleville—Hall, pitcher; Osborne, catcher; Toms 1b, Pesta 1f; Pearson cf; Lloyd 2b; Diamond 3b; Loom 3b; Robertson, Taylor and O'Connor, West Belleville Kangan, 2b; Cook 3b; R. Hall 1b; J. Hall p, Deacon cf; Pluglboon c; Gordon lf; Earman rf; Girardi ss. Sub—Wright and Martin.

The bridegroom is the eldest son of the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery.

Olympian Village Now Occupied by The Canadian Team

BERLIN, July 27— (CP Cable)— With only a few hours respite from arduous days of training ahead, Chancellor Olympic Athletes moved into the Olympic village today sightseeing through one that was slightly off from loss of sleep on the overland journey from the seacoast.

Many of the more than 130 men and women who will wear the Maple Leaf in the International Games reached Berlin Sunday after-noon, a journey of 17 hours from Paris, many of them had endured little rest for close on 48 hours.

Early with the first morning of morning, the young Canadian went to the Havre to Paris and many most of the day seeing the sights from motorboat decks and about. At midnight they boarded the coaches for the trip to Berlin. Among the party was Vancouver antelope, Phil Edwards, Montreal five thousand metre runner and many the others curled up on the coach floor for "40 winks" but a sleepless night was the result.

However, when the athletes reached Friedrichstrasse station there they were perked up by the cheers of hundreds of welcomers who crowded the platform.

After an official welcome they boarded motor buses and were driven to the Reichs Chancellery where military bands down flag-be-decked streets and to the village. Thousands of onlookers lined the thoroughfare to cheer the Canadians. Hitherto Lingard, Stag Commissioner for capital, and other dignitaries had welcomed the Canadian team were presented with a copy of the seventh book, "Berlin Past and Present."

Then the athletes were escorted to their quarters—the girls to a hotel near the imposing Olympic Stadium and the men to the Olympic Village. In the Village, a Union Jack with the Maple Leaf emblazoned on a bridge, was run up to join the standards of other competing nations. Bands shrilled the stirring bars of "O Canada", and "God Save The King" followed.

Following the ceremonies, the Athletes waited little time in making their way to the dining hall where they lost enroute was not a serious matter as no intensive training was planned before Tuesday.

New York - Chicago Series For Championship Looms as Both Teams Leave Rivals

Yanks Win Double Bill While Chicago Splits With Phillies

TIGERS BOG DOWN

Mickey Cochrane to Return to Lineup at Once

By RED FEDER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Day by day as these sizzling pennant chasers head for the stretch it becomes increasingly more difficult to see anything but a New York-Chicago world's series for this Fall.

A lot can happen between now and the windup in September, but the fact remains that the Yankees revived pitching to back up their batting dynamite while the Cubs continued great hurling make those outfits tougher and tougher to shake out of reach as the windup of their pace-setting edges.

That fact stood out yesterday in a full Sunday schedule of 15 Major League games, which saw each incidents of an inning knotted out of a game by a pop bottle thrown by a fan in the Yank-White Sox meeting; Mickey Cochrane (announces he is imparting new blood to his Detroit Tigers by benching at least one of his veterans, and the Giants result that place in their National League comeback, as the Dodgers dropped the Pirates to fourth with a doubleheader win.

The pop-bottle-throwing climaxed a riotous afternoon in which the Yanks aided by Lou Gehrig's 38th and 39th homers, pounded Eddie Smith out of their hitting laxity and knocked off another challenger by taking the nightcap, 8-3 and 11-4 to stretch their American League lead to 9½ games.

Time Annoyed

Fans, apparently angered by a decision in the ninth inning of the nightcap, which forced a 11 game tie, hurled more than 100 missiles down on the field. The bottle hit Umpire Bill Summers on the groin and forced him out of action. Baseball's high commissioner, Judge Kenesaw Landis immediately offered a $6,000 reward for information concerning the throwers.

The Cubs, at the same time, held forth their three edge in the National League by splitting with the Phillies, while the second place Cardinals broke even in the same with the Bees. Held to two hits by Jimmy Wilson for a 4-0 setback in the opener, the Cubs took sweet revenge in the nightcap with a seven-run, eight-single attack, and an 18-5 triumph. The Cardinals, moved out 4-3 by the Bees in the first, whipped similarly behind Dizzy Dean's pitching in the nightcap for an 8-5 decision.

Tigers Bog Few Shakes

On the short end of a double by the Boston Red Sox for the third straight day, as the Tigers failed to get a run to set the pace for a 10-3 win, the Tigers heart Mickey Cochrane's return to the lineup in action today. His first move, he said, would be to have Hank Greenberg in some new talent and try to steer the Tiger machinery humming again.

The unpredictable-as-ever Brooklyn Dodgers did another Big-Bay in reverse, and staged two ninth inning rallies to win a pair of pitchers' duels with the Pirates and club the Bucs into fourth place. Van Mungo took the opener 1-0 and only brought the nightcap 4-3, each with a five-hit performance. The Giants, who split with the Cincinnati Reds, winning 5-4 and losing 9-3, found themselves tied for second in third place by these developments.

A pair of stalemates computed the American League program. A 20 h't attack behind Buck Rose's six hit fling gave Los Athletics a 13-0 victory over the Indians but Cleveland came back to slap out an 8-5 decision. The Senators walloped the Browns 9-2 in the opener, and they took a 9-7 licking.

Rogell First Tiger to Feel Wrath of Mickey

Detroit, July 27 (AP)—Mickey Cochrane returned to the helm of the lagging Detroit Tigers today, determined to hit the winning trail even if he has to replace his world champion veterans with youngsters.

The first veteran to feel the wrath that Cochrane generated while absent was in the grandstand with Owner Walter O. Briggs through three successive defeats by humiliating scores, was Billi Rogell, who has been in a protracted batting slump.

Francis Parker, late of the Toledo American Association club, will play in Rogell's shortstop position today, Cochrane said. He followed and that, if Parker delivered, the job might be his regularly. Herman Pillette, veteran hurler, was sent to Toledo on option in exchange for Parker.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, July 27.—(AP)—Is there any truth to the widespread rumor that Governor Horner of Illinois will run for Governor of Connecticut and that Jimmy Brisson, the New York fight manager, will help direct his campaign? . . . Brisson is Tommy Loughran's chief adviser in the second Dempsey fight. . . . Those Detroit Tigers are the toughest in the party and they were so satisfied with their luck that is all except poor Katie, they are coming down next summer to play the Black Sox of the Bay of Quinte on Wednesday morning, we understand.

Last year the Bay of Quinte Country Club sent a strong team of golfers to Kingston to compete in the Kingston and District golf tournament, in which J. H. Sharpe of Belleville, won the major honors and the Wing-Ding-Ding trophy. Although the local golf clubs will again be represented at the 1936 Holiday golf tournament sponsored by the Kingston press, Sharpe will not defend his honors, he now being a resident of Denver, Colorado, where occasionally comes to Belleville for a real game of golf, as he terms it.

It remained to have two at-Belleville baseball players supply the color and excitement for last Friday's session when Jim Bottomley of Kingston C.O.B.L. till, when Jack Williams and Tommy Painter hooked up in a thriller that saw Jack Riddle should read all about. Feltham was in rare form and limited the new slugless Ponies to two small singles, while Walter Gerber's pals got collected three safeties from the deliveries of Williams. Pretty good pitching and fielding obsolution in Belleville under the heaving of "Pewee" Mills.

Overtime games seem to be the lately style in the C.O.B.L.; these days First the Ponies and the Gib-Park. Chicago.

FISH SMALL, BUT SO IS ANGLER

Freddie Rodgers, 13 years old, Belleville angler, is flat as enthusiastic over his catch, a pint-sized bass, as the grown-ups are over the big ones. Freddie is spending most of the summer with his chum builders along the banks of the Moira river, where the bass are plentiful. He doesn't go in for fancy equipment, but he gets results.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

"Irish Steve" Taylor, local wrestler, left for New Liskeard on Saturday, where he has accepted a position in the Iron Works. "Steele" progressed splendidly in the ranks of the pugnacious wrestling game and will doubtless become as popular in New Liskeard as he was in Belleville and vicinity. Steve Taylor is an accomplished, clean worker and has secured a fine position in New Ontario, we are glad to learn. We join in his good-by to slick wrist wrestling business and may assist in promoting bouts in Northern Ontario," added Manager as he boarded the fast train on Saturday night for his new home. "Best voyage and good luck" was all we could with Steve Taylor in this new venture.

Now that Taylor is out of this vicinity we can relate a fishing tale that Steve himself told us recently. Steve invited a number of Jack Corcoran's strollers down for a fishing trip last week. Hal Ramsey, the ex-Unknown the Silent John Lukacs, Roy Wright and George Harris, secretary-treasurer of the Queensbury A. C. made the trip. The boys entered the boat chartered by Taylor and headed easterly. Off Point Anne they weighed anchor and commenced their fishing activities. Silently John Kaian sat there for a lengthy period and at last he was rewarded with a bite. Straightening hard and hanging with what appeared to be at least a five pound bass, Kaian at last netted a "whanh", a fine bass trout. Word went through the mans struggling muscles at one end of the boat, while Ramsey was equally as busy at the other end. After a ten minute struggle it was found they both had caught a small perch at the same time and were "Kaian-face red" At any rate the remainder of the party fished much better, a total of 12 fine black bass being caught by the party and they were so satisfied with their luck, that is all except poor Katie, they are coming down next summer to play the Black Sox of the Bay of Quinte on Wednesday morning, we understand.

Both the Jackson Press of Kingston and the local printers used players outside of their plant employment for their annual printers' baseball game on Saturday, we understand At any rate the local gang of "makingovers" were doubtless a better fixed for imports, as they won by the score of 13 to 13. The local outfit outfit the offerings of T Scrutton hastily, Scrutton, incidentally, being one of the best plain softball hurlers to come out of the Limestone City. Conny Mazzuchi, local roundsman, was also a visitors a few tricks and had it not been for a couple of costly errors in indifference shown by the locals in the last inning, the defeat of the visitors would have been much worse.

It begins to look as though Harold Wilson of Toronto will be the "Black-cattled" from the start. Nothing must reverses welcomed Wilson and his retinue when the latter boys were drawn and on Saturday, when refused to answer to the start of the ump's gun, was the crowning height of a terribly let-down and disappointing season. Ken Ben, Belleville was the only racer to finish the Lake Ontario Gold Cup race, out of eight entries.

The surprise team of the International League these days is the Toronto Maple Leafs. There's no stopping the Leafs these days and their gallant return to winning ways is being compared to that of the famous Boston Braves of 1914. The Leafs are now on a par with the Yanks with the Newark Bears and move up to 3rd this week.

Following the riot at Chicago yesterday, when Umpire Summers was the centre of an attack and felled by a thrown bottle, Judge Landis, Commissioner of Professional Baseball, offered a reward of $5,000.00 for the apprehension of the person guilty of throwing the bottle that felled Summers. A crowd of some 30,000, saw the Yankees take the long end of a double header from the White Sox at Comiskey Park, Chicago.

BISONS COLLAPSE

Rochester Plays Poor Ball But Made Slight Advance

Mooty, Pattison —HI.h Sf o.m (Ra (By The Associated Press)

Buffalo Bisons, who a week ago had breezed into second place in the International League on a nine-game winning streak and were threatening to cane Rochester Red Wings from the lead, have slipped in a collapse as sudden as their rise.

Since that string ended, the bere has been seen out of Buffalo parks, mostly through weak hitting, and has been moved from second down to fourth again only by the fact Newark Bears are losegraining as badly.

Newark, hitting just as lightly, has lost ten of its last 13 games, including five in a row to Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Bisons' hit bottom yesterday when they managed to get only eight hits in two games as they dropped a doubleheader to Albany Senators, 4-3 while they had good pitching this season, 6-0 and 4-3. At the same time Toronto Leafs turned the Bears 3-1 and 2-1 in a pair of brilliant pitching duels to give the Bears a record of four runs and 34 hits in their last five games.

Manager Harry Bailey blanked the Bisons with three hits while Jake Mooty, Leafs' ace, had a breezing pace with a home run and was on the finishing end of a 1-0 pitching duel with Jim Pattilla, the league record. In the second clash Tommy Dean drove in the winning run as Sensad Jolley belted out two homers to account for the first three Albany runs.

Leafs' Hank Steyer

Newark's pitching came close to matching Toronto's but the Leafs managed to four hits in each game effectively enough to give Jake Mooty the decision over Kemp and Pattison over Jimmy Pattison the edge over Spud Chandler. Newark gave only three hits to end Pattison's five.

Baltimore's Orioles wound up a 1-3 games behind the Bears after splitting a twin bill with Montreal Royals, with Gus Dugas smashing two homers, pap together two singles and Steve Sundra hurling two hit-ters the Orioles got the home run idea and won the first game 6-4 as Woody Abernathy hit homer No 20, Joe Martin contributed two for the Royals.

Rochester's pace setters played hot and cold ball in the battle for their lead anyway as they divided with the reviving Syracuse Stars, the latter's heavy pitching steady ball in a battle with Nube Gribbin's slugging crew. Rochester 3-3 but Rochester came back behind Bob Klinger's win 10-4 as the Chiefs moved in five errors.

Young Canadian Golfer Wins Pro Golf Tourney

Vancouver, July 27 (CP)—Golf-dom sent a fine field into Victoria today for a three-day $3,000 tournament, but one of the last of shoe-smiths went Ken Black, young Canadian professional, to the sports world here Saturday by winning the Victoria Open golf title.

The 24 year old Vancouver boy upset many of the best professionals from the United States and Canada as he finished the 72 holes of the Oak Bay course with a total round of 62, nine under par, to bring his total to 278 and thus win the event by three strokes.

Black also clipped a stroke from the previous course record established only 24 hours before by Lawson Little of Chicago, former British and United States amateur champion, when the young Canadian star-let returned cards of 73 and 75 respectively for the 36 holes.

Two American professionals, Byron Nelson of Ridgewood, N.J., and Ed Thomson, Shawnee-on-Delaware, shared second place and won $1,000 each. Nelson, United States Open champion of Greensboro, N.C., and MacDonald Smith, Nashville, Tenn., were a stoke back with 279 to win $500 each.

Dead Heat Results In 20-Mile Jaunt

London, Ont., July 27 (CP)—Shoulder to shoulder Bob Woodward and Bob Tillson, both Canadian distance runners, the finish line of the 20 mile walking marathon, sponsored by the London Unit of the Army and Navy Veterans, in the Central heat Saturday. Thejr time was three hours, 39 minutes.

The race, starting at Lambeth and finishing at Port Stanley, was a gruelling affair. Not many minutes behind the leaders were Miss Mary Russ, Mrs. Clare Russ and Julia Russ, all of Hamilton. Another further back was Jack Strachouse, 67 year old London veteran.

AMATEUR BALL

(By the Canadian Press)

Ontario's senior amateur baseball teams continued their merry way during the week-end, with most of the games featureless because of a tightness inspired by the approach of playoffs.

Four games were played in the International League, with leaders consolidating their positions. Dunlap, one-time leaders, were downed 8-5 at the hands of the Hamilton section leaders, Moodie Tigers. Dunlap got nine hits off Johnny Anderson and staged a two-run rally in the last inning, but it was too late.

Galt strengthened its hold on first place in the east group by defeating Hamilton Leonards 8-4. Leonards went back to third place in the section.

Also in the league, this time under player management, after the team's sponsors decided to withdraw, Stanley went out against St. Thomas, but willed under 9-3 onslaught by Jim Cornthwaite. The luck again beat the National. Abbie Williamson was forced out in the ninth with a leg injury, and Jo Kalmusky followed him in the box. Stanley's collision with Manager Leon Dean of St. Thomas-Aylmer.

Brantford Red Sox defeated Brantford dropped further behind in the battle for leadership of the east group by dropping a 10-7 decision to Guelph. It was Guelph's third victory of the season and its second over Brantford. A six-run rally in the sixth brought the Leafs victory.

St. Catharines won its 14th victory to continue leading the Niagara district senior league. Tina Sine it was an 11-4 win over Thorold. Manager Eddie Finles allowed Thorold but six hits, and only one player got an extra base blow. St. Catharines' record of victory by scoring six runs in the third.

Port Colborne defeated Merritton 8-6 to advance into the play offs. Merritton had a two-run lead in the ninth when Merritton scored four, but came back in the half with another four to nose out the visitors.

Only one game was played in the Central Ontario League, with Oshawa increasing its lead with a 6-5 inning victory over Peterborough. Moose Mathews held Peterboro to eight hits and fanned seven. Goalie Whitehill pitched nine innings for Peterboro. Spook Scriver ran into trouble in the 12th, when he contributed to the loss with a bad throw to second.

Marion switched off the radion and dropped down on the divan davenport.

"What shall I wear tomorrow?" she demanded. "That Dutch outfit I had last year?"

"That was cute," Homer said.

"Sort of tea-roomy, though.... Maybe, I could get a Columbine costume, have the skirt mostly ribbons and short, show my legs as we used to." She said, "It would be all right to wear a summer dress. If I could run into town first thing in the morning and find something terribly chic and really good, maybe all those rich women would think more of me."

Mindful of his pocket-book, Alpaugh again voted for the Dutch costume.

"No, the more I think of it, the more I feel a grande dame effect is what I should try for—meeting all those Country Club people for the first time as Mrs. Ingram's...."

Considering how important it is, I guess you'll have to let me have some more money, Homer! I saw a dress in a Avenue Store the other day, perfectly plain georgette in deep blue, with just a few sleeves and a high neckline—acres of similar uninteresting house facts of similar uninteresting houses in Astoria, from the McCarthys. Cathleen took a subway train while after a long time turned into an elevated, and after twenty minutes of that released her with half a dozen blocks of home. She was accustomed by this time to the smell, for anything would she live cooped up in a little flat in New York where one never has the sun. Among her day-dreams, however, was one of having the house repainted, white or cream-color, with new shutters at the windows, green or robins' egg blue.

That was out of the question, of course. To pay the never-ending taxes and the interest on the never-ending mortgage was as much as she could do. If times got better and her husband found work, she wouldn't have to turn in her whole salary to shelter and feed the family, and then she could save for the painting job. Cathleen had once suggested to her brother Joe that if he would do the work she would pay for the paint, but he had been taken that nonsense out of her head.

"In the first place, I'd make a mess of it," he said. "In the second place, I couldn't afford to be seen doing a laborer's job like that; and, in the third place, why should I want to do it? I don't give a damn if the shack's painted or not. If I ever get out and hustle it'll be because I see big money in it. Nearly everybody's a sucker in this town, and if you've got brains and use them, you can clean up without working."

"That I wish you'd use yours," she retorted. "If you'd bring in some money without working, maybe I could keep back some of what I have to work to get."

"One of these days I will. I'm looking around now. You wait till I get started!"

That was nearly a year ago and he was still "looking around." He was optimistic provided, as a rule, with pocket money, yet with never a spare dollar the whole family household need demanded it. He spent his mornings in bed but was away from the house, except at meal-times, from about one in the afternoon until all hours of the night.

This evening Cathleen was less irritated than usual by the sight of him sprawled in the couch-hammock on the porch with the evening paper and a cigarette. She was exultant over her temporary promotion at the office; it might lead to anything, to a salary on which she could give her parents and the younger children all they wanted, and even find fresh paint for the dingy walls of the house.

She hurried at once to tell her great news to her mother, who, with the help of twelve-year-old Mary, was dishing up dinner. The kitchen was hot with the steam of cooking and the low afternoon sun, and there were dishes and pots and heavy platter to be carried into the dining-room. Wrinkled and tired, with discouraged eyes, Mrs. McCarthy bent over the stove.

"Why don't you make Joe do a little something?" Cathleen asked for the hundredth time, as she took the platter into which her mother had ladled the stew.

"It's easier to be doing things myself than to be always after him! And it's not fit work for a man, burying himself about a kitchen, neither."

The girl put aside her grievance. "Listen, mother, something wonderful happened today at the office!" She told them of being sent in to the great Ingram, of his getting up to greet her and of the five million dollars he had tossed off like nothing, and of what he said when she took his letters to be signed.

"Of course nothing may come of it, but just suppose I get moved up, get, say, ten dollars a week more...."

"Ten dollars a week more, is it!" Mrs. McCarthy's deep-set eyes widened as Cathleen's were gazing into Heaven. "That could 'a not be doin' with that!"

"But we mustn't build on it, of course. Where's father?"

"He 'as to be out to the speak' to get some beer. Mary, run you and set the table in a wash their hands, and tell Joe the dinner will be on in five minutes."

The McCarthy's ate off an oil-cloth covered table, but the food was sufficient and palatable. There was a stew containing more potatoes than any other ingredient, a dish of greens, an apple pie, beer for the men and milk for all but the three youngest children.

"Cathleen is in line for a raise," Mrs. McCarthy announced proudly as she served the stew.

"Is that so?" Her father shot a curious glance at the girl.

"That's the way of the world now it seems. A man like meself, with all my experience, tramps the streets and can find no work at all, while a slip of a thing like her is in high demand."

Although the lower part of his face was blurred now with a dark stubble, it was easy to see whence Cathleen and Joe had their good looks. Patrick McCarthy, with a magnificent physique, had a shapely head covered with rumpled black hair, touched with gray, a fine brow and deep-blue Irish eyes.

"Everybody says that things are bound to get better soon," Cathleen said quickly.

"It would be as well they should, the last time was foreman fifteen years in pattern works and the only job I could get in line was a watchman's night-watchman in a biscuit factory! With all my experience and my gift for handling men, that ought to be made use of—. We live in queer times entirely, when I am offered fifteen dollars a week to be a sort of watch dog for a biscuit, and they be pushing a young girl up beyond thirty Hardly!"

"A man's a fool that works for chicken-feed." Joe contributed.

"'Tis more than chicken-feed you be eatin' in this house, me boy," said his father grimly.

"It's the education Cathleen has had from the Sisters," Mrs. McCarthy said. "And all the time she spent in the shorthand and book on the top of that, that makes them set such a high value on herself. It's not I will be complaining if Kathleen can bring home more money."

"If I was to have the offer of that watchman's job again, I might be taking it—if it was early days when I turned it down," said McCarthy in a note of longing in his voice.

"If only with father would enjoy the rest in peling," Several times each day Cathleen made the same tactful speech, with slight variations. Here he's worked hard for us all his life, giving me this good start, and when things like this come and there are no jobs to be had, you'd think he might take a holiday with a good conscience. Instead he's among the lucky ones seeing we're among the lucky ones and there's money coming in. You can't pick up a newspaper without reading about how many fine workers are idle through no fault of their own. But things will be better sooner than you think—you see if they don't!"

"Will they then, with the government giving away billions to the bankers and never a thought for the small man at all—" and he rumbled on about the sins of the powerful and rich, and what was the country coming to in the latter end!

The rest of the family ate silently, save for an occasional chorus of agreement. The younger children, though noisy enough outside, had learned to hold their tongues to their father's presence. Joe was habitually taciturn at home. Cathleen had food for thought with her. Mrs. McCarthy was already spending the extra ten dollars a week that, after all, was as yet only a hope.

After dinner Cathleen washed the dishes and Mary dried them. The cleavage between male and female, dross and worker, ran true all down the line in this family.

"If I do get that raise," Cathleen said as she worked, "I'll see if I can make mother spend some of it on a new dress for you to wear to school, Mary."

"Not a chance...Have you noticed Frank's shoes lately? And mother said today, the first two dollars she got hold of, that could be spared, she must get Aloysius some new pants—and I'll say he needs them— You can bet the family will think of lots of other things it needs, before any money gets spent on me!"

Mary knowing her place and sensing the future, spoke without bitterness. The child had none of Cathleen's beauty, but sandy-haired, freckled and with light lashes, Nature had marked her for the family drudge, and Cathleen, at present, saw no way to prevent this. She was emotionally determined that Mary in time, should have opportunities and pleasures. An occasional quarter for the talkies was all she could manage now.

While the tornado raged, Nkima was motionless except for the tear-indused tremors which shook his small body. Soon, however, the thunder rolled away in the distance. The lightning flashes grew dimmer. The rain settled down to a gentle patter. The wind trailed off eastward to new conquests.

She made this offer as she wrung out the dishcloths, and Mary's face flushed with delight.

CHAPTER VI

"Listen," he said. "Can I make a small loan? I got to have a fiver tonight."

"Why?" How do you think I'd be getting five dollars? If I had it I'd give it in to mother so she could pay it on the grocer bill. At this minute, I have exactly one dollar and sixty-five cents."

"You can give me the dollar, can't you?"

She could have thought off hand of a thousand uses for that dollar, but now she handed it over in silence. This was part weakness and part a courageous effort to bolster a dying pride in her brother. Once she had been so proud of him, and the remnant of this pride lingered in her heart and she blamed the times for his moral warping to the nature of which she was only blind.

Cathleen, at the office next morning, waited, at first confidently and then with mounting doubt, for her summons to Ingram's office. Was he not going to send for her, had she failed to satisfy him, would the great opportunity go to one of the other girls? Also, would after the lunch interval did her call come, and when it came at last, office he greeted her with a surprising question.

"What sort of sailor are you, Miss McCarthy?"

"Why—I haven't been on the water much," she said, trying not to laugh. "But I've never been seasick!"

Ingram explained. "There's a party leaving any place today at which I must put in an appearance. There are several letters that should be written, and we can get them out of the way on the yacht while running out to Orangefield. You can take them there. I'll sign them at once and you can mail them when you get back to town. I'll send you in by car."

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

When the great tree which had sheltered them crashed earthward, Tarzan issued Nkima to safety in the branches of another jungle giant. There the little monkey crouched in an agony of terror, whimpering pitifully as the storm whipped the mighty forest in all its overwhelming fury.

While the tornado raged, Nkima was motionless except for the tear-induced tremors which shook his small body. Soon, however, the thunder rolled away in the distance. The lightning flashes grew dimmer. The rain settled down to a gentle patter. The wind trailed off eastward to new conquests.

Sensing the departure of the storm, Nkima ventured in search of Tarzan, his master. But now a new fear gripped him—fear of the great savage creatures of the jungle which had a taste for tender monkey meat. From time to time he called plaintively: "Tarzan! Master! Tarzan!"

It was dark. Lilla Nkima could see nothing beyond a few feet from the end of his generous, sensitive nose. When his master did not answer, he filled with dire forebodings; but presently he found Tarzan thinned to the earth by the fallen tree —silent, and still as the stillness of death!

DRUNKEN DRIVER GIVEN 15 DAYS

Thomas Milne, Toronto, Also Has Permit Cancelled For Month

"This is no ordinary case, this is a very serious matter. These drunken drivers are a menace to the safety of others on the highway and the existence of this court is to deal with them." Thus spoke the driver's permit cancelled for the period, when he appeared before Magistrate F. J. Butler, K.C., to Thomas Milne, 30 year old Toronto resident, who was found guilty of driving a motor truck while intoxicated on Sunday afternoon.

Milne was arrested by Motorcycle Policeman Sam Irving in Shannonville. "I followed this man for over a mile. He was driving a truck nearly 60 miles per hour and staggering all over the highway. He struck the fender of one automobile as he passed it outside of Shannonville," stated Irving in giving the evidence today. Chief Kidd and Municipal Constable Dolan of Shannonville also testified to the former evidence and added Milne was still intoxicated when brought to the police station on Saturday afternoon.

"I admit I had three glasses of beer, but I am not drunk. What will become of my three children?" asked Milne of the court. "You should have thought of that before," added B. C. Donnan K.C., local Crown Attorney, as he pointed out the seriousness of the matter to His Worship.

"There have been ample warnings issued throughout the province regarding the practice of driving motor cars, while intoxicated. This is a very serious matter. In view of the evidence of the officer, who says the accused's car was zig-zagging about the highway and driving at no excessive rate of speed. The courts have decided to no longer have issued nonsense warnings regarding this matter. Drunken driving and we intend to increase the sentences until this menace of drunken driving is done away with," warned His Worship as he doubled the customary sentence in such cases.

Steals Hankies In Police Cells

There is no longer honor among thieves, at least that is what Sergeant Albert Wood, one of the local police department, is led to believe after an incident that occurred when a prisoner stole three handkerchiefs from a fellow-inmate at the police station on Sunday morning. After the six inmates, who had been arrested on charges lodging at the police station on Saturday night, were released on Sunday morning, a search was being held on a miner charge, complainant Sergeant Wood found that three handkerchiefs he was using to sleep upon, had been stolen from them when I was looking out of the window," Deline informed the Sergeant.

P. C. Arnott was dispatched to apprehend the culprit, and succeeded managed to round up five of them. When they returned to the police station, Sergeant Booth found it his duty of searching the men little article would escape him. Deline's "kerchiefs...when suddenly one of them produced the three articles and pulled out the three missing handkerchiefs.

"Is this what you're looking for," asked the transient with a rather embarrassed look in his eyes. "I am sure. You get back into the cells sternly ordered Sergeant Wood. He returned the "kerchiefs, but let the learning at his way one hour later, after giving him a long lecture himself for stealing and more especially so in a police station.

POLICE COURT

The number thirteen proved unlucky for some today as 13 were fined in the police court before Magistrate R. J. Butler's local police court.

Charges of the theft of an automobile between Agnes Graves and Merrill Woodcock were dismissed when Miss Graves testified that Friday as was a charge of the theft of a motor car laid by Everton Woodcock which found a similar description, of the car the local young man.

Three charges, arrested on Saturday, appeared and the customary fine imposed in two of the cases. The third charge of theft of a first offence against an old offender from Trenton/Napanee. The latter time this year this man has been convicted of similar charges. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. "Yes, it is very serious. Perhaps I had better attempt to get him for sentence until Friday," concluded His Worship.

A man giving his name as J. G. White, Oshawa, was fined $5 and costs guilty to a charge of fraud, arising out of the conveyance moved to Belleville by Mr. Tweed.

"Our company went broke, but I am in a position to make restitution," the defendant informed the court. "You make restitution and appear in police court to answer once on Friday," ordered the court as White was released on $100 bail upon his own bail.

James Smith, 46, of Toronto, pleaded not guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the premises of the Belleville Creameries with the intent to commit an indictable offence. The matter was enlarged until Friday at the request of Mr. Donnan, certain Crown witnesses being absent.

Charles Deline and Mlle Woods, Thurlow, appeared on charges of assaulting each other and causing by harm. Deline pleaded not guilty, but testimony submitted proved to His Worship that the pair were equally guilty of fighting. The matter arose out of a family difference, Deline having been a resident at Woods' home for some say, but was ordered out on Saturday. The matter was investigated by Provincial Constable Thos. Robinson on Saturday after the alleged assault had occurred. The officer later revealed today, that the older Woods had been fined earlier during embargo of Belleville and that Deline had been fined Wood charger during the fracas.

"There is no doubt but that this condition today in Prince Edward County is directly traceable to the tractored shell received, when the bicycle he was riding crashed into a truck driven by Mr. Gasow, owner of the Picton Creamery on the Wellington highway, on Saturday afternoon.

Allison was proceeding down the hill immediately in the rear of a convoy and failed to notice the oncoming truck. Swerving to the left in an attempt to negotiate the Mary Street corner he crashed heading into the truck and was thrown heavily to the road striking his head o nthe asphalt.

He was rushed to the hospital in an unconscious state where examination revealed his injuries to be critical. He was reported by the doctor ear Hosme found in his pockets.

Chief of Police Biddle investigated the accident and corroborated in his statement the bicycle was found to be without lights and undamaged. Gasow was not held.

Wimbledon, July 27 (C.P. Britain opened her defence of the title by winning both singles matches on Saturday. This also left Australia 2-1 advantage in matches.

Crawford and Quist, who are both leading singles players, made a formidable pair in defeating the seasoned British pair four sets.

Four Local Boys Caught in Act of Stealing Apples

Four local teen aged boys, three of whom are alleged by police to have been implicated in the theft of bicycles when caught in the act of stealing apples from an orchard were finally walked into the police station early last evening and admitted their misdemeanors, according to a told to report to Chief Kidd this morning.

Eugene Kerr, 47½ Alexander Street, arrived home at noon on the days' absence to find four bicycles parked alongside of his home. Subsequent investigation revealed that the young lads were in his garden and stealing the fruit. One of the lads suddenly became aware of Mr. Kerr's presence and managed to escape, leaving his bicycle while the remaining three of the quartette were held by the irate owner. The bicycles and beat a hasty retreat. Constables Gostick and Bateman negotiated the trouble, later confiscating the three bicycles.

Upon delivering the bicycles at the police station, however, the guardian, Chief Kidd, unwisely watching all proceedings from another, hastily marched into the police station to find the lads dismissed up. The lads were permitted to take their bicycles and left with three other various homes, but were instructed to report back to the chief constable this morning.

Possibility No Party Will Have a Majority In Manitoba Election

Premier Bracken Loses Six Seats Already to Other Parties

STUBBS RUNS WELL

Two Cabinet Ministers Elected and Four Ahead in Voting

Winnipeg, July 28 (CP)—The Liberal-Progressive total of members elected to the Manitoba legislature reached 11 today as the government party of Premier John Bracken fought to recover losses to Conservative and Social Credit candidates.

Conservatives and Social Credit standard-bearers had taken seven seats from the Liberal-Progressives but the victory of C. H. Smellie in Rhineland by a majority of only 25 over W. G. Hrynh, Conservative, left Premier Bracken's party a seat held in the last legislature by an Independent.

Majorities for government candidates in practically all constituencies they had held in many cases dwindled down and the premier saw his majority of 26 in the last house slipping away. There was a possibility no party would have a clear majority.

How Parties Stood.

Conservatives elected seven members, Social Credit three, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation one and Independent one. Twenty-four other seats in the 55 to be decided in the provincial election yesterday remained in doubt.

Special counts in about 30 constituencies will be required to decide the final outcome where the single transferable system of voting. They include Brandon, conceded to the Conservatives, and Dauphin, conceded to the Liberal-Progressives. A clear majority will be attained by a candidate to be elected.

Two Cabinet members retained their seats and two others were leading in the race for re-election last night. Hon. R. A. Hoey, Minister of Education, was losing out to Herbert Sullens, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, in a three-cornered fight in St. Clements.

Ministers Retain Seats

Hon. W. B. Clubb, Minister of Public Works, was re-elected in Morris and Hon. L. S. Griffiths, Minister of Health, retained his seat in Russell. Hon. J. S. McDiarmid, Minister of Natural Resources, and Hon. W. J. Major, Attorney-General, were leading in the race to be elected in Winnipeg.

Premier Bracken and Hon. E. A. McPherson, Provincial Treasurer, are candidates in deferred elections Aug. 19 in The Pas and Souris-Lake.

The run away victory of L. St. George Stubbs, Independent, in Winnipeg South gave the voting. Removed three years ago from the County Court Bench on charges of conduct unbecoming a judge following his criticism of law enforcement and the Bracken administration, Stubbs topped the Winnipeg poll to set a record of 24,871 first choices.

10 Members in Winnipeg

Winnipeg elects 10 members under proportional representation and Mr. Stubbs' total put him far over the quota which is expected to be around 7,000. The final first count has not been made and the surplus of is the quota will not be established. It is arrived at by dividing the number of seats plus one into the total vote and adding one.

In the ridings outside Winnipeg, where the single transferable vote system was in force, a candidate must be reached by one candidate to gain election. Where no majority is reached on the first count, the low candidate is eliminated and his second choices redistributed.

Conservatives won four seats from the Liberal-Progressives and Social Credit nominees were conceded two. Errick F. Willis, Conservative leader, was given a majority of 1,811 a majority of 378 over Russell Bargrist, Liberal-Progressive, in a new seat of the seats lost by the Government to the Conservatives.

Making its first bid for votes, the Manitoba Social Credit League saw its first six put over after the constituency of St. George was conceded to Miss Salome Halcrow, one of four women candidates. Gilbert Plains was added to the Social Credit list when Dr. E. P. Fox won a majority on the first count in a three-cornered fight. He collected 18 votes more than his two opponents.

Party Standing

Standing by parties in the Manitoba Provincial election at 12 p.m. (D.S.T.) today:

Independent elected	1
Liberal-Progressives leading	1
Conservatives leading	4
C.C.F. leading	1

Total	55

After the election of 1932, Premier John S. Bracken, head of the Government since 1922, held a majority of 26. The party standing at that time was: Liberal-Progressives, 36; Conservatives, 10; C. C. F., 5; Independents, 2; Total, 55.

At dissolution, the party standing was: Liberal-Progressives, 36; Conservatives, 9; C.C.F., 5; Independents, 3; vacant, 2; Total 55.

Premier Bracken had support in Winnipeg slip and other parties like wise failed to get the usual number of first choices—a result of the landslide for Mr. Stubbs. Running next to Mr. Stubbs was James Litterck, a communist and district representative.

Col. S. H. Webb, for a dozen years Mayor of Winnipeg, was leading the Conservative candidates in Winnipeg and Mr. Major topped the Liberal-Progressives. The C.C.F. election put four Winnipeg members in the House—the first to the Liberal-Progressives. A clear majority will be attained by a candidate to be elected.

Two Cabinet members retained their seats and two others were leading in the race for re-election last night. Hon. R. A. Hoey, Minister of Education, was losing out to Herbert Sullens, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, in a three-cornered fight in St. Clements.

Ministers Retain Seats

Hon. W. B. Clubb, Minister of Public Works, was re-elected in Morris and Hon. L. S. Griffiths, Minister of Health, retained his seat in Russell. Hon. J. S. McDiarmid, Minister of Natural Resources, and Hon. W. J. Major, Attorney-General, were leading in the race to be elected in Winnipeg.

Premier Bracken and Hon. E. A. McPherson, Provincial Treasurer, are candidates in deferred elections Aug. 19 in The Pas and Souris-Lake.

The run away victory of L. St. George Stubbs, Independent, in Winnipeg South gave the voting. Removed three years ago from the County Court Bench on charges of conduct unbecoming a judge following his criticism of law enforcement and the Bracken administration, Stubbs topped the Winnipeg poll to set a record of 24,871 first choices.

10 Members in Winnipeg

Winnipeg elects 10 members under proportional representation and Mr. Stubbs' total put him far over the quota which is expected to be around 7,000. The final first count has not been made and the surplus of is the quota will not be established. It is arrived at by dividing the number of seats plus one into the total vote and adding one.

In the ridings outside Winnipeg, where the single transferable vote system was in force, a candidate must be reached by one candidate to gain election. Where no majority is reached on the first count, the low candidate is eliminated and his second choices redistributed.

Conservatives won four seats from the Liberal-Progressives and Social Credit nominees were conceded two. Errick F. Willis, Conservative leader, was given a majority of 1,811 a majority of 378 over Russell Bargrist, Liberal-Progressive, in a new seat of the seats lost by the Government to the Conservatives.

Making its first bid for votes, the Manitoba Social Credit League saw its first six put over after the constituency of St. George was conceded to Miss Salome Halcrow, one of four women candidates. Gilbert Plains was added to the Social Credit list when Dr. E. P. Fox won a majority on the first count in a three-cornered fight. He collected 18 votes more than his two opponents.

WISH FULFILLED

Pilgrim Dies From Heart Attack on Boat Crossing Channel

London, July 28 (CP)—A war widow from Canada who said her last wish was to see her husband's grave in France was dead today, a few hours after fulfilling that wish.

Mrs. Rosina Kemp of Calgary, one of the pilgrims to the unveiling Sunday of the Canadian Vimy Ridge Memorial, told fellow-pilgrims that for 20 years she had longed to see her husband's grave. During the voyage from Canada she said:

"When I have seen my husband's grave I shall be prepared to die."

Returning to the steamer Andania at Le Havre yesterday after visiting the grave, the emotional excitement seemed to have sapped her strength, although she appeared happy. Hours later she died aboard the Antonia of a heart attack.

AMMUNITION IS FOUND IN CAR

Vehicle Registered in Name of One of Black Legionnaires

Detroit, July 28 (AP)—Discovery of 150 rounds of ammunition in an automobile belonging to a Black Legionnaire accused of killing a negro added impetus today to inquisitive investigations of the night riding terrorists.

Police said a mechanic, repairing an automobile damage in a street accident, found the cartridges in the bullets. The automobile was registered in the name of Charles Rouse.

Rouse is one of five defendants who will undergo a court examination today on charges of kidnapping and murdering Charles Coleman 42-year-old Detroit negro whose body was found in a swamp near Pinckney, Mich., in May, 1326.

The others are Harry Davis, Black Legion "Colonel"; Ervin D. Lee, John Bannerman and James Guy Lankenheimer. They are accused by Dayton Dean, confessed slayer and "confessing" accomplice, of luring Coleman to the swamp and shooting him in a mercy-killing provocation, for a thrill.

World Growing Warmer Trend Upward Since 1850

Scientist Says Rising Temperature May Mean Decline in Population—Trend Seen in Animals

Cincinnati, July 28 (AP) — An authority on the relation of weather to human behaviour advanced today the theory that the world is getting warmer.

Basing his observation on extensive experiments with animals, he asserted the trend to higher temperatures, if continued, would provide an effective method of birth control.

Dr. Clarence A. Mills, director of experimental medicine at the University of Cincinnati, said he traced the period of rising temperatures back to 1850. Before that, temperatures tended downward over a period of two or three centuries.

"During the period of generally decreasing temperature, the greatest rise in world population was terrific," he said. "As we move into a cycle of higher temperatures, we conceivably may reach a gradual decrease in world population. Fertility of animals goes down as temperatures rise."

PARTS OF DIARY GIVEN IN COURT

Mary Astor, Actress, Striving to Gain Custody of Daughter

Los Angeles, July 28 (AP)—Mary Astor's divorced husband pointed to what he represented as her diary today to show the screen beauty admitted "her gross immoral conduct" for the future enlightenment of their four-year-old daughter.

Dr. Franklin Thorpe, Hollywood physician, made the charge in a sensational answer to his former wife's suit to regain custody of their daughter.

Earlier, in a deposition, Dr. Thorpe declined to answer whether he had kept a diary.

Mrs. Astor, 1935, he had "stolen two diaries belonging to Miss Astor" and threatened to publish them.

His counsel advised him not to reply and he was likewise silent on questions concerning Miss Astor's charge, that he already had a wife when he married her.

Miss Astor "is an unfit and improper person to have the custody of Mary Ann," Dr. Thorpe declared in his answer. Excerpts from intimate diary entries, inserted by the trim actress on February 6, 1935, were given in this book I don't know," the diary was read. "I'll scrub floors for me for some reason. I am such a rotten person. I guess that I love to tear myself down—my thoughts down—so they won't go adding of in all directions.

"Then, too, maybe, Marilyn sometime will come to know what sort of a person her mother was, and maybe she will be consoled, when she makes mistakes and gets into jams to know that her mother was a champion at making mistakes. I blush a little (very little) at the idea of reading some of the stuff in this book. I have been and am such a fool."

BOY DETAINED AT TRIAL CLOSE

16 Year Old Boy is Tried at Old Bailey

LONDON, July 28.—(CP Cable)—A jury in Old Bailey Court today convicted a 16-year-old Brantford boy of manslaughter. He was ordered detained for two years at such a place and under such conditions as might be decided by the Home Secretary.

The boy, whose name was not made public, went on trial yesterday on a charge of murder arising out of the death of Arthur Hodgkinson, Walcroft, New Pal Ground. The prosecution reduced the charge to manslaughter.

The jury deliberated 35 minutes before returning its verdict.

C. G. Du Cann, counsel for the accused, in his address to the jury said Hodgson's death was a case of misadventure. It was not a catastrophe. The shooting was not deliberate, but a pure accident.

Du Cann said the boy went to shoot rats. He saw Hodgson, then he slipped and fell, the gun accidentally firing. Hodgson staggered and fell. The boy fled, overcome with terror.

The prisoner's counsel said if the boy had flinched help and had said that he accidentally shot Hodgson the shooting might easily have been accepted, but unfortunately he told what amounted to a number of falsehoods.

Testifying in his own defence, the boy said: "I shot at two rats but missed. When I saw Hodgson he stumbled over a brick or something. I seemed to pull the trigger. The gun went off. He fell and I ran away."

Du Cann asked: "Did you intend the gun to go off?"

"No, Sir," said the boy.

He added he was so frightened it didn't occur to him that Hodgson might be badly injured and in need of help. The watchman died later in the hospital of a spinal wound.

SUDDEN WEALTH TO HIRED MAN OF KINGSTON ONTARIO

Edwin P. Lally Will Collect $25,000 From an Invention

GETS BUSINESS

Disappeared Shortly After Giving Formula to Friend

Detroit, Mich., July 28 (CP)—Edwin P. Lally, who has been working as a hired man on a farm north of Kingston, Ont., will return to Detroit next Wednesday or Thursday in an effort to collect $25,000 and 51 per cent. of a flourishing business, he said today.

Lally, according to Arthur H. Rice, an attorney, is the inventor of a formula used in treatment of a skin disease known as psoriasis. The treatment, he said, is called Landa name and has netted its backers $100,000 in a year, he said.

Lally, who disappeared shortly after he sold the formula to the attention of Fred B. Collier, an attorney, was found last Sunday by Rice and Collier.

"Last Wednesday a man came into the office and said that if I was looking for a man named Lally," Rice said, "he thought he knew where he could find the inventor. I got in touch with Collier and got the greeting directions from this fellow, we set out for the farm."

Lally, who lived in about 20 miles off the main road and there was Lally dressed in tattered overalls. We took him to dinner and he admitted that he had done a little invention in Detroit in 1931 but had never made any money for it. We spent a dollar for the meal and he couldn't get over it."

Lally Tells Story

"That's a lot of money to spend on a meal," Lally said. He didn't realize that he was a wealthy man now.

A suit against Ben Kaufman, head of the Ray Jewelry Co., in soon Irvin and Martin, and the Detroit laboratories of Detroit has been before Circuit Court Commissioner Edward W. Stundtich for a month. The suit was brought by Lally who demanded an accounting of the money he was alleged to have from the sale of the product and the formula and says he says they agreed to do when they organized a firm.

Lally who was an illiterate watch repair man, developed the formula in his hobby, called the formula in 1928 and 1929. Collier said he interested Ben Kaufman in the product.

Money Advanced

Kaufman advanced $10,000 to interest Collier in the product and the formula, with agreement that Lally was to receive 51 per cent. of the stock and Kaufman the remaining shares equally. Lally disappeared a few days later, Collier said.

Kaufman has testified that he advanced $10,000 to Lally for the use of formula and then he disappeared. Collier who knew the formula secured from Lally, Rice said. Rice and his ward I. Kaufman of New York, a brother of Ben Kaufman, head of the Ray Jewelry Co., a chain of firms across the principal cities. He has refused to come to Detroit to testify, Commissioner Schmidtke said.

The case will be resumed Wednesday morning when Lally will appear before Schmidtch to testify. He is invested in the formula and that he is entitled to his share of the profits.

Ghost on Each Floor of House; Spirit Debunker Goes on Job

Jos. Dunninger Has a 'Pip' of a Task in York-ville

4 GHOSTS THERE

New York, July 28 (AP)—Joseph Dunninger, magician-magician and spirit debunker, said today he was starting a "house debaunting" expedition in the metropolis.

"My first job is a pip," he said. "An unfurnished four-storey building in Yorkville. It houses a ghost on each floor."

Dunninger recently offered $10,000 to anyone who can lead him to a ghost which he cannot expose as frauds or duplicate through trickery.

He is custodian of the science and invention fund offered spiritualistic media under the same conditions. His library on the subject is available by his late friend, Harry Houdini.

Dunninger said the Yorkville "haunted house" is an eight-family affair.

It has echoed nightly, say believers in ghosts, with the alternate moans and kindly chatter of an aged woman murdered by her husband of the fourth floor; the gasps of a third-floor tenant who drowned in the cries of a second-floor suicide, and brawlings of a patron murdered in a ground floor speakeasy.

BATTLE ON BORDER

Rebel Barracks at Loyola Is Surrendered To-day

Bordeaux, France, July 28 (AP)—Four British-made airliners were detained today by French authorities here while they investigated a report the planes were headed for Morocco to transport rebel troops to Spain.

Aviation sources said the French prefect has ordered the British cargo ships keeping the planes at Bordeaux airfield "until their papers of identity have been verified."

Air authorities indicated they had been informed the planes were sold to the rebel commander, General Francisco Franco, for use in shuttling troops between Morocco and the mainland.

They said the airliners were capable of transporting 2,000 men in one day, making 20 or 40 trips across the 15-mile passage.

One report said the planes planned to fly to Burgos, rebel headquarters, but another said they proceed to Lisbon, en route to Centa, the report had it.

Shells Explode Near Ship.

Mola refused to admit or submit the possibility of defeat of the rebellion. "We expect to get to Madrid Thursday or Friday at the latest," he said, smiling confidently.

Fakher Planes Leave Bordeaux.

Bordeaux, France, July 28 (CP)—Three Br.-made Fokker transports piloted by British aviators took off from Bordeaux for the interior of Spain.

They were reported to have been purchased by the Spanish financier Juan March, reportedly one of the richest men in Spain, for the rebel chief revolt. The planes arrived from England last night.

Another British plane left Le Bourget airport also apparently headed for Spain.

The pilots refused to reveal their destination. Some were loaded so heavy that they were not going to Madrid or Burgos, Portugal.

Army Deserts Blown Up.

Spanish government forces reported they had captured a train of ammunition dumps in the Guadarrama Mountains, but the insurgents said they had destroyed a train of supplies with heavy casualties.

Loyalists claimed complete Letelo domination in Madrid and four important provincial cities and said loyal troops were winning in a half dozen other places, with aerial attacks intensified.

A train of cannon signalled a new battle in the border country south of Hendaye, France.

One report said the rebels had attacks at Loyola, near Hendaye and San Sebastian, but confirmation was unconditionally.

Government forces took up positions overlooking the rebel strongheld at Irun and prepared for a new bombardment.

Havas News Agency said Sir Henry Chilton, British Ambassador to Spain, had informed the British Foreign Office he will remain at the embassy's summer headquarters staff in Biarritz, on the border opposite Hendaye, in Zarauz, 13 miles away.

United States Ambassador Claude Bowers told the state department at Washington he would establish a "floating embassy aboard the cutter Cayuga.

Anticipate Sale Of Thousands Of Radio Sets

Many signs of business recovery are becoming daily, but no surer sign of a growing prosperity can be found than in the activity displayed by manufacturing concerns producing articles that might not be deemed absolute necessities. For instance radio manufacturers report a flood of advance orders that shows confidence in the present and future prosperity of Canada. John Hibbard, local manager for the Robert Simpson Company, returned recently from attending a convention of radio dealers in Toronto, and states that orders were placed by dealers at the convention for 10,000 of the new models, as well as budgeting themselves to sell about 60,000 during the year. Features noted by Mr. Hibbard in the new models include lower prices, greater efficiency of short wave, suppression of noise and elimination of outside interference, built in antenna. Elimination of B and C batteries in battery sets, operating direct and entirely from a storage battery, is expected to be a popular feature with battery set owners. This storage battery can be recharged with a windmill, operated almost entirely eliminating the expense of battery upkeep. Other interesting new features were noticed. Emphasis was placed at the convention on plans for a very extensive newspaper advertising program to start immediately. Mr. Hibbard is of the opinion that many radio set owners will turn in their old sets this season and get new models on account of the many improvements.

ANDREW DOWNEY WIDELY MOURNED

Impressive Final Rite Paid Prominent Crookston Resident

Residents of Crookston and surrounding districts were profoundly shocked to learn when they learned of the sudden passing of one of the most highly respected pioneers of that section, Andrew J. Downey, who succumbed following a seizure on Saturday morning.

Although not enjoying the best of health, Mr. Downey was sufficient to warrant his retirement from active labor. He worked daily on his farms and had walked a short distance to one of his properties when death suddenly overtook him. He had talked with neighbors the night previous.

His sudden demise was a distinct shock to his many friends and has created a vacancy in many circles of activity which will be hard to fill.

A prominent Mason, Orangeman and United Church man, he exerted his influence in further each community. He took great interest in the well being of his county and was for many years a member of the Hungerford Township Council. The manufacturing, social and vital varied associations held a peculiar interest for him, and his insight into this industry was valuable to the community of the Whitelake Cheese Factory, of which he held the office of secretary.

He was a member of the third generation of the Downey family, and resided all his life on the family homestead, which was one of the primitive forests by his grandfather. STEADY PRICES ON LOCAL MART

Potatoes Drop in Value to $1.50 a Bag in Light Trading

Steady prices in the majority of staple vegetables lines with a few increases showing a slight downward trend featured a slow early-week market here this morning, while growers vendors retained their weekend prices of $1.30 per 11 qt. basket of peas and fifty cents the peck, a new low was reached, when a fairly large quantity of early Ontario was offered at forty cents the peck with bushel lots going at $1.50.

Late rains apparently will have little effect on the potato crop, according to some vendors. Prices of the red and blue varieties of this fruit have remained firm for the past week at fifteen cents the box or $3 per bushel, with the latter going at two bores for thirty five cents. There is little indication that prices will drop in price will drop in any extent.

Truck growers were disappointed at this morning's mart. According to one fish dealer, this section of the province is the most prices wholesaling vendors are fighting any. Whitefish, however was in evidence moving fairly well at seventeen cents the pound.

Montmorency and black cherries also retained their weekend prices, morning slowly at sixty five and seventy cents the basket respectively.

Yellow and white corn is improving in quality and quantity, commanding prices ranging from twenty five to thirty five cents the dozen ears.

"Duchess" cooking apples made their initial appearance this morning selling at twenty five cents the basket and fifty cents a peck. The first consignment of Yorkly sold early at two berry boxes for 15 cents.

Huckleberries of a fine quality were in evidence at the remarkably thirty cents the quart and $2.75 per dozen quart baskets.

Fresh vegetables were plentiful. Field grown tomatoes were offered at $1.25 per large basket, while beet and cauliflower ranged in price from five cents to fifteen cents a head with one particularly good sample of cabbage going at twenty cents. Belated green peas put in an appearance at a new low price of twenty cents the quart. Celery was offered at two stalks for fifteen cents with dozen lots going at ninety cents. Cucumbers sold at ten cents; new beets, carrots at five cents a bunch and string beans five and ten cents per berry box rounded out a fairly sluggish market. Eggs were offered from 20 to 22 cents the dozen. Few broilers were in evidence and moved slowly at 1.00 the pair.

WOOLLENS, CHIEF ARTICLES OF TRADE

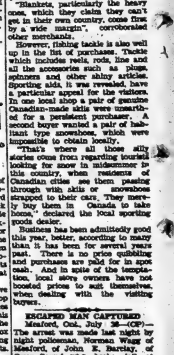
Tourist Business Much Better Than in Previous Years

What are the average purchases made by tourists when visiting the city and district?

Woollens, blankets, light weight suits, woollens of all descriptions, including suits and overcoats of that material. Ready-made shoes, (which they particularly specify), neckties, shirts and socks, declare storekeepers, who are questioned.

Articles, particularly the heavy ones, which they claim they can't get at home, are those bought from by a wide margin", corroborated other merchants.

However, fishing tackle is also well up in the list of purchases. Tackle which include reels, rods, line and all the accessories such as plugs, spinners and other lures of articles. Sporting aids, it was revealed, have a particular appeal for the visitors. One man in a shop a pair of genuine Canadian-made skis were unearthed, for a pre-season purchase. A second buyer wanted a pair of bathing suits, which were, unable to be immediately obtained locally.



"That's where we lose out," storekeepers state from regarding tourists looking for snow in midsummer to the extent, particularly, where Canadian cities see them passing through with the heavy paraphernalia strapped to their cars. They merely buy them in Canada take them home and discard the heavy sporting goods dealer.

Belleville has admittedly good this year, better, according to many than in the past few years, especially past. There is no price quibbling and purchases are paid for in spot cash, and in spite of the tempting lure, local story owners have not curtailed prices to suit tourists, when dealing with the visiting buyers.

STREET NAME FOR HERO

In Valenciennes, France, is today a street named after Sergeant Hugh Cairns, V.C. of Saskatoon, who died after making heroic efforts which ultimately brought about the liberation of that French city. On Saturday the proud mother and father of the fallen hero, received this honor in the name of the heroic son. The Avenue de la Tourelle has been rechristened in honor of the feats of Sergeant Cairns.

The idea was promoted by Gabriel Fierard of Valenciennes who issued a brochure dealing with the liberation of Valenciennes. He referred to records of the Battle of Mount Houy Nov. 1, 1918 which resulted in the capture by the Fourth Canadian Division of Valenciennes from the German army of occupation. Cairns performed heroic deeds on that day in the streets of Marly, a suburb of the city. The citizens took up the question with the Canadian Legion and General Ross, communicated with Hon. Philippe Roy, Canadian Minister in Paris, informing him that Canadian ex-servicemen would view with pride and favor such a recognition. Then Saskatoon made it possible for the aged parents to go.

Streets and squares are honored for noted citizens and it is claimed by Fierard sometimes for obscure politicians. But now a French Avenue is named for a Canadian liberator.

That is a proud day for the parents to find a strange city enshrining the family name in a street. The thought is ennobling. So do French people show their esteem for Canada.

PASTORS PROTEST

German pastors have drawn up a protest to Herr Adolf Hitler, on the manner in which the Reichstatthalter is addressed in German documents as if he had god-like powers. They say "We must express our concern to the Fuehrer and Reich chancellor over the fact that he is often addressed in the newspapers day after day, only to God. His opinions are being made not only the basis for political decisions, but for decisions regarding morality and right. He himself is surrounded with the dignity of a priest and even of an intermediary between God and man."

This is a development which few can understand outside of Germany. Of course the superman notion has long been held by Germany and there is no doubt that the defeat of the Germany war plans in 1914-1918 made the Germans so defeat-conscious that they have more than ever cultivated this sop to their feelings that they are superman.

If a whole nation believes itself ordained to the supreme place in the sun, it may indeed become dangerous. Balance is one of the safeguards of a people as of an individual.

RECORD NOT FIRST CONCERN

Record-making is not the first concern of the Queen Mary in her crossing of the Atlantic. Since she made her first voyage there has been speculation as to what she can do. This last trip hung up a record, though her commander still does not claim the blue ribbon of the Atlantic supremacy. For a shorter run of 3,098 miles from Cherbourg to New York the Queen Mary made an average speed of 29.61 knots against the Normandie's 29.1 from Southampton for 3,192 miles.

The Queen Mary is used for regular service rather than title-getting, though probably the blue ribbon of the sea will come in time.

NEW WEALTH CREATED

A new treasury vault has been opened in Northwestern Ontario which this year has reached a production of seven million dollars a year in gold. This development of the couple of years largely draws the highest praise from the Port Arthur News-Chronicle, which speaks in these terms of the importance of this wealth:

"Thus is Northwestern Ontario justifying the faith and the prophesies of people who for decades have been making the prediction that there must be something in those rocks, that nature in her usually wise provisions, would never place them without giving them something of value to mankind.

"The figures will prompt others to suggest that they warrant larger expenditures . . . . . for the development of roads and other forms of communication.

"There is truth in that; but we can almost imagine someone making the prompt reply that the people who get all this money out of the mines should do some of the spending themselves and not leave it to the Government. That, too, is good logic and it will bear examination. In this examination it will be found that it is the common people, the workers, farmers, businessmen and others who receive most of the gold. Only a small part of it goes to or is being distributed among the shareholders of the mining companies. The whole Province shares in the new wealth. Therefore, while every mining company should be expected to do a reasonable amount of such work on its own behalf the bulk of it is up to the chief beneficiaries which are the people at large.

"THE LAKE"

Where forests thick embrace the lake,
Where rye'er relief by field or road;
Where cottages are far apart,
I've built my humble, warm abode.

I watch the seasons as they change,
Each one its' beauty I can see.
Far better than the strangers can,
For it is all a part of me.

Now as I write, the woods are green
In summer's modest cloak,
But soon I know that this will change,
When all have gone but common folk.

Some morning I shall wake to see,
The splash of paintbrush on each leaf,
And hear the wind in sadness sigh,
Because Fall's stay has been so brief.

And then he'll whisper to the lake,
As calmly now it rests and sleeps,
And tell it of the ermine cloak,
It too shall wear when winter creeps.

And so I watch each beauty fade,
A tarrier later than the most,
Who packed their things when winds grew chill,

—C. H. Greer.

In this respect we would like to draw attention to the splendid response made by citizens to the request made through this newspaper of Mr. George Reid, that the citizens generally decorate their premises for the Twelfth of July Orange Celebration here. The city was gaily decorated for the occasion and some citizens expended considerable money to help give Belleville a gala appearance and express a cordial welcome to the thousands of visitors who thronged the city that day. Mr. Reid had charge of publicity and other matters in regard to the celebration and certainly did a good job. In a brief address at the Fair Grounds during the celebration Mr. Reid took occasion to express his pleasure and gratification at the response to the request for decoration of homes and business places, and thanked all who contributed to the success of the celebration. It is a matter of civic pride that citizens, regardless of religious beliefs joined together heartily in making Belleville a thing of beauty and a joy forever in memory for the visitors of July twelfth.

TO MUCH QUINTUPLETS SEZ YOU! Some folks say they are tired and sick of all this talk about the Dionne Quintuplets. However there are others who profit by the publicity and say more power to it. Last Thursday, 1936 automobiles were checked on the highway leading to Callander and the Quints. The cars contained 7,000 people hailbent to see the babes famed in song, screen and story. Many also wanted to see "The Country Doctor". Dr. Dafoe, that quiet soft-spoken medico who carried on through the horse and buggy days and thought nothing of a drive of twenty miles or so on a winter's night with the thermometer hitting the low spots anywhere between fifteen and thirty. Daddy Dionne is also making use of a curiosity while Ma Dionne and her new baby may be able to capitalize on curiosity for many simoleons this summer,—and is North Bay cashing in on the Quints.

Motorcycle Roadrace

Belleville, Ont., July 24, 1936.

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

There has been a little controversy concerning the forthcoming road race to be held here in Belleville Labor Day and we thought it the citizens of Belleville understood the race a little more fully regarding the benefits and advertising Belleville and the merchants would derive from the race, it would help to out.

In the first place we do not think the citizens know how big an event this is. Riders and spectators will be coming from all over Ontario, Quebec and Eastern States as it will be advertised in said districts, also throughout the British Empire as it will be in all British Motor Cycle magazines. So you can see how much advertising Belleville will receive from this race.

We expect at least fifteen to twenty thousand people here on Labor Day.

These races are held all over the British Empire including Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa. In Australia the race is held through the streets of Perth, in South Africa the streets of Cape Town.

The world's championship race of this kind is held by England on the Isle of Man and passes through several towns. The authorities there think it's so important that they grant £25,000 for prize money, etc.

In all cases the governments in other countries look forward to the event and we hope the citizens of Belleville will not condemn this event until it has been given a fair trial.

As this is the first official Canadian Championship road race to be held in Canada, Belleville will be ahead of all other cities in this event.

If any citizens would like to know further particulars of this race regarding safety and rules of racing we would gladly go into details with them. We apologize very sincerely to the citizens if we caused them any inconvenience Sunday afternoon as we were taking pictures of the course for advertising purposes which had to leave Belleville Sunday night.

If any motor cyclist causes a disturbance around the course the Quinte Motor Cycle Club will be much obliged if their license number is taken and forwarded to the club or to the police department.

Yours truly,
Quinte Motor Cycle Club.
R. Bristol, President.
O. Pepper, Secretary.

Institute and Foods

To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir—

I wonder how many people realize the importance of the work done by the Women's Institutes for the young women of our district. The last two years the Institutes has carried on project work for the girls up to twenty-five years of age such as Dressmaking, Meal Planning and Home Canning. This year our branch chose the project called "Tea Supper Club", which teaches us to plan a well balanced meal for supper especially for all seasons of the year and also many other things connected with suppers. An exhibit will be made at Belleville Fair.

Under this project we are required to write an article on "Foods for Health" to be printed in the local paper.

During the warm weather salads provide a way for the housewife of preparing a meal without much fire to warm up the all ready hot home.

Indeed they should take an important part in the menu, for in summer they can be had in abundance, fresh from the garden. Home grown vegetables are so much nicer than imported ones and can be had at a much lower cost.

The health benefits of vegetables were known long before we began to study food minerals and vitamins. An eminent authority tells us that it was not uncommon for an old lady, rundown and "miserable", at the end of a long winter to answer her doctor.

"I'll be all right as soon as I can get a mess of greens".

Vegetables contain Vitamins A, B, and C, all very necessary for good health. Vitamin A promotes growth, Vitamin B is good for the nerves and Vitamin C prevents scurvy. C is important for positive health, makes good bone and teeth and prevents Scurvy.

Twenty-five of Jacques Cartier's men died in 1535 of Scurvy because they had no fresh fruit or green vegetables. Their diet was deficient. They died of Scurvy, a deficiency disease. Nowadays we know that "Vegetables are very important for your children's health as well as yours, for a child's diet is deficient.

Vegetables also contain such minerals as calcium, phosphorous and iron and make the blood rich and red—the good that should be eaten.

What more pleasant way to serve these vegetables than in salads, or in "Salads". They are so simple to make.

Let me give you some good combinations for raw vegetables salads:

1. Lettuce and garden cress or watercress.
2. Tomatoes and green onions.
3. Cucumbers and tomatoes.
4. Potatoes cooked and diced with chopped celery or celery seed.
5. Beets, boiled and diced with chopped shallots.
6. Shredded cabbage with finely minced green pepper.
7. Shredded cabbage with diced canned pineapple and chopped walnuts or shredded almonds.
8. Celery stalks, the hollow side filled with cream cheese.
9. Grated or shredded raw carrot alone or with shredded lettuce or cabbage.

Be let our slogan be "Salads for Health".

Thank you, for the space in your paper. We thank you.

Sincerely yours
Wallbridge Live Wires,
Per Marguerite Tucker.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop was taking a walk after supper and there was a man in the street selling flowers out of a pushcart, and pop says, "Willum, nothing that strikes greatin' joy to a lady's heart than being presented with a bunch of flowers when she least expects it. At least on the part occasion when I try the little experiment on your mother the sentiment is very complete and overwhelming, he said.

Do you mean, I says, trying to try it on her now, pop? I said, and he said, Your perspicacity is amazing, pop said, and he said to the man with the pushcart. Those look like nice flowers, mister, how much are they?

Very nice, the man said.

Being a short man, with a long black moustak to match his eyebrows, and pop said, Not for me, pop said, I could hardly afford that, and besides I don't like them, what do you call them?

Very nice, the man said, and pop said, So do I, will you give me some white ones and some pink ones if I give you 50 cents? Sure the man said.

And he made a bunch and pop took them home and handed them to ma, saying, Very nice to the very nice.

Well, ma said, And she looked at them close, saying, For land sakes they're all faded, now William how many times do I get people take you in so easily? Look at the peddler, Willyard, she said, and pop said, By all means look at everything except the pollack and shivalous spatrit with which they are offered.

O William, I didn't mean that. I mean just meant scarcely any man knows how to choose flowers. I'm delighted, how can you think otherwise, and it's such a amazing rare gift that I value my appreciation I'll bring you home some of these days tomorrow, she said.

Very nice, the man said.

Trenton and District

Trenton, July 25.—(Special)—Many motorists appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler at police court yesterday morning. Several speeding penalties were dealt out.

George S. Bonter, 71 year old Asselsboro farmer, was issued his sentence on a charge of criminal negligence. He was given a one months' suspended sentence. During the sentence he must not drive a motor vehicle. The Magistrate said that Mr. Bonter was incapable of driving a car and must not do so".

Ronald Dalton was called but failed to appear. He was charged with speeding. Traffic officer Bert Delaney, who investigated told the court that Dalton was travelling at a speed of 66 to 68 miles an hour. He followed him from the overhead bridge to Smithfield. The traffic officer's information revealed that the man's name was Roland A. Dalton, 246 Annette St., Toronto. As the name was wrongly inscribed on the summoned the charge could not be dealt with. The Magistrate ordered that a new information be laid and ordered an extension of the service for a new summons.

Andrew S. Graham was called but failed to appear on a charge of speeding. Traffic Officer Bert Delaney the investigating officer revealed in his testimony that the accused was travelling east on Highway No. 2 at 65 miles an hour and when at Smithfield he increased this speed to 80 miles per hour. The officer had followed him from Brighton to Smithfield. The accused, Andrew S. Graham was found guilty on the officer's evidence and was fined $10.00 and $2.25 costs. The penalty was made payable forthwith. On default he will spend ten days in Belleville jail.

Highland Motors paid $7.25 for charging dealer's license plates to F. McCallum appeared as representative of Highland Motors. A second traffic charge was withdrawn as the Crown offered no evidence. Traffic Officer Bert Delaney was the officer in charge of the investigation.

Hilliard B. Killoran charged with attempting to pass another vehicle thus blocking the lane of oncoming traffic was fined $10 and $2.25 costs. On default he will spend ten days in Belleville jail. The investigating Officer Bert Delaney told the court, that he was travelling on Highway No. 2 between Brighton and Trenton when Killoran pulled out from behind another car to pass it, now just headed into him. He was proceeding in the opposite direction. Miss Collins was called but failed to appear. Traffic Officer Delaney laid the information against her. He said that "Miss Collins pulled her car out in front of oncoming traffic." She was fined $12.25.

Fred R. Hubble, who was arrested in Toronto on last Friday on charges of forgery and obtaining money by means of worthless cheque pleaded guilty to the charges here today. Hubble issued a $65.00 cheque on the Royal Bank of Canada on July 20th. On July 15th., he gave L. E. Hartman a worthless cheque for several pigs. The local detachment had sent his finger prints to Ottawa and as they had not returned the Magistrate granted a remand. The Crown told the accused that he had better get a lawyer or someone to defend him for the charges would be pressed to the limit.

O. J. Miller, salesman of Ottawa who appeared today for sentence on a charge of obtaining, by means of worthless cheque was made restitution and pay the costs of the court and expenses in bringing him from Toronto to Trenton. The costs amounted to $35.50. Miller's only "bad scrape" to date and offered to pay it on the amount available. The Magistrate consented and made the balance payable on July 31st. On the accused he imposed a one year suspended sentence on condition he pay the costs of the court. On default he will spend ten days in Belleville jail. Miller seemed to jump from the frying pan into the fire for the Crown Attorney suddenly remembered that he had heard the name before and that the authorities at Belleville had been looking for Miller since 1933.

Eugene Lowe pleaded guilty to hitting Lloyd Cook, 13 across the face or as he put it "slapped him across the kisser" and paid a fine of $2.00. The accused told the court that the boy was teasing his dog and when he told him to stop or else he would slap his face, the boy brazenly said "come on" so he did.

James MacGarry, 57, of Toronto, was sentenced to not less than six months or more than one year in Kingston reformatory for assulting a police officer. Paul Francis Cox was charged MacGarry into custody on the night of July 24th, when he was struck. MacGarry opened a gash under the officer's eye that is said to have two stitches inserted into it. The Crown told the court that MacGarry had just come out of Trenton Jail on July 21st. after spending seven days.

James MacCracken was found guilty of having liquor on premises other than his residence and was fined $115.45. He was given till July 30th. to pay on default he will spend three months in common jail.

Burtt has pitched exceptionally well throughout the season.

Fashion Flashes

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

IT LOOKS LIKE taffeta again this autumn. Midseason on showings and crowds from abroad all emphasize taffeta for frocks, wraps and evening things. Just now wraps of printed taffeta are used over velvet sunset women gather, are worn for beach pajamas and cocktail coats.

SHADOWS OF EARLY AUTUMN lurk in a smart dinner suit of black satin that has a double collar of supple, thin pale gold lame. This is shadowed with black velvet and accented for the side, although made for a private client.

A NEW GOLD RING is indicated by a most original new print. The design includes little gold nuggets, a double crown for pendant gold. The colors are in brown, gray and gold on a white surface.

DON'T MIND plenty of party invitations for never have evening frocks been so reasonably priced and so abundant as now. A pretty frock of white dotted dark blue Swiss with bodice and shoulder straps fastened of saw-tooth-edged ribbon in dark blue white tie-tie braid. The full skirt is high-waisted.

IT DOESN'T FOLLOW that velvet is just a cold weather fabric now that it is woven in such light weights. One smart designer recommends velvet hats to accompany afternoon or summer evening prints. We like one brood-brimmed model in apricot light-weight velvet. Cherry and plum-colored bathing ribbon round the shallow crown.

"SALADA"
GREEN TEA

Good Manners
By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it absolutely necessary to have the invitations following a large church wedding?

2. Could a dinner jacket or a soft business suit be worn to a wedding at which the bride wears a veil? All kinds of etiquette say it is not good form, but no one in the community where the wedding is to be held would think of wearing formal evening dress. What would you suggest? The wedding will be at eight o'clock in the evening.

3. At a tea, does one go to the tea table whenever one wishes, or should you wait until you are invited to go? Should you go immediately after you have been received, or mingle with the guests first? At which end of the tea table does one start?

4. How should hard-boiled eggs be served? Is there any difference when they are served in an egg-cup? I thought especially in these days of diets if it is served in the shell. That's what I used to open the egg!

5. When one is served vegetables, such as tomatoes, peas, beans, and the like, in side dishes at a meal, should they be eaten from the side dishes or served to one's plate?

6. When no butter spreader is provided how should honey or syrup be spread on waffles?

7. From which side of the chair does one sit down at the table?

Thank-you

1. No, it is not at all necessary to have a reception after a church marriage ceremony. It is entirely a matter of choice. As a matter of fact, many brides do not like to have a reception after the ceremony in church, preferring to have the emphasis on the religious element of the wedding, and not wishing to have this followed by the social aspect.

2. All that a writer on etiquette can do is just what you say—that etiquette books do say.....that, namely, the bride must wear her wedding dress and bridal veil, she establishes that her wedding is the one event of the occasion, and with this formality, the men of the wedding party may dress in any suitable kind of attire. This means the cutaway coat and the dark striped trousers of the day wedding, and tail-coats for the evening wedding. Dinner jackets and the like are compromises, because they are informal evening attire, and therefore, are considered to be inappropriate.

3. When you go to a tea, you do not wait to be invited to go to the tea table. The hostess would be very busy receiving her guests to keep this invitation in mind for every guest, and you may go when you wish, more or less expected to take care of yourself. When you have had enough tea, then chats for as long as she wishes with friends, and goes when she wishes, goes to the tea table. She goes to the opposite end to that at which you entered, asks her, "May I have some tea, please?" orange pekoe, please. One lump of sugar, and no lemon or cream," and then she is served. She will likely tea-services on it, from the pile on the tea-table, and also napkins and perhaps a tray. She takes whatever she wishes, and finds a place with friends who are having their chats at that end.

4. If the egg, soft-boiled or hard-boiled, is served in a breakfast egg-cup, we break the top of the shell with the spoon, remove some of the shell with the spoon. Or we may break the egg in two and scoop out the contents into an egg-cup and eat the egg with the spoon.

5. It is usually more convenient and always correct to serve the vegetable from the side dish to our dinner plate.

6. The honey or syrup is poured on the waffle, and spread on them with the knife. The fork is held in the left hand to "guide" the process.

7. It doesn't make any difference.

THANK-YOU NOTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I was married a short time ago, and after we returned from our wedding trip, we decided to have a reception at home for us. I received several gifts, but they would like to thank these friends for their lovely gifts. Would you help me, please, by telling me just what I should write?

2. Soon after the reception should these thank you notes be written?

3. Is it better form to write them, or to have them printed? Should the cards to relatives and friends be the same?

W.W.

1. A note of thanks for a gift may read something like this: Dear Jane,

How good you were to us, how generous, thoughtful! Bill and I appreciate your gift very much, and your goodness. And such a lovely gift you gave us for our new home! The lamp is quite the handsomest we've ever seen, and we've decided that it is to have the place of honor in our living-room. It's a beauty, Jane, and you're a dear, as you always are. To have the gift of always choosing just the perfect gift. You'll come to see us when you won't you? And then you'll see your lamp gloriously shedding its friendly and welcoming light on our new home.

Dearest love to you from Bill and me, and again our highest appreciation.

Devotedly,

2. These notes of thanks — all kinds of thanks — should be written as soon as possible after the gift has been received. The sooner the better, for "soon" shows more enthusiasm about the receiving of the gift.

3. The written note of thanks is the way to thank for these gifts. The printed card is taboo for thanks.....it represents the print, not thanks, not yours.

4. The kind of note of thanks we write depends on what we know of the person to whom we are writing. Pakaging thanks differ widely to relatives and to close friends are informal in tone.

APPRECIATION NOTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been working for a company since 1917. In 1927 I was given a position in a different department, and worked here until 1933, which, because of poor business conditions, I was dismissed. In the first part of 1935 I was taken back again, working in the same department until December, 1935. Then my boss asked me if I would accept a position in another department, a much better position. I did accept this, but the day I was leaving the department, my boss in that department was not there, and so I could not thank him. I want to thank him for his "looking out for me". Will you please be so kind as to tell me how I can thank him?

John

I agree with you that such kindness needs a written acknowledgment, and as soon as you can send him a letter something like this:

Dear Mr. Workyman.

The day I left your department was the last day, and so I hadn't the opportunity of thanking you for your great and kind goodness to me. So may I please write you, to tell you how deep my kindness to me, in the past and at the present time, and for your thoughtfulness have given to me for advancement. I can't begin to tell you how grateful I am for your interest in me, and for your faith in me. And I shall try, by all my determination, to justify your faith and belief in me.

I add good wishes to you, Mr. Workyman, and again my appreciation.

Very truly yours,

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

He's Beginning To Doubt Her Love

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We're both 36, and have been engaged for over two years. Her salary is larger than mine, although we're doing quite well. We own a car, and received an excellent salary. But the depression worked havoc with plans to buy a home and to save several hundred dollars, but still I've no business to marry a girl until I could provide for her properly.

Now the opportunity or securing a position in an institution many times larger than the firm I now come to me. It pays an excellent salary. But if I take it, it means separation from her. I do know that we both love each other, that we should never be separated. No matter how much they plan to be together, there is always some work out that way. As she urges me to take the position, I can't help wondering if she doubts my love.

Such opportunities are likely to arise later if I continue in my present work, but much means to us together. Yet, it will take time. But this position offered means financial independence for me now, but not with her.

Shall I take this offer and lose her, or go on the way I am at present?

A Perplexed Male.

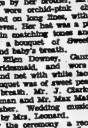
Unless the offer of the new position implies that it shall be filled by a single man, I don't see why you and your girl can't be married, and she accompany you as your wife. At 36 years of age, people are not likely to fall in love in the headlong manner of the early 20s, and you will tell me and your fiancee are deeply for each other.

Life is a series of compromises, and if the job is open to you as a married man, why defer your marriage?

Says the Words Are in Her Heart

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I can't tell you how much I love this girl, but she says that I am fast fading away from me. At first she wrote devoted love letters, but in the last one received she says I love you so, and even though I don't say it, the words are in my heart."



All of a sudden she stopped going with me and when I asked her why, she says she is too busy, and has no time. I'm a decent boy, not a chap, and she is my first love. She seems to think I've had a few girls, but she's wrong.

What shall I do? I can't eat or sleep, and I'm losing weight on account of this trouble.

Louis.

You've got to take yourself in hand, my dear Louis, and stop letting this girl wreck your life. If she won't see you, she won't, and saying she is busy isn't a real excuse. The remedy is as old as Adam. You've got to try and interest yourself in other girls, or in some occupation, which will take up your leisure time.

Sleep Is Needed For Health, Beauty

Elizabeth Russell

She knows that sleep is important to beauty as well as health.

By HELEN FOUNTAIN

YOUNG LADIES who get to bed late and crawl out early get no sympathy from preachers of pulchritude. They can fool papa and mamma and sister Sue and brother Bill, but they can't fool old Mother Nature. She will punish them. The punishments will be in the form of tired eyes, early wrinkles, an emaciated body or a fitfully nervous system.

Sleep is the vital phenomenon of life. It is not good only a period of rest but of rebuilding. It is during sleep that the nerve tissues are energized; the nervous system is an important "mechanism of the human body. Every act of the nerve organ depletes nerve tissue —the work of the brain, the labor of the eyes, movements of the muscles, even the emotions. The waking hour we are wearing out, every sleeping hour we are mending.

For a time, facial treatments and make-up will serve as pick-me-ups. But not for long. The little night owl should not pin her faith to them; they can't work against heavy handicaps like impaired health, mentally or physically.

When beauty seekers settle down to brass tacks they will realize that health and vitality are the foundations upon which the temple of beauty is built. Nothing else is half as important.

Extremely tall girls must be wary of underweight which makes them look too slender. Short girls make it a practice to stand high. Most of them don't. Being overconscious of their extra inches, they are inclined to slouch.

Ankle-length frocks are pretty on them than draperies that trail on the floor. Shoes should be moderately high; if they are low the body doesn't have spring and walking is not spirited. Broad-brimmed, flat-crowned hats are a good foil for the same lines in the dress will be a help.

Weddings

SECKER—PRAIN

At Christ Church presbytery afternoon a very pretty wedding took place when Stella Mary, daughter of Mrs. Allen Prain and Mr. late J. Prain, became the bride of Mr. George L. Secker, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Secker, of this city. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock by Rev. C. H. Wright.

The bride who was given in marriage by her brother, Allen Prain, wore orchid-pink chiffon, fashioned on long lines, with long full sleeves. Her hat was a picture hat, model in matching tones and she carried a bouquet of Columbia roses and baby's breath.

Miss Dorothy Cannifton, was bridesmaid, and wore blue satin and net with white hat. She carried a bouquet of sweet peas and baby's breath. Mr. J. Clarke was groomsman and Mr. Max Matthews was usher. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Leonard.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home which was attractively decorated in pink and white, carried out in streamers and flowers. Forty-five guests were present at the wedding supper, the bride's table being adorned with pink and white candles and centred with the handsome wedding cake. The bride's daughter, Joyce Hales, in crepe, with shoulder bouquet of sweet peas, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Secker, in navy, with white hat and shoulder bouquet of sweet peas, received. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold bracelet set with a cameo and to the best man a gold initialled tie clip.

Later the bride and groom left on a motor trip to Montreal, the bride wearing for travelling a green flowered silk frock with white hat, coat and accessories. On their return they will reside at 78 Gordon Street.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome gifts, including the staff of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol plant, of which she was a popular member, presented her with a handsome chest of silver.

CRAWFORD—McNAMARA

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, Rev. Father O'Gorman at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, Rev. Father O'Gorman officiating, on Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock when Margaret Mary, Reg. N., daughter of Mr. John McNamara, became the bride of John Francis Crawford of Toronto.

To the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mr. Bill Ferrer, the bride entered the church on the arm of her brother. Jack McNamara. She was gown made on long lines, with a stand-up collar and long sleeves. She was attended well caught with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses, pinkish and enticed hair fern.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ethel Mae, as bridesmaid, who was gowned in blue lace with white picture hat and carried a bouquet of carnations, pinkish and fern.

The groom was attended by Mr. Dominic McNamara. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the Paisley House, Napanee.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Crawford left on a boat trip east, returning as far as Montreal, where they will reside in Toronto, where the groom is a valued employee of the Tip Top Tailors.

LITTLE RELIEF IN SIGHT FOR WEST

Extensive Drought Areas in South Portions of Alberta

Winnipeg, July 28—(CP)— With little relief in sight in the form of rain from Saskatchewan, hopes for a moderation of warm winds that would cause further loss of crops, and aid fire-fighters in controlling forest fires in scattered areas of Alberta.

Continued absence of general moisture during July in the southern districts of the Prairie Provinces has brought an extensive crop failure to the southern sections of Alberta and Saskatchewan with increased fear of an acute fuel shortage.

Already plans to enlist federal assistance are under consideration in Alberta and Saskatchewan. In the latter province provincial treasurer Cockroft estimated more than 500,000 head of cattle would have to be fed this winter.

A similar situation was reported in the Peace River district of Manitoba where the government contemplated an agreement with packers to slaughter surplus livestock. Transportation of cattle to greener pastures in the north was expected to be offered for stock remaining through agreements with railroad companies.

Selkirk, Man., July 27 (CP) — Police today sought to establish the identity of a man who was found dead near the bank of the Red River north of here Sunday, apparently a victim of a sight-year-old Billie Boyne. The child was playing with other children when the stray shot struck him. He died in hospital.

Watertown, N.Y., July 27 (CP) —J. R. Jamison, of Greenberg, Ont., and one of Jefferson County golf courses here and sent a fifty ball hole in 196 yards in the shirt pocket of Bernard Singleton, caddy. Singleton was undaunted.

Elimination of Ragweed May Make Quebec Haven For Hay - Fever Victims

Here is seen a victim of hay-fever with a clump of ragweed, the cause of all the sneezing, (inset).

By CENTRAL PRESS CANADIAN

Quebec City, Que., July 28.—A Dominion-wide campaign to eliminate ragweed, which annually attacks more than 5,000,000 devotees of the North American continent, the provincial government of Quebec is adopting a new program to check its control of ragweed, indicated by scientists as the main cause of hay fever.

A recently completed survey made by the government disclosed the fact that two sections of the Province of Quebec, the Gaspe Peninsula and the region around Ste. Agathe des Monts in the Laurentian mountains, are almost wholly free of the weed.

The program, which would be financed by the government and directed by the department of highways, if put into effect, is designed to eliminate ragweed in those sections. Ragweed, it is claimed, has appeared and to prevent its spread to uninfested districts.

Agricultural students from various colleges in the province would be hired throughout the onslaught which would be carried on during the period when the weed appeared in these sections.

Dionne Quints 26 Months Old In Fine Health

By A. E. FULFORD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Callander, Ont., July 28—(CP)— The Dionne quintuplets are 26 months old today and had nothing more important to do than play their pranks in the tubs bathing pool and splash water on each other.

They have been doing that each day for more than a month now to the vast amusement of people who come from all over the world to see them.

Between 2,000 and 6,000 persons a day flock into Callander and out to the Dafoe institute to watch the youngsters stage their act twice each day. It's an unconscious performance for the youngsters don't know they are being watched. The crowds peer at them through and screaming but the babies can't see them.

The influx of visitors—daily cars have been counted in one day—converts the 100-yard highway in front of the Dafoe nursery into a circus-like carnival. Hot dog stands, sorbair vendors and gas stations. Thousands crowd into the nursery lay pathway of the youngsters to take home and then stand in line for an hour or more for a sight of the babies at play.

But they go away satisfied they have seen something that can't be witnessed anywhere else on earth—five quintuplets alive and playing with health. Few grumble as guards ask them to move along quickly through the semi-circular gallery from which they look into the babies' playground.

Play With Frogs

If they are lucky they may catch Emilie playing with the frog, which lives in the pool and which she named after Marie and Annette dipping rags into the water and splashing them on the step. Or Yvonne and Cecile staging a battle over possession of a sponge that used to be daily fight until a second sponge was bought.

Yesterday those who watched the children during the afternoon visiting had their first Marie catch a caterpillar in her little fingers. She released it two or three times and watched it crawl around. Then when her interest lagged, she calmly stood up and dumped out the pail and started a bug and caterpillar hunt among the five sisters. They crawled around it. They stopped eating for them. They would catch them, watch them try to scurry away and bring them back again. But the end was always the same. A first little four-year-old came and the bug would be no more.

People have given up thinking the quints may sometime become sick but just to keep the record straight, Dr. Dafoe today announces each month that they are still well. The chief physician said today that all five are thriving, adding weight gradually and developing physically and mentally.

Marie, Emilie and Cecile each put on a pound last month despite the warm weather. Annette added four ounces and Yvonne's share was three ounces. Marie, Annette and Yvonne each have 16 teeth, Cecile 13 and Emilie 14.

AT THE CAPITOL

General Maughan's "Secret Agent"

Beautiful, alluring and gloriously alive, she vanished in the darkness only, as she entered the secret service. Her first assignment was to pose as the wife of a man she had never seen and to assist him to lead to death a country they loved and who, at any cost, must not be allowed to regain its own.

This is the dramatic introduction of the heroine to the hero in "Secret Agent," the drama of espionage, intrigue and romance coming tomorrow to the Capitol Theatre. It stars Madeleine Carroll, Peter Lorre, John Gielgud and Robert Young and the supporting cast includes Lilli Palmer, Percy Marmont, and Lilli Palmer. Alfred Hitchcock, GB's Honor Roll director, directed.

RECORD NUMBER SWIM IN 1936

Water Accidents Rare During Season in This City

With a juvenile population of the city more keenly interested in swimming, boating, fishing and other aquatic sports than ever before, with a record number of bathers, and with a record number of boats in use on the bay, Belleville has had a safe season, so far as the records of the police department show. Not a single drowning has been reported to the police.

Reasons for this happy circumstance as given are:

More attention to have learned to swim this year and take care of themselves in the water, as a result of the careful coaching of Miss Gertrude Lowrey of the Y.M.C.A. officials who operated and carried out a successful "learn-to-swim" effort earlier in the season.

Greater interest on the part of officials and members of the local South End Athletic and Yachting Club in guarding against, and a careful watch kept over unseaworthy and flimsy home made boats formerly so numerous in the water, but now practically ruled from the bay.

Increased skill in boat handling, with a minimum of upsets, in direct contrast to last year's frequent capsizing of boats in almost every weekly race.

Careful watch over swimmers kept by a part lifeguard supplied again this year by the local Parks Department, who is also equipped with a complete modern first aid kit.

REFORMS TO FIT QUEBEC YOUTH

Premier Godbout Makes Statement in Election Campaign

Quebec, July 28—(CP)—Educational reforms to fit the youth of Quebec to take a greater part in the development of their province are planned by the Liberal government if returned to office at the poll, July 17, Premier Godbout declared last night at Pont Rouge in campaign speech he widened to give young people a better start in trade and industry.

"Too often in the past companies have imported men from outside the province of Quebec to occupy important positions in our various industries," he said. "The youth of Quebec is as capable and ambitious as the youth of any other province or any other country, and with the proper training will be able to occupy the positions which are filled by theirs."

Material aid will be given high schools and universities to help them better fit students for the battle of life, said the Premier.

His opponent, Maurice Duplessis, had no meeting last night.

Chief Lieutenant of Mr. Duplessis, Oscar Drouin warned electors at Montmagny that the Union Nationale Liberal government was the regime of Jos. L. A. Tschereau and Taschereau camouflage. Electors should be aware of "latters of Tschereau's political rags," said the Union Nationale chief organizer and former minister for Quebec east.

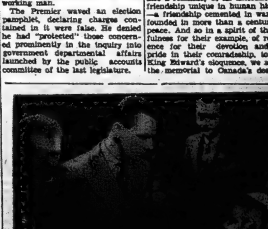
Contented working people provide the best bulwark against Communism, Premier Godbout said, and it was the intention of his government to do what they could to aid the working man.

The Premier waved an election pamphlet, declaring charges contained in it were false. He denied that he "protected" those connected prominently in the inquiry into government departmental affairs launched by the public accounts committee of the last legislature.

VIMY A PORTENT OF TRIUMPHS

New York Herald Says American Hearts Stirred by Unveiling

New York, July 28.—(CP)—Commenting today on the dedication of the Canadian Memorial to her war dead at Vimy Ridge on Sunday the New York Herald Tribune said editorially the ceremony "must have stirred American hearts only in less degree than it did Canadian".



Continuing the paper says:

"We had our own war on Friday, April 6, 1917. The following Monday began the general attack of the British forces about Arras which included the capture of Vimy Ridge as its most important and costly operation.

"Nineteen years have passed since the Canadians sealed that victory with their blood, but none of us who remembers the day and the circumstances will forget the gallantry shown on the nation which had just resolved to share its fortunes with the Allies.

"Weren't these boys from above our border the equivalent, our own fathers, of Britain's brilliant achievement an apt celebration of our entry and a portent of the triumphs to follow it? Coincidence and incongruity are combined to start that battle in the American consciousness.

"An emotion deeper than mere curiosity or good will will attach us, therefore, to the huge cenotaph on the hill, as it impelled us to attend by radio in the dedicatory exercises. If it is monuments to Canadian prowess and Canadian sacrifices it is also a reminder of an international friendship unique in human history—a friendship cemented in war but founded in more than a century of peace. And so in a spirit of thankfulness for their example of reverence for their devotion and of pride in their comradeship, to cite Vimy Ridge's concurrence, we dedicate the memorial to Canada's dead."

Bengals Seem on Prowl Again As Cochrane Returns to Lineup And Rowe Shows Swell Hurling

Defeat Yankees 9-1 And Master of Situation at all Times

DODGERS WIN

Bowl Over Pittsburg Pirates For Third Straight Time

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Whether or not the return to Manager Mickey Cochrane and his pep warnings to the Tiger veterans to "show more pep or else—" had anything to do with it, the Bengals seem to be on the prowl again.

In a last-ditch fight to remain in the race after they had absorbed three straight drubbings from the Bronx foe, they strolled grimly out to spread up with everything they had and belted over the league-leading Yankees 9-1 yesterday.

In itself, that doesn't look like a particularly important game, but most of the other clubs in the league will gladly point out that it was the defeat the clanking Yanks have been handed in a single, run during the entire month of July.

And in the last couple of weeks their opponents haven't been able to hit that high score mark. In addition there's the fact the Tigers have won exactly four games and that kicked itself down from second place to fourth.

Schoolboy Rowe, whose flinging had been a standout among the regular's mediocre performances was the main factor in the Tiger triumph. He limited the Yanks to seven hits, five hits and had a shutout in hand until Frankie Crosetti batted home in the eighth. Rowe certainly won his own game in the third inning when he came home from Goose Goslin's pitches out of the park with Ray Hayworth on base to start the run rally. He also contributed two more ballsat in the seventh, when Detroit fell on Vernon Gomez and Ted Kleinhans for six more before after Gomez had gone out to pick a pitcher.

Little Chance in Standing

The defeat did little damage to the Yanks' lead as the Indians' game with Washington was rained out while the Browns led by the aged and ailing Jim Bottomley knocked off the fifth-place Chicago Sox 7-4. Bottomley poked out two doubles and a single to lead the attack while Roy Van Atta's three-hit shutting in the last five frames held the Sox in check.

A terrific and totally unexpected shaking of the Athletics' grip on Brooklyn's third straight victory over the Pirates completed the National League program as rain and threaten-weather wiped out the Cubs-Phillies and Reds-Braves games while the Cardinals and Bees had an open date.

The Mackmen opened fire on Brooklyn Kennedy, who had won nine straight games from the Pirates, and before they finished they had smashed out 15 hits for 11 runs and a 14-3 victory. Jimmy Foxx, leading left the scene in the seventh with a count 9-4 against him and escaped a loss as the pale hose, no mean sluggers themselves with 13 hits, tied the score in the eighth. Red Evans and Sugar Cain were the victims of Charlie Grimm's final seven run blast.

Brooklyn beat the Pirates 6-3 as Fred Frankhouse pitched a six-hit ball while his mates knocked Cy Blanton out of the box in the fifth and touched Waite Hoyt for that final run.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Schoolboy Rowe, Tigers: Held Yankees to five hits, struck out four runs with homer and single.

Hal Flowers, Athletics: Paced Athletics' 25 hit attack against White Sox with triple and four singles to record four runs.

Fred Frankhouse, Dodgers: Limited Pirates to seven hits, three of which came in one inning.

Tom Bottomley, Browns: Cracked out two doubles and a single and drove in two runs in victory over Red Sox.

More Money

Charles Grant

Cathleen flushed with pleasure. He was not displeased with her work, and she was to have a taste of luxury on board a yacht and get a glimpse of the Ingram household.

Ingram's boat was of highly polished woods and smart brasses and Cathleen, who had never before set foot on a yacht, stood with all her eyes at its beauty and spaciousness, cleanliness, and the charm of its nautical arrangements.

Swiftly, the hot, sultry air of the city was left behind and a fluttering breeze, cooled Cathleen's flushed cheeks. Over the lowers of Manhattan, the far-flung bridges and the flat lands beyond, the sky was blue and pure with no threat of rain. Mrs. Ingram, thought Cathleen, has a perfect day for her party.

They finished work in half an hour, and there were ten minutes, the best quarter of the trip, when Cathleen could close her notebook and feast her eyes on blue water and dipping gulls, on the green unfolding of the shore line beyond the yellow streak of sand.

They ran in to Ingram's private dock, behind which were stables and grounds, rolling and flower-set, and above them the facade of a great white house. As they came nearer, she could see groups of people, and hear sound of a faint burst of laughter. They came alongside the wharf and a gangplank was put over, and then was watching the aside Ingram up the rise towards the house, greeting the guest, here and now and then he raised a hand in informal greeting across a wide space.

Near the house, the crowd thickened, there were women in beautiful dresses, which unfortunately couldn't all be seen at once; there were smiling, chatting, bare-headed men and boys and an atmosphere of leisure and happiness in such a setting of perfect landscape and perfect weather, that it all seemed like fairyland to the business girl, whose ideas of the great outdoors had been acquired in Astor.

A visitor in pink georgette, with a tray of cigarettes slung by pink ribbons from her dainty shoulders, interrupted them. Marian Aigburth cried swiftly, "Won't the big magnate take one little, little pack? We have all kinds—from the highest priced—down to the lowly gaspers. If you want to go that far."

Jasper Ingram selected a box at random, absent-mindedly passed it over to Cathleen, and went with a ten-dollar bill.

Flustered by the incident, the girl quickly dropped the box into her bag, she did not smoke and she resented to keep the package as a souvenir of an astounding day.

Near the house, Ingram turned Cathleen over to a servant, with the necessary instructions, and the girl was led away from fairyland into the somber silence of the big house. All the party was outdoors. The great hall, with the beautiful branching stairway, was nearly empty. The man preceded Cathleen up it and along a corridor to an austerely furnished room on the second floor, quiet and cool, used by Ingram at his home office.

Opening the typewriter, she made ready for work. But she couldn't resist the temptation to linger a moment at the window fascinated by sights, the like of which she had never seen before—might never see again. It seemed unreal enough to her that work should be her portion, while all these people played and frolicked in an idyllic garden. But she was human and twenty-two, and there was a quiver of pleasure and a tingle of excitement in the air to which she was not insensible, and who could blame her for thinking how wonderful it would be were she one of those lucky girls down there with something better to do than afternoon tea and golf and type business letters.

If she were one of them, she asked herself in a rather pathetic little sense, which of the men would she most like to have stretched to her side, for the afternoon? She had to stay at the window a minute or two longer than her conscience approved, to settle that. Finally she decided on a powerful man with a head of tight hair that had a crisp little wave in it. His smiling, half-serious face and the graceful lithe way he had of moving, attracted her. From all this distance she felt the charm that set him off from the others.

He looked up towards her window and seemed to smile at her. Was he really seen her? Had he smiled at her? Her heart fluttered.

Yes, Seward Ingram had caught a glimpse of the pretty girl at the window, but this afternoon he had eyes only for Arline Martin.

x x x

Marian Aigburgh was here, there and everywhere. Her cigarette tray was an invaluable asset. She could, without fear of criticism, prance up to any group of men and accost them in the most daringly flirtatious manner. She could approach women whom she had long known by sight, whose recognition and invitations she desperately craved, and, assuming a prettily familiar manner, start with cigarettes and work into little personal conversation that might lead to anything.

She was intoxicated with excitement as she flitted tirelessly about, smiling, ogling, taking in money. She was not even annoyed when her tactics were unsuccessful as happened once or twice. One woman, who knew her slightly and whose own social footing was precarious, snubbed her, and when she thought to pursue young Seward Ingram and see if she could not strike up a restful acquaintance with him, she found him discouragingly unresponsive.

Nearly all day he had been glued to the side of one particular girl, but at last Marian succeeded in tracking him down, for the moment alone—but discouraging.

"Cigarettes?" She smiled up into his eyes and laid a hand on his arm.

"Sorry—I'm broke! Positively cleaned out."

"Oh—but your credit is good! Listen, take a box now, and come see somewhere later when you have money. Here you are." Without encouragement, she bore open a box, extracted a cigarette and thrust it against his lips. "Now I'll trust you for a light."

"Nothing after all I have charged enough to pay for these." Seward all refractorily, in Arline's absence, he wanted only to be alone that he might think of her. "Will you accept these quarters and dimes, and this—yes, it's a fifty-cent piece? Search of his much-gilded pockets yielded up nearly two dollars in silver.

Marian knew when she was beaten, and opportunities were too numerous this afternoon to waste more time in a lost cause. "We gratefully accept any contribution, however small," she mumbled glibly, and turned away to look for easier game.

CHAPTER VII.

Marian was near the booth where the tickets for the mystery trips were sold. In front of it were two men, to one of whom she already had sold half-a-dozen packs of cigarettes at a thousand per cent profit. She lacked the nerve to press him further, but the other looked promising, and she took the necessary plunge.

"But have you no tickets for Spain?" he was asking the girl in the booth. "I am in love with your Long Island and I do not wish to leave it unless to return to my Spain!"

The girl laughed and explained: "Don't you see, these are mystery trips! The whole point is, you don't know where you're going when you buy a ticket. It's a surprise party. If you want to take a chance—and get a surprise!"

Maran pounced on him. "Always a mistake to make important decisions in a hurry. Buy some cigarettes and think it over while you smoke."

He was a strikingly handsome man, with full black eyes and fine features of a Greek statue, slightly thickened. His expression was faintly brutal, and, to her, sinister.

"If you will please sell me some cigarettes very cheap I will take your advice. I am a very poor refugee—the republicans in Spain have stolen my estates. If we were in Spain, I would give you a hundred pesetas for this box—Alas, I must ask you to tell me your minimum price!"

"Nothing to you," she said daringly. "And are you really a refugee? I thought refugees were all Russians!"

"Have you not heard, then, that Don Alfonso was driven from his throne?"

"Yes, of course. I remember now. Oh, are you a grandee? How perfectly thrilling if you are!"

"Ignacio Miguel Carlos Esteban d'Alfonso y Silva. I present myself with your permission—Marquess d'Albuez and Grandee of Spain—alas, my poor Spain!"

"You thrill me to death, Marquess d'Albuez. May I light your cigarette?"

"You have few cigarettes left," he said after thanking her for a light.

"Nearly all gone, but what I have in here—" She tapped the little money box. "I've earned a rest, don't you think?"

Contentedly he sat on a stone bench beside her and they smoked, looked at each other out of the corners of their eyes, and laughed at nothing.

"I think it would be nice if you would come to this make-believe Spain with me," d'Albuez suggested. "Ah, what a beautiful dream—If it were only reality! But let us go to the pretend Spain—since the other is impossible."

"Sorry," said the girl in the booth, "but I'm afraid it's too late. The theatrical start at once and everyone's going over there."

It was true, people were beginning to drift towards the amphitheatre, Marian sprang to her feet feeling guilty, as her eyes encountered those of her bosizo, who, from where she was approaching, and Marian thought, looking at her rather coldly. "Thinks I shouldn't take time off to rest," she told herself and plunged back into her selling campaign with nervous zeal, leaving d'Albuez, on whom Laura Ingram smiled now that he was alone.

Chairs were arranged in rows on the semi-circular terrace facing the stage—a smooth stretch of lawn backed by firs. A line of dwarf sunflowers bordered footlights.

Dedication, then, had guided euphylimics, trooped off after dancing in Greek tunics that revealed their sun-browned shapely limbs. Two small boys, pages, appeared with placards announcing the last number a one-act skit in which Arline Martin was to play the lead.

Seward sat on the edge of his seat, trembling hardly able to breathe. This was the moment for which he had been waiting. His mother saw him to the left in the row in front of him, turned and said:

"Wasn't that perfectly charming, Seward? As graceful as the Albertina Rasch girls, weren't, they?"

"Oh, mother, Corking," he said dutifully.

"And wasn't Millicent sweet?" She smiled mischievously. To d'Albuez sitting beside her she added explanatorily: "That lovely girl in green—you must have noticed her—Betsy Hinkam's daughter."

No matter what his mother thought, Seward had scarcely seen Millicent. The dancers had been a mere rainbow mist before his eyes, forward-curved, holding his last vision of Arline. Exaggerating her nervousness, she had given him her cold hands to feel before she went on to dress. Her eyes were wide and her lips quivering; her hand clasped terribly to kiss them—and had only been able to stammer encouragement. Seward felt his face getting hot with nervous anticipation. Ingram, who had walked out on the curvilinear to order to sign his talking, skirted up.

Arline, acting with great spirit, looked ravishing and showed no nervousness. The other members of the troupe, lacking talent, made her work all the more conspicuous. She had the verve and stage presence that enables a player to carry a piece alone. There was a hypnotic charm that she made glamorous, followed by thrilling moments and a climax that was startlingly realistic. The applause that burst forth was all her own—Seward could see—and Seward's frantic clapping was lost in the general clamor.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, July 28 (CP)—The industrial section of the Toronto Exchange registered a half dozen new highs for the year in the trade today but strength was less apparent in the closing phase, the influence of moderate New York weakness showing in a slackening of demand with a corresponding sag in prices. United Steel Corporation was a feature with a trade of close to 10,000 shares. The price advanced about ¼-point and held only part of the gain. Beverages, foods, steels and banks were generally strong. Bank Stocks touched new high prices for the year.

Imperial was an exception, going up to 21 on heavy turnover.

Other interesting leaders showed more weakness than strength. Nickel dropped ¼ and Brazilian about ¼. Kelvinator touched its best price in some years and new highs for the year included Beatty Bros. Pfd. and Canadian Northern Power.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, July 28—(AP)—Selective buying support got behind a number of issues in today's stock market, while profit-takers shot at some of the recent leaders.

The rails inclined toward resistance throughout as traffic volumes apparently were insufficient for further expansion. Specialties were in demand as individual earnings forecasts. Near the final hour the selority was rather small.

Sentiment was still buoyed by business and industrial news, although nothing was inspired by the lengthy and almost uninterrupted recovery movement. Transfers approximated 1,750,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto July 28.— (CP)— The Mining List turned heavy in the afternoon and closed with losses in the majority. Profit-taking was supposed in some of the issues that had advanced sharply in recent sessions, among them Read Authier, a loser to the extent of about 30 cents on heavy turnover. With coin or two exceptions, Base Metals Stocks held steady and the Silvers were featured by strength in Beaver.

Other medium-price golds to settle down under profit-taking were, McLeod-Cockshutt, Macassa, O'Brien, McKenzie Red Lake, God's Lake, Red Lake Gold Shore, Lake Shore, Read-Authier and Gunnar. Pickle Crow finished a new high for the year on the gain and net losses were posted for Buffalo-Ankerite, Base Authority and Lake Shore.

In the Silvers, Beaver Exploration advanced about ten cents and Elsidorado closed lower.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

The mining market continues by far the most active with interest evident over a large number of securities. A considerable amount of buying power has been created as a result of the rise in such issues as O'Brien, Dome Mines, Lamaque, Read-Authier, Sullivan, Sherritt-Gordon, and many other too numerous to mention. The big gains recorded here are being utilized to accumulate additional equities in that the purchasing power is developing from within the market itself.

In the meantime, the industrial section is also coming to life with a large number of good gains already recorded. Coal Canada preferred has met with an appreciable demand and the price has moved up to a new high for some little time. The strength in "Coal" preferred is the answer to buying in Dominion Steel & Coal "B".

In the case of Dominion Coal, the company should, in the current calendar year, report earnings at least as good as in 1935 when $2.10 a share was shown on the common stock. This indicates that the $1.50 annual dividend is being covered by a fair margin and calls attention to the fact that the security, even at current prices of 17½, is selling to yield better than 8% per cent. Dominion Steel also benefits from any progress of its subsidiary—Dominion Coal. A material ownership of the entire common capitalization of 400,000 shares of $25 par. While no dividends are paid on Dominion Coal common, the shares enhance in value as the company increases and in time, Dominion Steel's holdings in Dominion Coal may prove to be valuable.

One source, in an effort to explain the reason why Canadian industrial stocks have not fully participated in the buoyancy prevalent in Wall Street, states:

Canadian industrial stocks are undoubtedly paying much more attention to the drought situation than are the American. That is obviously due to the fact that Canadian agriculture bulks larger, on the whole, in Canadian prosperity, than does American agriculture in the United States stage. In other words, while industry is an important phase of Canadian effort, its importance is relatively small when placed against the American. To that extent a crop failure in Canada cuts into industrial earnings much more sharply than a similar failure in the United States cuts into American industrial chances.

A NEW DRAIL for hot heads is offered in the form of open-crown and snoods, now available for Summer wear. Every normal lady is without crowns; very often a twisted plait of straw holding a fore-head veil is deemed sufficient. The latest view of the perfect brother-in-law fabric is nice for sports wear.

Cholera Outbreak 102 Years Ago Today

Galt, Ont., July 28 (CP)—Today is the 102nd anniversary of the "greatest calamity" that ever visited Galt, an outbreak of cholera.

It fell on Monday, July 28, 1834, that a menagerie of wild animals visited the then village. One of the showmen was ill and the village doctor found he had the Asiatic cholera. Old history has stated that by the Friday one-fifth of the population had died from the disease.

The number was not stipulated. Death came quickly and the victims were buried as fast as possible.

STORAGE SHED, STATION BURNS

John Burgess, East Dundas Street Suffers Heavy.

Loss amounting to hundreds of dollars was incurred by John Burgess, East Dundas street, shortly after two o'clock today, when fire destroyed an oil storage shed and part of a gasoline service station. The blaze might have proved more disastrous had the Belleville Fire Department responded with alacrity. No reason can be given for the fire by the owner or clerk Hatfield, who was employed in the shed at the time. Mr. Hatfield stated, that while working he saw a sheet of flame leap from the roof of the building to give the alarm. The flames simply raced for the structure and no effort was bent to prevent the flames from reaching two gasoline tanks each of 500 gallon capacity, which are buried under the building. A quantity of oil and accessories were also stored in the building, which was destroyed by the blaze. It is understood the loss will not be covered by insurance.

PRAISES WORK OF THE ALLIANCE

Praise is given the work of the Christian Missionary Alliance by Mr. D. W. Ackerman of Welland who being an active worker in the church at home, visited the mission at Belleville. Mr. Ackerman was much interested in the work of the Sunday School now in progress, which opened with an attendance of far over one hundred. One day Mr. Ackerman attended and found 139 scholars present. The next day 160 were present. The first day's collection, early today by Constable Ackerman found the school had an allowance of $4.00. The next day $5.00 and today $4.00, a total of $13.00. He praises the work of the pastor, Mr. Stoner and the workers of the church. He speaks very highly of the training in the Bible given the young.

INFORM OTHER POWERS Poland, Germany And Possibly Denmark Notified

London, July 30 (AP)—An Anglo-Russian naval agreement "on all points" was announced at the Admiralty today. No date was set for signing the treaty, but it was stated to be completely drafted.

All that remains to be done, officials said, is to inform other powers which are parties to the Washington Naval Treaty, including France, Italy, the United States and Japan, and other governments with which Great Britain is now negotiating bilateral treaties.

These include Poland, Germany and probably Denmark.

The object of the Anglo-Russian agreement, it was stated officially, was to obtain Soviet adherence to the principles of the recent tripartite London Pact between Britain, the United States and France.

This accord provides for limitation of tonnage in different categories but not of the number of ships and for an exchange of building information between signatory powers.

IMPASSE SEEN IN MANITOBA

Bracken Requires 8 Out of 9 Remaining Seats to Lead

Winnipeg, July 30 (CP)—Manitoba politics today appeared headed for something like the impasse which confronted Quebec last November and which the French-speaking province is attempting to settle with a second election within a year.

Four days after the voters went to the polls in the province, the Manitoba seats are still busy counting and recounting votes today in an effort to determine the winners. Besides the seven doubtful seats are two in which voting was deferred until in order to win a working majority in the next house Premier John Bracken and his Liberal-Progressive party must win eight of the nine.

Out of the 46 seats in which returns and counting is complete the government has obtained 21 following elections held on Tuesday, 25. In the 55-member legislature a majority needs 28 votes and the opposition to give it a bare majority as the election of a speaker cuts down the government majority by one.

If Bracken's chief opponent is Hyman Gray, Winnipeg Conservative leader, who increased his party's strength from 10 in the last legislature to 14 with the chance of a few more from the undecided seats. R. J. Parmer, C.C.F. leader, says his followers so far, giving that party a doubling strength of four. The new Social Credit party has four also, two Independents are elected and one Communist.

ONE SKID MARK SHOWS 196 FEET

J. Eldridge Says His Car Was Travelling 35 to 40 M. P. H.

Napanee, Ont., July 30 (CP)—The inquest into the death of Mrs. Estella Casaln of Detroit, Mich., was adjourned today until Tuesday, Sept. 22 by Chief County Coroner, Dr. R. W. Evidence of Traffic Officer S. Irvine of Belleville was the description of two parallelling skid marks one of 196 feet and the other of 110 feet made by the Eldridge car up to the point of impact. There were no marks from the Casaln car.

Joseph Eldridge described his speed between 35 and 40 miles per hour and testified to directly preceding the fatal crash a rear wheel swerved to the right shoulder of the road and then the car suddenly went crosswise on the highway in the path of the approaching Casaln car.

Cobourg Deeds Pier To Dominion Gov't.

Cobourg, Ont., July 30 (CP)—At a council meeting Tuesday night which reached the midnight hour, a by-law was passed, under powers of the mayor, deeding the east pier to the Government, in order that much needed repairs could be made to it.

The striking out of a clause in the bylaw, referring to the right of the grantor to collect harbor dues, was protested by Mayor Jack Denyes, who claimed that it would leave the harbor open to the future possibility of being declared a free harbor, in which case the town's dock rental would drop from $2,500 to a mere nominal sum. Mayor Denyes finally refused to sign the bylaw for that reason and Deputy Reeve L. Wilson was empowered to sign it in his stead.

Commenting on the mayor's objection, Councillor A. J. Skeans asserted that as the entire pier was controlled by the Government there was no likelihood of the harbor ever becoming a free harbor.

KING SURPRISES PILGRIMS' PARTY

His Majesty's Arrival is Signal For Mild Stampede

London, July 30 (CP)—Thrilled by an unexpected address by the king at the garden party of the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester at Buckingham Palace, 2,000 Canadian Vimy pilgrims left for Scotland today, while others planned to visit scenes in England and France familiar to soldiers in the Great-War years.

The group going to Scotland will attend ceremonies at Edinburgh and will also visit Earl Haig's tomb at Dryburgh.

The king's arrival on the palace lawns called forth a spontaneous exhibition of personal affection such as has never before been witnessed in the historic grounds.

"None of those who were present at the wonderful ceremony at Vimy on Sunday can ever possibly forget it," he told the assembly.

Recollections Vivid.

"For me personally my recollections will always be very vivid, because it brought me into contact with so many Canadians and brought back memories to me, not only of the battlefields of France and Belgium but also of my four visits to the Dominion."

His Majesty's presence was not expected at the party, and when he did appear he was greeted with loud hurrahs and in a grey lounge suit, it was the signal for a minor stampede.

King Is Delighted.

He almost disappeared amid a mob of green berets and sacoated tunics as he moved among the guests to force a way for him through the cheering crowd of enthusiastic Canadians. He, however, appeared delighted with his reception and was obviously pleased to speak to the Duke and Duchess in the royal enclosure.

A heavy downpour soon after the king's arrival drove everyone into the shelter of the Government house or into the palace, except a faithful crowd which stood resolutely, standing the elements, to watch His Majesty having tea with their leaders and their immediate entourage. Among the latter were Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner in London, and Mrs. Massey, Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, Secretary of the High Commissioner's office, and Mrs. Vanier.

After the rain, just before the guests dispersed, the king made his little speech.

Royal Sally Cheers Crowd.

"I don't take any responsibility for the rain," he said. A sally which was greeted with cheers which proved beyond a doubt that spirits, at least, were not dampened. "I can only hope you have not yet got very wet, and when I know how much you like the sunshine in Canada, especially in the west (Alberta-High River is particularly accessible), I can say that we certainly have the rain in the wrong place.

"I want to assure you what a very great pleasure it is to welcome you at Buckingham and to see so many here as you call for your homes in Canada. I can only hope you will enjoy every minute of your stay here, and return to the Dominion as the great pilgrimage to hearten you in the years to come."

The pilgrims, 2,000 veiros sang "For he's a jolly good fellow".

CARRYING OF KNIVES SEEMS TO SPREAD

Though the hunting season is still some distance off, youths of this city, following the dictates of a new fad, during the past few weeks have popularized hunter-styled hunting blades in no uncertain manner.

The carrying of the sharp knives suspended in leather sheaths hung loosely from belts in Daniel Boone fashion, originally started by youthful boat crews who might depend upon the blades in an emergency to cut fishing lines from dragging rigging in the event of capsizing, has spread. Dozens of teen aged boys may be observed thus equipped on the streets.

Hardware dealers in the meantime report a good sale of the knives.

OLD BUILDING IS TAKEN DOWN

Feared as a possible "fire trap" following a recent visit of officials of the Ontario Fire Marshall's Department, the one-storey wooden building at 207-209 Coleman Street, east side, was in process of demolition by employees of the department of public works today. The building and site recently has been acquired by the city through con-payment of taxes.

SPACE IN BUILDINGS ALREADY ASKED FOR

Evidently acting upon the promise that the choice locations are available for those who apply early, local exhibitors at the coming Belleville Fair have already applied to the secretary, since the exhibition buildings in fair numbers, it was stated today by Mr. Walter Asselstine, chairman of Buildings and past president of the Belleville Agricultural Board.

"We've had about a dozen applications for rental space so far, and, according to indications, this year Belleville will be taxed to provide accommodations for those who wish to exhibit. In past years a good percentage always apply early for space so they can plan their exhibits," he added.

This year may see many new local and out of town exhibitors, it was indicated.

POLICE BLOTTER

Desired as a voluntary witness in ourdinary police court case in Belleville, N.Y., the Department of Justice at the City of Buffalo today contacted local police authorities to seek the whereabouts of a young man named Campbell, a former resident, came to Belleville last spring to procure employment, it was stated by the constabulary company.

P. C. Taylor answered a complaint made in the residence of Mrs. W. Robin, Chatham Street, where upon investigation it was disclosed that a number of youthful lads were causing disturbances in that neighbourhood. The lads were cautioned by the constable, who instructed them to avoid such outbreaks in the future. The lads are alleged to have been throwing undesired missles on other peoples' property.

Provincial Constable O. Campbell today stated he held a warrant for a man giving his name as Adam Kentner, Toronto, wanted on a charge of obtaining a new automobile in Campbellford by fraud. It is alleged by the officer that Kentner traded in a borrowed automobile and collected a worthless cheque for the balance owing on the new vehicle, when he received delivery.

P. C. Evans brought an automobile to the police station at an early hour today. The vehicle, bearing license plate number A7-76, was today discovered to have rolled away from its original parking place in front of an East Bridge Street residence. It was found proceeding out upon the street and taken to the police station for safe keeping. The owner claimed the vehicle this morning.

A bicycle found abandoned on Front Street yesterday was returned to its rightful owner last night after having been recovered by the police before it was reported stolen. The "ride" belonged to Freddie Pope, Gilbert Street, and was turned over to him, when he arrived at the police station to report the theft of the bicycle last night.

Local and Provincial Police today were questioning two local teen aged lads regarding their knowledge of the theft of $15.00 in cash from a cottage at Oak Lake recently. The lads were minors while details surrounding the incident were withheld by police until their investigations had been completed.

Grading on Faulkner Highway May Begin Within Short Time

No Official Statement Made About Time Operations Start

AVOID RUSH OF MEN

Although no official or public statement has yet been made regarding the matter, it was confidently predicted in the city today that work of grading and construction on the Faulkner Highway in the northern section of the county would commence within a few days.

According to information, the first work on grade operations would start in the district of Stirling, near Bancroft, where it was stated a tender for the work had already been granted a construction firm.

"Nothing is definite," commented one official questioned by the Daily Ontario Intelligencer today, "we haven't had anything official on it yet."

"But is it likely work will start," pursued the questioner, "in there any likelihood of local men being given any kind of work on the road this winter?

"That's precisely what we wish to avoid—holding out any hope for work on the job. Even if work starts, it isn't likely that Belleville will be granted any more advantages than other communities in the county. Her quota will be a relative one, it will depend upon where the work is to start, how plenty of unemployed here as contrasted with other municipalities of the county.

"Don't quote me, but all we hear is that the Canadian Canadian Bridge Company has been given the job near Erskine. Whether or not they'll be a winter's job is not known. Later, when this work has progressed, it was further intimated that another construction company would be given other work on the road further south. Thus, the two companies would not be employed each other, completing the road as they went along.

"It is very probable that the relief system will be changed and in road camps will be carried out, but whether this will be done through the winter, we don't know.

"We specifically wish to avoid any concerted rush of men for employment offices requesting work of this nature, as the quota will be already available, and the men will be taken from these. When more help is needed, due publicity will be given.

Canoe Trip Led Through Virgin Wilderness

A two-hundred mile canoe trip, the greater part of which was through virgin wilderness, over strange water routes, and featured at times by the highly hunting of hunting wolf packs and by sight of bears in their natural surroundings, has just been completed by Louis Maraska, Arthur Liddle, Peter Hughes and Harold Pouliot, veteran canoeists of this city.

Generally preferring the St. Lawrence route on their annual canoe vacation trip, this year the Algonquin wilderness was explored by the boys. With Lake Superior as their starting point the boys penetrated deep into the north.

Paddling slowly along the many streams and lakes of the region they were rewarded often by the sight of many deer placidly browsing and feeding in the near by. Frequently the howl of wolf packs was heard. But it was not until they met with an unexpected encounter with a large black bear, which they met face to face rounding a curve in a small stream, and which they promptly detoured, that was one of the thrills of the trip.

Anxious to explore the hidden spots of the sanctuary, the canoeists engaged in eighteen portages from lake to lake over dinicanoes ranging up to one mile over which their canoe and heavy packs were laboriously carried over the rough and untravelled ground.

BERRY SHORTAGE ON LOCAL MART

Vendors Hold Red Variety At 20 Cents Per Box

A noticeable shortage of red and blue raspberries with prices varying from the steady level they have maintained during the past week, and a sharp drop in the prices of new potatoes featured a fairly busy midweek market this morning.

Active buying of red berries was noticeable with some vendors holding at the twenty cents and two for thirty five prices and others inciting brisk competition with prices varying from sixteen cents the box upwards. Blues fluctuated from 18 to 20c the box.

New potatoes realized a new low as prices dropped sharply to forty cents the peck (10 lbs) in the local mart today. One vendor stuck to his fifty cents the peck price but was forced to lower his prices to meet competition.

Belleville markets were very "cornminded" this morning readily offering up choice white and yellow corn at twenty and twenty five cents the dozen ears.

Fruit lovers held a buying field day as varieties of plums and peaches made their market debut, 6 quart baskets of peaches moved readily at 60 cents. Shiro plums at 60 cents per basket and 15 cents per berry box. Juno gravenstein at 60 cents the 6 quart basket, and early June plum at 35c the basket found favor in the eyes of potential jam-makers. A blue variety of plum was offered at 15 cents the basket, with No. 1 sugar plums going at 75 cents.

Montmorency cherries remained fairly steady at 55 cents per 6 qt. basket. Sixteen quart baskets being offered at $1.00. Black sweets dropped to five cents the quart with five cents to 70 cents.

Red currants put in another appearance, showing slowly at 15 cents for 25c. Gooseberries were in evidence and demanded 15 cents the box.

BRITISH ROADWAYS

Highway building is one of the signs of the times whether one look over the situation in the New World or in the Old. In the New World roadway making has been very much to the fore with the advance of transportation needs, while in Europe which has had many good roads, improvements continue.

A very ambitious scheme is being carried out in Great Britain where 4,500 miles of trunk roads will be transferred from the local authorities to the Ministry of Transport, according to the London Advertiser. This system extends from Land's End to John O'Groats, and from Fishguard to Great Yarmouth. The Advertiser says:

"Instead of hundreds of local authorities one body will control and develop the trunk road system for the entire nation. This is expected to lead to the wiping out of the existing chaos, and to result in reconstruction of the main traffic arteries on a basis of ability to carry four lines of traffic instead of two, the normal limit today in most cases.

"Motor fatalities in Great Britain are very numerous, and narrow winding highways are largely though the terrific density of traffic must be taken into consideration. It is hoped the gradual reconstruction of the highways may make for greater safety.

"Now, too, it should be possible to imitate the great arteries of the Romans which were flicked across country straight and pitiless as a rule. The present lack of planning in Britain means that roads wander hither and yon in the most haphazard fashion.

"In striking contrast are the great German and Italian motor-roads, designed for military as well as commercial purposes, which form gigantic networks in those lands. These have been built with cheap labor. In Germany they are largely the product of the labor camps, manned by unemployed."

CALL IT "CIVIL WAR"

There is a great deal of blunt talk about Spain. Her war is generally called civil war, not class war, as some would prefer to call it, but most people do not see it that way. A writer says: "It is useful to have it established that class war and civil war are the same thing as they are bound to to be.

"There must be a good many people who speak almost with equanimity of class war, who never stop to think that it stands for the same dreadful things which men have always pictured under civil war.

"Civil war is not pretty. Already the familiar items are pouring in from Spain. Guerrilla warfare, partisan warfare, shooting from behind fences and barricades, sniping from trees and rocks, burnings, wholesale executions, no quarter given or asked. We have been educated for nearly twenty years to the horrors of the trenches. But the savagery of civil war outdoes the savagery of the trenches."

Civil war is a disastrous state, when Spaniards will shoot down Spaniards in preference to anyone else in the world. How ruthless they can be is indicated by some of the threats which have been made. Yesterday the leader of the Spanish rebel army warned British ships to stay far away from Spanish warships in order that they might not be struck by bombs fired from rebel planes directing their operations at the destruction of the Government navy. In ordinary strife in spite of its terrible horrors and of its sin against humanity, there was always gone a certain code which most nations have followed. But in civil war is none of this for the feelings are those of hatred.

And the world is standing on the sidelines, critical naturally, in part because Spain is so weak a nation. But the other nations cannot but watch closely the struggle against the Fascist rebels.

REVIVAL IN TRADE

Signs begin to mount that the business recovery is the usual thing. The revival which began four years ago, lost some of its advance in 1933 and again in 1934. Last year it began again in earnest and has since been progressing irresistibly without setbacks as in the other two occasions when things seemed to lose some of their energy.

One has now to go back industrially to 1930 according to statisticians of industry to find a match for the present situation. It was in 1930 that the results of depression began to make themselves felt in earnest. Conditions seem to be growing more normal now. The present summer business is said to be the most active generally in the past seven years.

The National Chamber of Commerce judges that 1936 will be the best year in physical volume since 1929. Consumption in some lines of industry is back almost to 1929 rate. The intimation of steel-making companies, that possible shortage of skilled labor may possibly necessitate overtime work, paid at a largely increased rate, shows at least how practical-manufacturers see the immediate future," says a New York Times editor. This writer remarks in reference to the political campaign, and the ideas of the Lemkes and the Townsends which he calls the reincarnation of the spirit which has permeated politics in hard times, have a summary end put to them by genuine recovery in business as in 1894 and 1874.

VIMY

(April 9, 1917)

Two Pylons stand on Vimy Height;
They seem to touch the sky.
A prayer is said by day, by night,
Appealing the Most High;
Like hands in supplication raised,
In them the world may see
Great Pyramids that typify
A people's prayers to Thee—
"God look upon the sacrifice
Of the brave, the young, the fair,
Who in blind faith to end all war,
Left their broken bodies there;
They won the Height on Easter Morn,
O Christ, whom we adore,
Hear Thou our supplication,
Teach us to wipe out War!"

No conscripts these! From homes across the sea
Freely they came afar,
From a land that brooks not tyranny,
A land that knows not war;
And in their British hearts the love of freedom bore!
They came to aid a sore-pressed land,
Canadians of a diverse speech;
On Vimy Ridge they made their stand,
French, and English, hand in hand,
For an ideal dear to each;
And vacant chairs, and fallow farms
In Canada still there be
For heaped their broken bodies lie,
Beneath those mighty Pylons high.
In fairest Picardy.

Not this a Field of Cloth of Gold,
When a French, and an English Court,
Met in Picardy of old,
With feasting, and jousts, and sport;
When knights, and squires, and dames,
Did their prowess, and beauty bring,
With feats of arms and courtly charms—
And Chivalry was King.
But changed this scene to bitter war,
Cruel suffering, and hate they see,
And blood from slain men did pour
Down the slopes of Picardy
Men from every walk of life, but only one King was there,
A British lad who would take his chance in the mire, and hell of a trench in France—
Edward Windsor, Great Britain's Heir.

And today a band of Pilgrims,
Tears, prayers, and remembrance bring
And with them a Royal Veteran,
Edward—Our Empire's King.

—Annie Bethune McDougald, Montreal.

A PUBLIC LIBRARY IS A CIVIC ASSET of great value. Patrons should appreciate it and respect it. When you find illustrations torn out of a library book you naturally wonder what manner of folks are they who commit such acts of vandalism?

IF YOU WANT TO MAKE MONEY you have to look like money, the slogan of Diamond Jim Brady, who lived up to his slogan in a blizzard fashion with fine clothes and many diamonds. He looked like money, and having a stomach several times larger than any ordinary man he was able to satisfy his epicurean tastes. There is no difficulty nowadays looking like a monkey as Diamond Jim often did, like a monkey as Diamond Jim often did. Clothing for both males and females now are cheap and natty, and summer outfit for either sex can be purchased for a ridiculously low figure. Just at this time of the year there are some especially fine chances to acquire a wardrobe cheap. Take a tip, read the advs.

LOOKING BACKWARD

CLEARINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 30th., 1916.

Yesterday afternoon the 156th. Battalion which was recruited in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, received their colors which were the gift of the Argyll Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire of Belleville. The battalion arrived in the morning from Kingston by special train for the happy event. For some weeks past the battalion has been in training at Barriefield Camp. At about two o'clock in the afternoon the battalion which is about 1,000 strong was formed up on the Armouries' lawn, under command of Lt. Col. Adams of Picton, who is deservedly a most popular officer. After the singing of one verse of the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers", the colors were consecrated by Capt. the Rev. Thomas Dodds, the chaplain of the battalion. At the conclusion of this part of the ceremony Col. Putman and Major A. P. Allen came forward and took their front of the drums to receive the colors which were presented by Mrs. George Wallbridge. First Vice Regent of the Argyll Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire. Following the presentation a beautifully worded address was read by Mrs. S. W. Vermilyea, the Regent of the Chapter. When Mrs. Vermilyea had concluded the reading of the address she handed to Col. Adams an envelope which contained a cheque for $1000.00 to be applied to the battalion funds. The gift was from the Argyll Chapter. An escort was then marched to where the colors were located and they were handed over and placed in custody of Lieut. Porter and Lieut. Wallbridge. Three salutes was next accorded the colors. Short speeches were made by Col. Adams, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P., Col. Wm. Mayor F. P. Ketchison, Col. D. Barrager and Mr. E. R. Horner. In the conclusion of the ceremony and the dismissal of the battalion, the escort of the soldiers went to the grounds of St. Agnes School where ice cream and refreshments were served to them by the ladies of Quinte Chapter Daughters of the Empire.

THINKS ICEBERG SANK MOTORSHIP

Newcastle - on - Tyne, England, July 30—Findings of a Court of Inquiry into the disappearance of the motor ship Joseph Medill which were made public today, failed to clear up the mystery of what happened to the ship on its first voyage across the Atlantic Ocean last year.

Judge Richardson, who headed the court, expressed the opinion that the likeliest cause of the motor ship's disappearance was that she had collided with an iceberg and foundered within a few minutes.

The court found that the Joseph Medill was in safe and seaworthy condition when she left Tyne side for Montreal last August. The cargo was stowed in such a way as to be safe from the threats of stability. She was manned according to Board of Trade regulations.

ANOTHER CHANCE FOR CASH AWARD

Ontario Intelligencer Readers to Find "Prize Essay Contest" Profitable

Readers of The Ontario Intelligencer are to have another opportunity to participate in the Prize Essay Contest. The purpose of this contest, which supplements the Prize Essay articles, is to create a special interest for the readers in their own local business establishments. It will give you an opportunity to better acquaint yourself with the firms that are active and progressive in these communities. You may think that you know them well, but you will find, if you carefully read the articles prepared about them, that there may be something of new and vital interest to you.

The rules governing the Prize Essay contest are simple and easily followed. In the last sentence of each of the articles you will note a question that directly pertains to the establishment referred to in the story. In one of the contributions it is required that you contact the firm either during the week briefly and obtain the correct answer to the question. Be sure to get in touch with all the firms in this issue. When you have all the correct answers, write them up in any novel or unique manner that may appeal to you—in prose, poetry, decorative, or any original way that would attract the attention of the judges. A post paper to the "Prize Essay" editor of The Ontario Intelligencer. Three cash awards, each prize will be given the neatest and most original answer.

On behalf of the staff Miss Vivia Lloyd expressed sincere regrets on leaving a friend who had won a place in all hearts and who will be greatly missed by all. Miss Marion Chambers then presented Florence with a purse of money from the employees. Lunch was served by Mrs. Dorinthor assisted Florence with a wristwatch, while Miss Lillian Wilkes delivered the address, extending heartiest wishes from all for a safe journey. Shuiver made a suitable reply, thanking everyone and stating she realized that she could never erase the happy memory of the time spent. A delightful luncheon was served, the feature being a beautifully decorated cake with a ship, bearing the initials of those who enjoyed until the early hours.

CHARLES FRANKLIN WILSON

Believed to have been the victim of a sudden heart attack while camping unexpectedly at Wilson Lake, Charles Franklin Wilson, well known resident of the Marshall Road, 1st Concession of Sidney, passed away quietly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Box, where he had been residents guest on the Marshall road for the past two years. He was in his 54th year.

A son of the late Elizabeth Woods and George E. Wilson, prominent farmer of Sidney Township, he had carried on the occupation of farming all his life. Of late years he had concentrated on market gardening and had become well-known throughout the district. In religion he was a member of the United Church.

He is survived by an aunt, Mrs. James B. Willard of Bay City, Michigan, one uncle, Mr. Charles Wood, of Moira, and one cousin, Mrs. John Box, Marshall Road.

Dionne Quintuplets Called 'Best Show'

"Better than the best show." Thus is the daily performance of the Dionne quintuplets of Callander, branded by returning tourists passing through this city on route to their homes after a visit to the north country.

Three out of six of the tourists visiting parts of Northern Ontario this summer have Callander as their ultimate destination. It was stated by the local Chamber of Commerce today. Examination of the registry book signed daily by the many visitors passing through corroborates this statement.

According to one visitor who visited the local office yesterday, a glimpse of the Dionne babies at play is well worth the trip north.

"They're funnier than a show," it was declared.

Says He Thought He Owned Hall

Kingston, July 30.—(CP)—Howard Greenwood, 60-year-old negro, released on one year's suspended sentence when convicted on a charge of removing a lock from a hall in Wolfe Island, replacing it with a padlock and depriving the rightful owners of the use of their property.

He was alleged Greenwood took the lock off the door of the hall owned by the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association on June 22 and 23 and replaced it with a lock of his own. In his defence the supreme statement he was ordered to pay all court costs and costs of advertising seized by him.

Greenwood said he thought he owned the hall and told the court his lawyer had given him deeds which he had misplaced proof of this. On two occasions he visited the hall, he said, determining to bring the matter to a head. He removed chairs and a piano from the building and put up two "No Trespassing" signs.

London, July 30—(AP)— Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, retired, confessed yesterday that despite 11 years in the navy he was unable to master seasickness.

Speaking before an education organization, Sir Roger was reminded that Admiral Beatty had once also suffered from the malady.

Sir Roger replied: "It takes more than freedom from sea-sickness to make a good sailor."

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Robin Hood of El Dorado"

With Warner Baxter contributing the finest performance of his career, "Robin Hood of El Dorado" opens tomorrow at the Capitol for Saturday's stay. It takes place among the truly magnificent outdoor features of the Golden State.

Produced on a spectacular scale, it is a romanticized slice of one of the most glamorous periods of America's frontier history—the era which began in 1848 with the discovery of gold in California.

Possessing much of the epic sweep of such tremendous hits as "The Covered Wagon" and "The Iron Trail" and other outdoor films that marked the closing years of the silent screen, "Robin Hood of El Dorado" has a dramatic subject that gives it the human appeal and tance while at the same time retains the intimacy of romance and personal thrills which make the jolly square entertainment.

Baxter surpasses even his performances in his other films with his characterization of Joaquin Murrieta, the dashing bandit of the Five Counties, who set up a trail of plundered gold and broken hearts as he made trouble the American mining settlements at the head of his guerrilla army.

With him is a notable cast which includes Ann Loring, a spectacular beauty who seems destined for stardom; Bruce Cabot in his best role to date; Carol Hughes, Latin Joaquin dancing beauty who can become an outstanding dramatic actress; J. Carrol Naish, Nick Lindon, Edgar Kennedy, Charles Trowbridge, Harvey Stephens and literally hundreds of others.

The story of Joaquin Murrieta, as depicted in "Robin Hood of El Dorado," is the story of one of the California Spaniard's many wars broken under the iron heel of American invasion on the heels of the discovery of gold. Pained with bold strokes on a romantic canvas, it has universality in being at once a drama of romantic glamour that is vital entertainment.

The picture is definitely one of the new season's finest offerings and is recommended without reservation.

Ends Today

"Secret Agent," the spy thriller based on W. Somerset Maugham's "Ashenden" stories and showing currently at the Capitol Theatre, is a production that is right up Alfred Hitchcock's particular street.

The man has a genius for novelty in thrills and he proved it in the 39 Steps," his previous production for GB, that he can translate any stories with an especially deft and original touch. "Secret Agent," which stars Madeleine Carroll, Peter Lorre, John Gielud and Robert Young, is littered with quips and secrets, with agents and intrigue. It has some exciting moving trains, misty mountain peaks and with a dash of love and a spot of murder thrown in to make a picture well worth seeing.

AT THE ELLIS

"San Francisco"

Stars of the past are in their ascendancy again. Before the advent of talking pictures, many were the famous names that basked in the limelight of popularity that now stems on the Coast. Of the Crawfords, the Carboo, Some have entered other walks of business, some have chosen to remain in pictures.

Realizing the pioneer work performed by the earlier stars in the film industry, instructions recently were passed on the director, producers and casting officials by Louis B. Mayer that the screen's pioneers were to be given preference in casting important roles in M.G.M. productions.

In keeping with the new preference order, our picture alone is bringing to the screen more famous names from the past than have ever been presented before in one picture.

The production is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "San Francisco" Belasco's current film opus, that has had its local engagement extended two days, today and Friday, making the first film in history that has played the Bells theatre for full week and that's often your greatest screen thrill the San Francisco earthquake and fire, starring Clark Gable Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy and Kay Johnson, film favorites.

MAY RENEW TRADE WITH THE SOVIET

Canada Broke Relations With Russia Some Years Ago

New York, July 30 —(AP) A Soviet Russia in the new York Times today said the possibility of a renewal of Canadian-Soviet relations was seen in the Soviet capital as Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce for the Dominion, left there with his party.

During the Moscow stay, Mr. Euler and his party conferred with A. P. Rozmgolts, Foreign Trade Commissar, K. N. Rafelsnkin, representing the Amtorg, and other Soviet officials.

No statement was obtainable from either Mr. Euler or the Soviet officials. However, the Times said, the Canadian Minister remarked that the Mackenzie King Government was not hostile to the Soviet regime.

Canada broke off relations with Soviet Russia at the same time as Great Britain. Subsequently, in 1931, Canada declared an embargo on Soviet shipments. Britain and the Soviet have long since patched up their differences and now enjoy cordial trade relations.

FIRST COMMUNIST TO BE ELECTED

James Litterick of Winnipeg Will Sit in Manitoba Legislature

Winnipeg, July 30.—(CP)—James Litterick, 35-year-old Communist leader in the Manitoba Legislature in Winnipeg, is the first Communist to win a seat in a provincial or state assembly on the North American continent.

The only other Communist now a member of a British Legislature is Tim Buck, leader of the Ontario Manitoba Legislature or William Gallacher, former comrade of Litterick's in Scotland, who is a Communist member of Parliament for Fife in the British House of Commons. He will visit Canada shortly to address branches of the Canadian Communist Party.

Born in Glasgow, the sandy-haired Litterick became interested in the Labor movement since his youth. He has been in the life-long Socialist and young Liberal political offshoots of Socialist movement at the age of 18.

KING EDWARD TO TAKE LONG CRUISE

Water Trip to be Undertaken Instead of French Holiday

London, July 30.—(AP) —King Edward has chartered the Yacht Nahlin for a three or four-week's cruise, Reynolds News said today. It was announced today at Buckingham Palace.

The trip will probably join the yacht in about ten days at Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia. It will be accompanied by three or four friends.

The vessel is the property of Lady Yule, widow of Sir David Yule, former Anglo-Indian merchant prince, in 1931 which was originally costing $1,500,000, and is registered from Glasgow.

The cruise will replace a projected vacation at Cannes, France, which was canceled after the outbreak of the Spanish rebellion.

His Heart Stitched, 11 Year Old Boy Dies

Cornwall, July 30—Thirteen days after surgeons performed a rare operation in an effort to save his life, Donald Mason, 11, died on Wednesday afternoon at Hotel Dieu Hospital. The boy, whose heart was pierced by a sharp pointed door handle of an automobile which he was operating, had lapsed into coma at noon Wednesday, but rallied somewhat during the afternoon and did not respond to desperate measures to keep him alive.

The boy's life had hung in the balance from the time Dr. J. E. Hurleau, Cornwall, inserted seven stitches in the wound—1-4 inches long and an eighth inch deep in the heart.

The door handle has pierced the chest wall through four ribs and tearing the pericardium just above the heart. The pericardium was mended and the chest cavity in an attempt to rebuild the thoracic cavity. Before the operation he was given a 50-50 chance for life.

The left lung, which was completely collapsed, had lapsed almost to normal after the operation, and the boy, possessed of a marvelous constitution was thought to be getting along fine, although by no means out of danger.

St. Louis Outpitches Ogden Belleville Seniors Blanking Oshawa Chevies by 4-0 Count

Hurley Given Excellent Support by His Team Mates

SPLENDID FIELDING

Matthews of Losers is Heavy Hitter in The Contest

Identical pitching on the part of "Speedy" St. Louis gave the Belleville senior their third win of the season when they and their second victory over the Oshawa Chevrolets here last night by the score of 4 to 0 at the Exhibition Park yesterday. St. Louis threw a beautiful assortment of benders all through the league tactics, scattering well the nine hits made off of him by the visitors. He was in turn supported their pitcher in great style, especially Bennett and Gray.

"Speedy" Ogden seconded the second for the Chevies but he dropped a couple of flies and walked three, his one, intercepted with an error and drew two hits. The runs that resulted in three runs were counted in the ninth of Belleville in the third inning. From that point on, however, it was purely a pitching duel with St. Louis shutting the Chevies' pitching chaps of the day in the ninth inning. Not until the Oshawa gang did not leave a man on base until Matthews singled in the last frame, but with an error and deep infield hits

BUFFALO BISONS SLOWLY MOVING OUT OF PICTURE

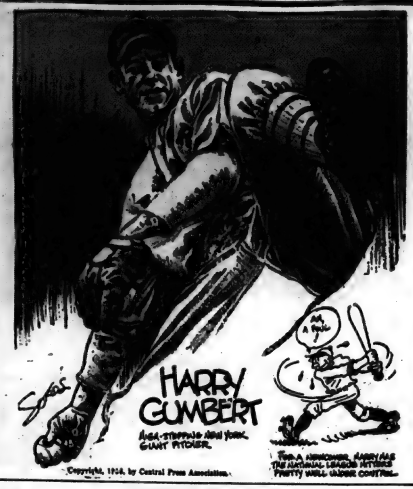
Lose Trio of Eleven Games And Lead Five to Nine

LEAFS WIN AGAIN

Take Advantage of Errors To Come From Behind

By The Associated Press

Anybody anxious to shield pessimism, the Jersey Bisons, who are now in third place in the International League pennant race and probably should be second fourth.



After a winning streak that carried them within striking distance of the pace setting Rochester Red Wings, the Bisons dropped 10 of their last 11 games, the last five in a row. The collapse of their hitting and pitching has been so complete a point below the Rochester Red Wings in the standings.

They dropped their third straight to the Braves yesterday as Hewitt let loose with a seven-run blast in the fifth and managed to pass the way for an 8-6 victory. The attack sent Bill Ash to the showers and although Art Jacobs allowed the same number of hits and one run the remainder of the route, he managed to get across the necessary runs. Jacobs, veteran Braves hurler, was relief hurler making his first start of the season and was the winner.

Meanwhile the Red Wings continued their consistent ball, turning back the Baltimore Orioles 12 to 4 and 6 to 2 in a doubleheader here from Buffalo. Weisenreid, Omaha outfielder, figured a big part in the first victory, in the ninth-inning windup. His two-bagger struck drive to score two runs and furnish the margin of victory at Frenzy Abernathy crashed out his 22nd and 23rd homers of the season and Joe Martin added a double for the Orioles.

Toronto took advantage of Albany's errors to whip the Senators 7 to 3 in a ninth-inning affair. The Leafs trailed 3-0 going into the seventh inning but tied and score in that frame, added a pair in the eighth and three in the final round.

Gus Dugas' double gave Montreal a 1 to 0 victory over Syracuse in the first game of a night double-header and then the Royals came back to whammer out a 9 to 7 decision in the nightcap.

PLAYGROUND ACTIVITIES

The ballsters from West Belleville took all honors in the two playground ball games played yesterday when the West Hill teams defeated their East Hill rivals 17 to 10 in a regular scheduled junior girls' softball game at the East Belleville playgrounds while over on the West Belleville grounds the home team defeated their rival East Hill nine 17 to 7 in a senior boys' baseball fixture.

Freda Finch hurled a steady game for the West Hill girls in victory and was afforded the stellar support of her teammates throughout the entire game. D. Woodcock, R. Morden, M. Thompson and Dot Arnott wary the big swat-smiths for the winning West End nine as Marjorie Donaldson, starting pitcher for the East Belleville and Norma Mabee (nee-Miss Ritter) were supplied by the losers. Circuit Blown Decide Circuit blows for home runs decided the senior baseball game in the Playground League last evening when the West defeated the East 11 to 9. Home runs by Gordon and Mallory proved the deciding factor and resulted in victory for the Westsiders.

Gordon on the hilltop for the winners, was in rare form and was ably supported by his teammates while in the early stages of the game the offerings of Taylor on the mound for the East Ellers, were hit profusely. Burns of the losers also let hit well four safeties to his credit. McBride cuffed in two runs for the East Hill with a double in the second frame.

The line-ups: West—Mallory, c; Burns, cf; Hayes, 2b; Gordon, p; Reed, 1b; Austin, ss; Hall, 3b; Palmer, lf, and Pitcgibbon, rf. East—McBride, c; Taylor, p; Pepper, 2b; McCabe, rf; Moon, cf; F. Peets, ss; Clark, 1b; Rouse, 3b; Jackson, ss; T. Peets and Whitland, subs.

Kingston Blanks Petes In C.O.B.L. Fixture

Kingston, Ont., July 30 (CP)—Kingston went into second place in the Central Ontario Baseball League here Wednesday night by shutting out Peterboro 4 to 0. In the second inning Kingston collected three runs, on one hit, five errors, bases, two walks, and a passed ball. Two hits and a stolen bast gave them another run in the third.

The game was marked by an argument between "Shiner" Johnston, Peterboro manager, and Base Umpire Corrigan of Kingston. "Shiner" took exception to a decision by the base umpire. He continued to voice his objections until he was escorted from the field.

The game was a pitching contest between Jamieson and Scriver. There was a difference of only one hit, Kingston getting eight, and Peterboro seven. Jamieson issued no free tickets while Scriver let three go by.

PUNT RACING

A stiff wind welcomed the weekly punt race sponsored by the Belleville Yacht Club yesterday off Victoria Park that resulted in two of the contesting craft upsetting while a third had its rigging ripped by the heavy north-west wind that blew over the proverbial hurricane. Splendid comme ntwas expressed by the craft to finish the race before the stirring breeze. The Alaska in the "A" class and the "Let's Go" in the "B" class were the two punts to capsize while the wind tore the rigging of the "Mic" to such a degree the craft was withdrawn from competition.

The "A" Class got away to a flying start, all three craft crossing the starting line at the crack of the gun. As he rounded the first buoy in the bay, however, Harry Semark's Alaska slowed too much and keel capsized. A club power boat rescued the water-soaked sailors and towed the Alaska to shore, Maurice Calladine's After You Ted then took the lead over Frank Smith's Joke and "A" Class 'f boats, finished in that order. The After You crossed the finishing line one hour and 40 minutes after the starting time gun.

When leading by a few feet at the starting buoy, the Let's Go capsized before it ever got out into open water in the "B" class. The Dorothy went on to win this class, while the Scrapper was second. The time in this group was 1 hour, 31 mins.

In the 16-foot class the "Mic" was forced out of competition owing to broken rigging, the Spray winning. In the "D" class the Folly finished alone, all other smaller craft refusing to face the heavy wind.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was feeling cheerful at breakfast this morning but ma wasn't, saying, O dear I don't know what's a matter with me, I just feel completely gaudy is going to happen today.

By golies that's uncanny, you must have a six sense, pop said, and ma said, Why, what do you mean tell me immediby and then I'll find out what to expect instead of expecting to find out almost anything.

Well, the fact is, I expect to bring home a man for dinner tonite, pop said, and ma said, my goodness me, that's my day off, of all times and places for land sakes, you'll just have to make it some other time, that's all.

Impossible, he already expects to come and he's a very important man and cant be shifted about at livery as all that, pop said. But dont worry, he's a charming chap, everybody likes him and I'm sure you'll be pleasantly surprised, he said, and said, I dont care if he's Clark Gable disguised as William Powell, tonite is the very worst nite you could possibly of picked out. O dear I knew something awful was about to beset me like a bombshell, and this is even worse.

But I tell you he's a lovely chap, Clark Gable cant hold a candle to him and Wiliyum Powell cant even hold a match, pop said. He's not only one of the best looking chaps I ever met, he's a brilliant conversationalist, he said, and ma said, That's the very kind I'll be the most totally unprepared for after an inexpressible day in all unimaginable hot kitchin. Who is this marvellous man, anyway? she said.

Myself, pop said, and ma said, well of all the crazy silly absurd ridiculous things. My, I was never so relieved in my life, she said, thanks for the compliment, my dear, that's one of the prettiest speeches you ever made me, pop said.

And he folded up his paper and left, and ma finished her coffee looking like somebody that felt better instead of worse.

PILGRIMS STIRRED WITH MEMORIES AT HAIG'S GRAVE

Unique Ceremony Takes Place at Ancient Abbey

SCENE AT DRYBURGH

Lone Earl Haig's Great Spirit Enthrilled at Grave

By CAPT. W. W. MURRAY, M.C.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Dryburgh, Scotland, July 30 (CP Cable)—This little Scottish border community was stirred by a ceremony unique in its age-old history today when ancient Abbey ruins here for a few centuries looked over the rippling silver Tweed, was the locale of a service which saw the homage of the Government and people of Canada paid to the memory of Earl Haig of Bemersyde, who commanded the British armies in France during the War.

At the same time a wreath to poppies and Canadian maple leaves was deposited on the simple soldier's cross which marks the grandeur of Haig.

Rev. John Kelman, minister of Pitsligo Presbyterian Church, Trinity, and national representative of the Edinburgh Veterans' section of the Canadian Legion, was the preacher at the special service which was attended by members of the Tiny Pilgrimage representatives of the Canadian Government and many Scottish dignitaries.

Greatness of Haig

Taking for his text the 77th psalm: "The Lord is my Light and my Salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?" Mr. Kelman stressed the qualities which contributed to the greatness of Haig and which had endeared him to the Canadian soldiers.

He noted the absence not only of the Commander whose memory was being honored, but also of Lord Byng and Sir Arthur Currie, men the honored others have most closely identified with the Canadian Corps and whose loyalty to Haig had been firm and unyielding.

Kelman had admired Haig for several reasons, the minister continued. His great had been inspired by great in its simplicity and in its implicit faith in the power of divine help. Equally strong was his conviction, said Mr. Kelman, "that the battle was not his, but God's."

Bore Success Modestly

The preacher recalled the many honors that had been showered on the British commander. None of them, however, became him so well, nor of them all was he so proud, as the fact he had been an elder of the Presbyterian Kirk.

Touching on patriotism, Mr. Kelman dealt with the various forms this quality at times assumed. The patriotism of Haig demanded service, for he had given as fully as himself as he canoed from Alberta.

In the blackest hour of the British army, during the early days of the war Haig had to meet by enemies without and by cavilling and criticism at home. His great spirit had found utterance in the immortal message to his soldiers. He demanded them to give their all in order that the Empire might be preserved.

Mr. Kelman praised the late commander's capacity for self-sacrifice, industry and service. After the war Haig had sought to develop unity among the ex-service men of the British Empire. If in Canada he had not succeeded, at least there had resulted from his efforts the Canadian Legion, which spoke with the strongest voice in the cause of the veterans.

The Toronto minister recalled the "marvelous silence" on the memory of Haig by those "who had become bold enough to banish them only when his great soul was silenced forever." These had been met with calmness, with dignity and unflinching courage by Lady Haig, widow of the dead commander.

Picton and District

Picton—At her late residence, King St., the funeral of Catherine, widow of the late Cornman Williams was largely attended on Tuesday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. David Wrm of the United Church. Mrs. Williams had passed away at her home, early Monday, suffering from a stroke. She was eighty-four years of age, and had lived in Picton for forty-four years. Her only sister, Miss Carrie Clark resided with her. Her parents were Joseph Clark and his wife Phoebe Leavens, residents of this County. Mrs. Williams had no children. The pall-bearers were Arthur Macklin, Arthur Davis, Sanford Davis, Ben Leavens, Wm. Gerow and John Hubbs. Interment was made in the family plot in Glenwood Cemetery.

Percy Allison, son of Arthur Allison and the late Mrs. Allison of Adolphustown who suffered a fracture of the skull when knocked from his bicycle on the town hill, Picton, on Saturday night, is improving, although still seriously ill. He did not regain consciousness until Monday, in P. E. County Hospital to which he was removed.

Mr. Gratin is in P.E.C. Hospital with a broken ankle, the result of an accident on Tuesday last.

The opening of the beautifully remodelled store, recently acquired by Arthur and Walter Pope took place on Saturday, and adds much to the appearance of Main Street. It is occupied by Pope Bros. Confectionery and jewellery business of Nick Walsh.

Mr. and Mrs. Andy Palmatier have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Milton Davison of Belleville and their granddaughter little Dianne McCullough of Midland.

Dr. D. S. Lighthall and D. A. Pearsis fishing in Hay Bay at 7.30 Sunday morning secured a fine lunge weighing 22 lbs. Pearsis made the strike and the big fellow put up a stiff thirty minute fight before he was landed.

FOREST LOSSES STIR ROWE'S IRE

Conservative Leader Announces Cost Down as Result of Probe

Port Stanley, July 30 (CP)—An attack on the Ontario government for allegedly losing revenue received from motorists, lax methods of some government departments and for decreasing expenditures on forest fire prevention service was levelled by Hon. W. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, here yesterday.

Addressing a picnic rally of Western Ontario Conservatives, Mr. Rowe contended that since the government took office two years ago $60,000 had been collected from Ontario motorists. On April 1, 1936, he said, only $11,000,000 of this sum had been returned to the contributors by means of highway improvements.

"The result has been that almost $50,000,000 of revenues collected from motorists has been diverted by the present government to pay the current expenses of other departments," Mr. Rowe asserted. "Not only has the picture of almost 70 per cent. of the motorists' money been diverted into other channels."

Premier Hepburn shunned consideration afforded in the lands and forests department, Mr. Rowe continued. He said he did not favor "only the present expenditure in our forest protection service by 66 per cent. as a cost of millions of dollars to the forest wealth of this province."

Forest Losses

The Conservative chieftain read a letter which he said was sent to the premier's office by W. O. Cosens, deputy minister of lands and forests, last February. The letter said, of a decrease in expenditure of $410,000 in the 11 months' period November 1, 1934, to November 1, 1935, as compared with the previous year. The letter declared the cost of one fire could be made up of a reduction in air service and that "we are not economizing at all."

As a result of this ill-advised policy, Mr. Rowe said, with the natural wealth of this province destroyed, the estimated loss as a result of fires in Ontario during the month of April, last month placed at over $3,500,000 and still burning, Mr. Rowe declared.

Rowe fiddled in pleasure while Rome burned—Hepburn fiddled in politics," Mr. Rowe declared. "Rome burned," he said as another point.

Mr. Rowe declared that the present flying service had to be augmented by the hire of many private planes at an hourly cost."

The successor to George S. Henry as party leader declared that many improvements "have been ignored, under the guise of economy, and that a 'political budget' may be presented at the next session of the Legislature."

Get Text of Speech

For the second time in succession in government reverse, they received a sign about the road. "There is a bump on the highway," he said.

Mr. Rowe referred to his charge that the premier's press bureau had cost by more than $48,000,000 under the present government, since the inception of last February and the premier's message he write him a letter making that charge, but "instead of replying to the charge was "mere" Mr. Rowe said.

Appointment of Col. George A. Drew, Mr. Rowe declared, was responsible for the leadership at last May's convention, as campaign chairman, was announced by the organization head.

Guests On Aspenwal

"I have been a visitor here for many years and in placing the organization of our party in the hands of Col. Drew, I am confident I have taken a course that will meet with the approval of the Conservatives throughout this province," said Mr. Rowe.

"We are friendly encounter a short fight, but I have displayed last year and appreciation of public sentiment that I know will make him invaluable in the organization work necessary to consolidate the strong feeling throughout the province in support of the Conservative party."

INSURRECTIONISTS

Paris, July 30—Rebel bombers, undaunted by explosion and destruction, were reported organized today into a formation at Dax, S.W. France.

Gen. Quispo Dellano, Fascist commander at Seville, announced the formation of the "Volunteers of Death" in a broadcast yesterday.

His pilots are ready to take aloft planes built of cardboard, he said, to harass the ships into Liberal encampments and strongholds.

POLICE COURT

Two men giving their names as James Miller and James Stewart, both of Toronto, were arrested on College St., early this morning by P. C. O. Nolan on a charge of "pulling" without a transient traders' licence, when ordered before Magistrate F. J. Bazler, K.C.

The pair pleaded guilty to the charges read and were fined two dollars and costs, which were paid.

"We were only trying to make a living and keep off relief," explained Miller. Their arrest followed a complaint received by police regarding two men canvassing houses in the College Hill section of the city and soliciting orders for sandwiches. The pair were instructed to leave the city on pressure on Toronto's license.

Charles, pleaded guilty to charges laid under the Lord's Day Act and were fined $5 each case will be paid, the young men assured His Worship.

3 Found Guilty Of Shooting Deer Out of Season

Charged with the shooting and destruction of deer during closed season, Jesse Orville and James Wright of Pilsden, Esther, and one negro, appeared in county police court before Magistrate J. Lloyd at Northbrook yesterday. The trio were fined all found guilty as charged a fine of $30.00 and costs assessed in each individual case. The fines were paid in each instance.

The cases arose following an investigation made by Game and Fisheries Inspector Herb McCabe of Bellville, who landed in court he found a quantity of venison at the home of James and Jesse Pringle last week. The investigation was the result of numerous complaints being received by Inspector McCabe regarding the alleged wholesale killing of deer in North Hastings and Lennox Counties, when out of season.

PAY TRIBUTE TO BASIL C. LEWIS

Citizens of Bury, Quebec, Attend Obsequies of Son of Veteran Reeve

Bury, Quebec—Back to the scenes of his childhood and early manhood years brought the mortal remains of Basil Charles Lewis, who died by death in the family plot in the Bury cemetery, where the body of his mother was committed less than three years ago.

It was indeed an imposing tribute of respect to the memory of the youngster, Rev. Dr. C. K. Lewis, of Belleville, Ontario, who for twenty-six years was a rector of the Anglican Church here, being forced to retire owing to ill-health.

The cortege in which the late Basil Lewis was held in Bury and the respect and love which are felt for his father was evidenced by the deep gathering of the people of Bury and friends from adjoining towns and villages who assembled at the station platform to meet the funeral cortege when it arrived here from Montreal, where the late Mr. Lewis passed away as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident.

Immediately upon arrival in Bury the remains which were accompanied by the two brothers of the deceased, A. S. Lewis of Montreal, and R.V.P. Lewis of Toronto, were taken to the Anglican cemetery, where the committal prayers were said by Rev. W. H. Cheverton, who is acting rector in the absence of Anglican Church. Other members of the clergy present at the interment were Rev. Rural Dean Tolk of Cookshire, Rev. H. A. Brown of East Angus, and Rev. Canon Robins of Scotstown, as well as Rev. Mr. Lewis, a nephew of the late Rev. Mr. Lewis.

The funeral service which was held in St. Stephen's Church, Montreal, was conducted by the late Mr. Lewis' son-in-law, Ven. Archdeacon Lewis, assisted by Rev. C. T. Lewis, father of the deceased. Rev. Dr. Lewis, a brother of Mr. Lewis' health, it was impossible for him to accompany his son's remains to Bury.

The late Basil Lewis, who was 35 years of age, leaves to survive his wife, Marjorie Hammond, and his infant daughter, Jay Carole, aged 8 months; his father, Rev. C. K. Lewis, Bury; two brothers, R. V. P. Lewis, Toronto, and Horace V. P. Lewis of Toronto, and one sister, Mrs. S. Greenlees, of Montreal.

Tide-Harnessing Project Considered by President Roosevelt

Campobello Island, N.B., July 30 (AP)—Mutual development of hydroelectric power by Canada and the United States and the project for St. Lawrence deep waterway Treaty were projected by the United States Senate were disclosed by President Roosevelt as two subjects he will discuss Friday in Quebec with Canadian officials.

Sitting on a rock on the Bay of Fundy shore of Campobello Island, after a hot dog and cake picnic the President also announced in his first press conference in weeks that he still felt the $40,000,000 Passamaquoddy tide harnessing power project feasible.

The President said that if Canada ever should start developing the tides of Quoddy the rest of the future would naturally be a free export of surplus power between that country and the United States.

LOAD OF MELONS UPSETS IN DITCH

Driver of Transport Tells Officer He Was Forced off Road

The small boys' paradise, luscious water melons, came under the cover of darkness, but without the aid of the rising of the sun today. The sight and object that would have made any small boy's eye glisten, followed the turning over of a motor transport, near Marysville, that was filled with large water melons. The truck was driven along the highway as the melons rolled in all directions as the truck, driven by Vincent J. Argier of Hanover, swerved off the highway, before the break of dawn, however, the load was replaced and the vehicle continued its sundry journey. Motorcycle Patrolman W. H. Delaney investigated the accident as he was passing the overturned vehicle at 1.30 a.m. today. Mr. Argier informed the officer he had been forced to swerve suddenly as an oncoming motor car crossing him over to the side of the highway, shifting the load and causing the vehicle to upset. No person was injured during the accident.

Canadian Malartic to Step up Production From 300 Tons Daily to a Minimum of 700 tons Daily

The following report by the General Manager, E. V. Neelands, covering the quarter ending June 30th, 1936, has been approved for publication:—

During the period April 1st to June 30th, tonnage treated was increased to an average of 338 tons daily during the month of June. Production came almost entirely from the south ore body between the third and first levels. Ore reserves within were substantially exceeded resulting in greater tonnage and slightly lower grade.

The production shaft (No. 2) was enlarged to three compartments down to the third level. Between the third and seventh levels this shaft was 60 percent completed. Further development of the south orebody has provided a reserve of 4 years ore supply for stoping.

Five diamond drill holes were drilled from the surface to explore the north zone east of the mine workings. Hole S-36 cut two sections; 15 feet at 0.11 oz. and 13.8 feet at 0.17 oz. in S-30 cut one section; 24.5 feet at 0.39 oz. Holes S-28, S-29 and S-31 were barren mineralisation.

Costs have been further reduced except development, which is higher due to the more expanding development programme.

A new compressor is being installed. Bringing total compressed delivery up to 2,800 feet per minute. A double drum hoist with a capacity of 80 tons per hour from 2,000 feet has been ordered.

Development will be sufficiently advanced to permit a further increase in mine output by January, 1937, and plans are being made for mill enlargement to bring the capacity up to 500 tons daily after that date.

Operating results for the quarter were as follows:

Tons Ore Milled	26,449
	Per Ton M.
Metal production (gross)	$180,081.51 $6.807
Less: Marketing Charges	2,230.36 .078
Metal Production (net)	$177,851.18 $6.540
Operating Costs:	$120,811.17 $4.319
Administrative and General	5,648.94 .192
Operating Profit:	$39,783.94 $1.047
Add: Non-operating Revenue	11,702.40
Profit for the Period	$41,486.34

General Charles G. Dawes' prediction that the steel industry of the United States will be benefited by the turn of the year seems justified by no means impossible. It was the General who in 1934 said steel operations would turn up, slowly at first, about the middle of 1936, and keep on rising for some time after. He was right in this gives more weight to his present prediction.

The shares of Montreal Power should come in for more attention shortly after the Quebec elections next month. The company has a valuable asset in Beauharnois, is reporting steady gains in electricity output and will save an appreciable sum through reduced fixed charges. Shrewd investors have been picking up the shares around the 30-mark for a long time now. The $1.50 annual dividend is amply secured and has a field of close to 5 percent is attractive.

Fear of Dictator Ring May Force France

Paris, July 30 (AP)—French Socialists today said Premier Leon Blum had told the Foreign Affairs Committee France might be forced to aid the Spanish Government with arms, last she be "surrounded by dictatorships." The Premier was reported bolstered in denying calculatedly that any airplanes or arms had been supplied by the Spanish Government since the outbreak of the Fascist insurrection.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, July 30.—(AP)— After absorbing considerable profit-taking in the forenoon session, the stock market today began to erase its losses of the previous session.

With the news generally interpreted favorable, the close of the list a mild rally at the opening. They were followed by the motors, aircrafts, alcohols and amusements.

Dealings were quiet, however, and the majority of issues failed to get very far on the upside in the morning. Near the noon hour buying took on a livelier turn and gains of fractions to a point or more predominated. Transfers were around 1,600,000 shares.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, July 30.—(CP)—Weak trade exercising the usual summer volume, the industrial board of the Toronto stock exchange registered new highs today and the bulk of the gains were held by the close. Specials comprised about the only weak group with International Petroleum nagging 3¼ at 24¾, off 2-8 on top of yesterday's loss of 3-4. Distillery, steel and construction stocks were strong. New highs in the food group were the Hunts issues and Loblaw A, and Dominion Farmer and Weston registered gains. Standard Paving Pfd. and Building Products were members of the construction group to push to new tops. Nickel and Smelting did better but the other pivotal issues, Brazilian, C. P. R. and Ford were quiet.

Power Corporation added its utilities advancing more than a point while Beauharnois, Canada Electric and United Pwd. Pfd. trailed along. Canadian General Electric closed about 6 points up.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, July 30.—(CP)—The Toronto mining share market churned about within narrow limits today and closed with a generally firm tone. Base metals held their gains and weak spots in the list at the close but gains and losses over the board were small. Lamaque, Sherritt and Ventures traded in dramatic fashion. Lamaque was about the only definitely weak issue of the group, dropping back to 2.13 for a loss of 4 cents.

In the last hour O'Brien advanced to set a new high at 5.90, up 25 cents for the day and trailing along to a closing close were Red Lake Gold Shore, Wright Hargreaves, Island-Rouleau Bay, Read-Authier and Lamaque. Sherritt continued strong at 4.30 but willed under profit-taking. Other soft spots were McKenzie Red Lake, Canadian Malartic, Paymaster, East Malartic, Glenora and Base Metals. Hard Rock dropped nearly 20 cents. Pioneer and Buffalo-Ankerite slipped back 10 to 20 cents each.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, July 30.—Prices of eggs to the retail trade, for small lots, were advanced one cent per dozen on all grades except O particular, by wholesale dealers here today. Fresh receipts in the city, in cartons or 15-lb. tins, the market continued strong, with demand for fresh grades particularly hard to get. The butter market was quoted unchanged at the close, although sales were 1-2c lower than yesterday. The cheese market eased fractionally on light export sales and lower British prices. Potato and vegetable markets were unchanged. Receipts were posted at the Board of Trade as: 1,640 cases of eggs, 1 box of butter, and 2,183 boxes of cheese, including factory receipts, which are posted altogether each Saturday for the week.

Graded shipments of eggs arriving in cartons or 1.c.l. lots were generally firm for fancy or A-large 35-36c for A-medium, 31 1-2c to 32 1-2c for A-small, 30c for C. The Commodity Exchange posted bid prices of 36c for A-large, 32c for A-medium, 29c for B and 27c for C.

When Steward Ingram reached the street, he walked away with long strides, blind to the course his feet followed. The picture of this girl in his father's arms went with him, maddeningly vivid. How often had he imagined Esther in her himself, her body sweet and lax against his, her throat arched and her chin upturned in the offering of her lips. He turned him dizzy, even now to think of it.

He was through with women. They were all alike, thought his mother, of course. And Millicent Hinshaw, maybe. She was a blue-ey'd daughter and ought at least to be decent. But what of it? Who cared how the Millicents consoled themselves?

He could swear that Arline was innocent, too, last week when he met her. The glamor of his father's wealth and power had overwhelmed her. All that strength and personality which Steward himself felt in his father would be irresistible to a young girl like Arline. At the thought, he hated his father. His fingers twitched with the desire to rush to hurt him. He could feel his father's thick muscular throat as his fingers dug into it. The physical satisfaction of this imaginary conflict calmed him.

Because he was rich, because he was middle-aged and had no one to call him to account, because he was Jasper N. Ingram, he thought he could go around as a playboy.

Maybe his father had the right idea at that. Ever since the world was what it was, the thing to do was to go ahead and enjoy yourself. Why sentimentalize about women? Love 'em and leave 'em. That was the only way. He had learned his lesson. He was through with women.

CHAPTER IX.

He went to his club and had a plunge in the pool. Then, and a couple of drinks from a bottle in his locker, gave him an appetite, so he dropped in at Tony's, where both the food and drink were good, and sat at a table near the bar.

Some fellow he had passed on the way to raised a hand and nodded to him. He returned the salute carelessly; but who was the man? Presently he identified him as one of his father's self-satisfied friends, a bird named Aldrich or something. His name, Celebrating, had a girl with him, not his wife either. That post he had seen at the garden party was his wife.

Steward was disgusted. Seems as though everywhere beautiful girl, boasting at an old goat for what she could get out of him. Why couldn't any girl like this Aldrich?—Alspaugh, that was the name. Yet there she was chattering and smiling and pretending she was having the time of her life.

Steward had an idea he'd seen the girl before sometime, but he couldn't remember when—anyway, Alspaugh was a good picker. Of course at his age, he had to get somebody young and fresh. You didn't often see a girl with a prettier complexion. Made all the other women in the room look shriveled, pasty. She had other charms, too: fine eyes, even at this distance, sparkled blue fire; a very soft shoulder moulded the round chin; shapely shoulders, and a gallant carriage of the head. Then he noticed, with a curious sense of relief, that she was the only woman in the room not smoking.

At that he played with a sudden impulse to go over and join them. He was the boss's son, so Alspaugh wouldn't object. Maybe he could get on the inclination, they got up and went out. He would meet and see her again. What the hell! Girls were all alike. They only brought you grief.

N N N

A little before noon the next day, Jasper Ingram walked up Crosby fields and asked to speak to Mr. Steward.

"Do you wish me to wake him, sir?" the butler asked. "He came in late and was looking—very tired then, sir."

Jasper hesitated. To be jerked from sleep after a night out was what the boy deserved, but why be brutal. "Don't wake him," he said, that when he comes down, tell him I should like to see him at my office as soon as possible."

It was nearly three o'clock when Steward arrived at his father's office. With the recuperative power of youth, his appearance, in no way suggested a night of drinking. And some, yes, in spite of the fact that his smiling face was now set in severe lines and reproach and anger were in his eyes. There was no cordiality in his voice as he asked:

"You wanted to see me, sir?"

"Yes. About yesterday." Ingram said. "You're entitled to an explanation. I had legitimate business with Miss Martin. She had a pay that she thought I might bank. It's no good. When she saw how I felt, she used the silly tricks women of her kind think are sure-fire. That's one of the catches about being rich and the object of the gold digger. I'm better. Understand?"

"It looked to me like fifty-fifty," the boy said steadily.

"Looked to you! Indeed, I know how it looked to you! Your lack of control made that plain. Gentlemen, with intelligence, acquire just a trifle more poise."

"I thought she was different, that's all."

"Different? I wouldn't know about that. She's in the profession. She's independent, and probably," he added dryly, "not above doing a little gold digging."

"All right, " Steward said, "Have it, sir. I don't want to talk about her, if you don't mind. So if that's all—"

"I've told you the truth, son, without cavil. With it in sort of an apology. At least a 'sorry'. Have you nothing to apologize for?"

At last Steward's self-control slipped and the show of decency that had been maintained until now was shattered by something resembling an explosion.

"Apologize for saying you keep a harem? It's true, isn't it? Then I won't apologize!" He realized he was shouting and lowered his voice, but his control was not steady. "You and your mother in the dark, but I'm a man. I get around. I'm known. And ever since I was a kid at Groton."

Ingram was dumbfounded. The worst of it was, of course, that part of what the boy said was true, which made it extremely difficult to answer the straight-laced Victorian.

"I don't want to discuss my personal affairs with you, Steward. In spite of the fact that you 'get around' it's just possible you are still too young to get my viewpoint. Certainly I don't mean to defend myself. But I do object to your suggestion that I'm that bad."

Steward became elaborately sarcastic. "Oh, all right. I'll apologize for 'harem'. I'll withdraw 'harem'."

Jasper Ingram's weary gesture suggested the futility of further talk. Instead, he felt rather small and guilty in the presence of his ruddy moral son. Why, the boy was as innocent and as unspoiled as cats are guns were! What would you expect from given, at that moment, had he been able to look his son squarely in the eyes, conscience in the blood of his conscience!

Storming of his father's weariness and remorse may have reached and touched Steward, for this angry decent him. "You might have left just her alone—" he added—like murder of his face drawn by the sons he fought back. To cry, like the little boy his father thought him! To avoid that ignominy, he turned and ran blindly out of the office. He would have slammed the door had not a patent spring, frustrating the attempt, closed the door behind him in majestic silence.

Jasper Ingram, stunned and troubled, sat in his office pondering the problem of fathering a Man.

Seward's bitterness a little due to his passion for Arline, was, in large part born of an obscure, unacknowledged love for his father. Hitherto there had been only distance, not antagonism, between them. Always he had been proud of his father, proud of his appearance, his friends, his admitted power. Now all that was gone.

The room just outside Ingram's private office was empty when Seward burst into it and he paused for a moment to regain control of himself. He choked back the hysterical impulse to cry lighted a cigarette, jerked at his tie, and smoothed his hair.

At that instant, the door to the main office opened and a girl, her hands full of letters, came in. He stared at her angrily, resenting her intrusion. But the resentment died quickly as he recognized in her the girl who had been with Alspaugh the night before.

She looked a little self-conscious, as though she recognized him, and Seward said, "Oh, good afternoon! Then paused by memory, he added, "I saw you out at the house the other day, didn't I?"

"The day of the party. I did some work for Mr. Ingram. It was wonderful."

"Not much fun for you, I should think."

"Oh, but it was! I saw it all from the window.—And the ride in that lovely boat—and the drive back in the grand car! You should have seen the neighbors stare, when that car stopped in front of our house to let us out!"

CHAPTER X.

Seward, looking her up and down, smoked on. "Are you in a mad hurry to dash in there?" he asked, nodding toward the door of the inner office.

"Why, n-no! Mr. Ingram didn't ring for me. I was just taking him these letters."

"I don't believe he's in a hurry. Have a cigarette."

"I don't smoke, thanks."

"You're kidding."

"Indeed, I'm not," she said.

"How isn't it refreshing," he mocked. "I saw you last night, you know, at Tony's with Alspaugh."

"Yes, we saw you. Mr. Alspaugh kept me working late and he said he thought he ought to feed me before sending me home. I certainly was hungry. They have the best things to eat at that place!"

"The drinks are all right, too."

"I wouldn't know about that. Except the champagne. Mr. Alspaugh ordered champagne last night. It isn't much to taste, but it seemed so exciting—having dinner in a restaurant and drinking champagne."

"Why, I dont believe—it's awfully nice of you to ask me! But I don't believe—" she hesitated, embarrassed, confused by the invitation. "I don't believe Mr. Ingram would like me to go out with you!"

"What of it? We won't ask him."

"It's not as if we knew each other outside—or ever could!"

Cathleen started again towards the door, turning back before she opened it, however, to say, appealingly. "But I thank you very much, Mr. Ingram, for asking me. But it just wouldn't be right for you to

With utter unconcern Orando drew his bow. The killing of the white man meant no more to him than the killing of the little monkey would have meant. Then, suddenly, the imprisoned stranger spoke: "Down, upwind to the other side. Your arrow cannot reach my heart from that position."

When the strange white giant spoke in the dialect of the Mangas, Orando lowered the point of his arrow in surprise. What sort of man was this? Most men would have begged for their lives. "Are you in great pain?" the warrior asked; "is that why you wish to die?" Tarzan stared coolly.

"I feel no pain," he said, "and I do not wish to die, but I know you will kill me, so I want to die swiftly and that none shall torture me. I am a warrior and avoid needless suffering." "Are you not afraid to die?" "Afraid? What do you mean? All things die. Were you to tell me I should live forever, I might feel fear."

Tarzan perceived the warrior's hesitating perplexity, and knew that he might yet save his own life, and perhaps make use of this tribesman in his investigations of the mysterious Tribesof Death. But Orando still believed that it would be safer to kill the stranger.

CURTSYING BEFORE THE KING

Some 900 debutantes, 11 of them Canadians, made graceful bows to King Edward at two formal garden parties held in the grounds of Buckingham Palace. The parties substituted for the courts at which presentations usually are made. One young lady is pictured curtsying to the King, seated on a gilt chair under a red-and-gold dutsar sent. Although the court is not in full mourning the brilliant and dainty dresses worn by the debutantes were marked by a touch of black. (Canadian Press Photo)

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK by R. J. SCOTT

Trenton and District

Trenton, July 29—(Special)—Mrs. Charles Francis born in Trenton on October 13th, 1847 says she is feeling fine today. For longevity of its she advocates one should lead a calm ordinary life. Her many friends compliment her by calling her an encyclopedia, she says. Her memory is very good and can recall almost all interesting happenings since she was a young girl. She was the daughter of Sheldon Hawley one of Trenton's pioneers.

Mrs. Francis says her father was Trenton's first police magistrate, post master and drygoods merchant. He was also instrumental in the erection of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The church was built in 1845 and Mr. Hawley supplied the stone for it from his quarry. When Mr. Hawley would travel to Montreal to purchase drygoods it would take him a week as stage coach was the only means of transportation at that time. While he was gone his wife would act in his capacity as Justice of Peace and united many happy couples in marriage. Her oldest sister, Susan, passed away four years ago. She was the first white girl in this district' states, Mrs. Francis. When the Indians portaged from Lake Ontario to Bay of Quinte to deal with our fathers they worshipped the little white child and followed her bearing all descriptions upon her, added Mrs. Francis, Mrs. Francis is very much interested in world affairs as she has travelled extensively in Europe and Africa. In closing she says "that by living a good clean life she expects to live a number of years yet and hopes that they will be as wholesome as the last ninety-two".

Allora Build Garage

Across from their coal offices on Front Street, the Allora Company are constructing a large garage. Men are at present laying foundations for the 66 foot by 38 foot structure. Allora reported that it will afford two months' employment for the men employed. This garage will also enlighten the appearance of Front Street. Previously there was a fallen down shack marring the beauty of the street.

From a Weed Bed to a Rock Garden

On North Front Street, on the north side of VanAlstin's Garage a beautiful rock garden has been built. Last year the spot was cluttered with weeds and parts of cars. This spring Mr. Jack VanAlstine spent his spare time working at the side of the garage and as a result has one of the prettiest gardens in Trenton. All sorts of flowers are planted among the coloured stone. Little cedar bridges have been constructed across the artificial crest, and bird houses have made ice garden complete. Mr. VanAlstine is thinking of building a bubbling fountain in the middle of the garden. This view has attracted many.

Rail Scares Boys

Charlie Baker, 12, and Walter Spry, 13, while walking across a farmer's field outside of the western town limits were suddenly attracted by a snorting noise from behind. Looking around they saw a bull in full action after them. Scurring to the fence they jumped over just as the animal was about to ram them. The little fellows continued on their hike but made it a point to steer clear of that field on the way home.

Robert Shoniker Held

Wanted on a charge of stealing a bicycle Robert Shoniker formerly of Trenton, is being held in jail for Toronto Police. Local police picked Shoniker up on Bay Street. He gave his name as Charles Shoniker and said, he came from Oshawa.

OFFER EXCELLENT MOTOR SERVICE

Keyes Supply Co., Ltd., Carry Complete Stock of Replacement Parts

Many of us fail to appreciate the value of an auto supply house to a community. Often times we take our car to a garage, with the interest that we get immediate service. We do not stop to consider that it is practically impossible for any garage to maintain a complete stock of replacement parts for every make of automobile. Therefore in order to prompt service it is necessary for the garage to be able to purchase those parts in this locality. So, after considering these matters, we may readily see that an auto supply house such as Keyes Supply Co. Ltd. is an indispensible factor in our modern progress.

This reliable firm carry a complete line of replacement parts and accessories for every make of automobile, truck or tractor. They will make deliveries both local and out of town. Parts may be mailed to you, if you make your wants known by phone or mail. All the progress we are familiar with automobiles and trucks and one will find them prominent and astounding at all times. It will be distinctly to your advantage to see Keyes Supply Co., Ltd. before purchasing parts elsewhere as this firm are members of N. E. T. A.

By way of completeness this firm have spared no expense in equipping their shop with the newest and most modern machinery for the fitting of pistons and reboring and grinding scored cylinders. In fact they are prepared to meet all the requirements of general repairing and motor re-building. Their service is of great value to garages throughout this district, also the fact that they are distributors of Willard Batteries by the trade.

Keyes Supply Co. Ltd. under the able management of Mr. G. Dickson are endeavoring to meet the demands of the trade in a way that is deserving of much commendation. Do you know the number of local people employed by this firm?

Canadians and Americans Not "Foreigners" to One Another Says President Roosevelt in Address.

ONE SOURCE OF GOVERNMENTS

United States and British Empire Seen as Showing the Way to Restoration of Man's Shaken Liberties.

NATIONS' COMMON HERITAGE

Prime Minister King, Premier Godbout and Quebec's Mayor Join Viceroy in Greetings to President.

BY JOHN LEBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC, July 31 (CP)—In a handclasp between two nations, Lord Tweedsmuir and President Franklin D. Roosevelt today pledged anew the old friendship between Canada and the United States.

Under the shadow of Quebec's gaunt old citadel, reminiscent of a battled past, they exchanged the tokens of a century-long peace. And, while thousands looked on, the Canadian Governor-General and the United States chief executive spoke of the bright future they hoped would grow out of that amity.

Canada's viceroy, looking beyond America to the other British nations and their same friendly feeling for the United States, epitomized their wishes. It was his prayer, he said, earnestly, that, "not by any alliance, political or otherwise, but through thinking the same thoughts and pursuing the same purpose the republic of the United States and the British Commonwealth may help to restore the shaken liberties of mankind."

NATIONS UNITE IN WISHES

Accepting the sentiment, the smiling President spoke in reply of the "natural sympathy and understanding" between his republic and this dominion. There had been tangible evidence, he declared, of the desire of the two nations to "practice what they preach when they speak of the good neighbor." And he voiced the hope that the day might hasten when "the heads of the Canadian and American nations will meet more often each year, not as foreigners, but as neighbors and friends."

The sun-browned sailor president, fresh from a vacation cruise through eastern Canadian waters, received a welcome also from Prime Minister King, supplementary to the Governor-General's welcome. Pointing "with pride" to the international unity and good-will between the two countries above and below the border, the Prime Minister said the unfortified frontier spoke to the world "of the beauty and the blessings of peace."

Thoughts of Battle Long Past.

Premier Godbout of Quebec and Mayor J. E. Gregoire joined in the welcome, speaking to a throng spread over the grassy slopes of Dufferin Terrace below the tall stone pillar that stands as a monument to Wolfe and Montcalm and their battle that saw Canada's destiny change hands. Further back could the president had paused it as he drove to the reception—was the Plains of Abraham where Canada was wrested from the French.

But today was a scant thought of battle as the race mingled. More than one speaker referred to the Canadian-American relations to dwell upon the friendship between the two peoples of Canada. It seemed to fit the spirit of the day.

John Graham, the historian, may never set down the account of that meeting for posterity. But someone else very likely will. For something of the intangible seemed to hover about events for history was in the meeting.

President Is Established.

Tradition and precedent were brushed aside. Never before had a United States President come to Canada to visit with a Governor-General. Only once before, on President Harding's last, fatal journey—had one set foot officially on Canadian soil. President Roosevelt had, course, but was just a vacation trip to his old summer home on Campobello Island.

He was in Canada, the president made it clear, strictly as a neighbor, not as the ruler of a "foreign" state. He "rebelled," he said at the thought of being classed a foreigner on this soil.

Nor was he greeted as one except for the customary amenities accorded a visiting head of government. Quebec acclaimed him. From the moment his train pulled into Wolfe's Cove, within pistol shot of the spot where the gallant English man of another day scaled the cliffs

Pete, a Barnegat Bay mallard, is a one-year-old duck orphaned by a recent storm. He is the obituary of Barnegat and now the pet of the town, perfectly at home in Jake's Store.

Everyone worried when Pete became ill. When he grew so sick that he climbed the stone to his master's coffee and took to bed, his bed—a real bed with springs and mattress—had been fathom and up the problem was solved at meeting.

Jake called in the village nurse who reported that Pete refused even the hot cereal. Then she diagnosed the trouble.

"He's homesick for Jersey," she said. "Put an ocean on school respects he will undoubtedly be well tomorrow."

The children, also explained spent most of their leisure at the beach.

DOLLAR WHEAT HAS SECOND DAY

At One Time During Session Price Threw Cents up

Winnipeg, July 31.—(CP)—Dollar wheat extended its stay into a second session of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today as bullish sentiment united to push wheat futures prices past the 97 mark in all three positions and on the final unofficial recording of new seasonal highs.

After opening with a three-cent advance at top levels, prices near mid-session rallied 1-4 to 3 1-4 cents higher with July at 102 1-4, October 102 and December 100 5-8 cents per bushel.

Chicago, July 31—(AP)—The commodities markets basked with excitement again today as reports of many major farm products soared to new highs for the year and in many cases to the highest levels since 1929. Public recognition of severe drought damage to crops caused the fresh outburst of buying.

Corn shot up by four cent limit permitted by trading rules to break all previous price records for six years.

BY THOMAS T. CHAMPION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 31—(CP Cable) — Blind members of the Canadian Pilgrimage luncheon today with blind Canadian ex-service men now living in England. Also attending were blind war veterans from Australia, New Zealand and South Africa who are living here.

The lunch was arranged through the Canadian Club of that famous institution for blind war veterans called St. Dunstan's.

Altogether some 200 persons attended. With the guests came their wives or other individual escorts. Capt. Sir Ian Fraser, member of parliament and chairman of St. Dunstan's presided.

The institution has some 3,000 blind veterans under its care and although almost 20 years have passed since the Great War new cases are constantly arising. It also has 5500 dependants to superintend.

Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, thanked St. Dunstan's on behalf of the pilgrims and testified to the "wonderful hospitality" tendered the Vimy pilgrims since their arrival in London. He added he had thoroughly expected such a reception, in view of the goodwill extended to himself since he became High Commissioner.

Prime Minister King Greets Chief Executive of United States

PEACE ON BORDERS

Quebec, July 31 (CP)—Following is the text of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's address of welcome to President Roosevelt here today:

"Mr. President, His Excellency, as the representative of His Majesty the King has already welcomed you in His Majesty's name, and in the name of Canada. I have the honor to supplement that welcome on behalf of the government of Canada. In so doing, I should like to say how wholeheartedly my colleagues and I endorse the words which Lord Tweedsmuir has so feelingly and so felicitously expressed. The Crown and the people are one in the warmth of the welcome which Canada extends to you today.

We, who are members of the Parliament of Canada, had hoped that, as originally planned, your visit to the Governor General might have taken place at Ottawa, when parliament was still in session. We had intended to ask His Excellency, as we have done today, to permit us to share in the reception of his distinguished guest; and we had planned to welcome you to the Capital of Canada on Parliament Hill, at the main entrances of our Houses of Parliament, immediately in front of the Peace Memorial Tower.

"Delighted and proud as we would have been to have greeted you in the city which, since 1867, has been the capital of the Dominion, we are even prouder and more delighted today to have the honor of extending our welcome in the ancient capital of Canada. Here, more than anywhere else, the past, the present, and the future of Canada are to be read and understood.

"It was here, three hundred and thirty years ago, that Champlain, founder of Canada, inspired by religious not less than commercial motives, directed the beginnings of settlement and government of the northern hall of this continent. It was here, a century and a half there after, that Montcalm and Wolfe, carrying the conflicts of the old world into the new, alike perished on the field of battle.

"Here, on the very spot where we are now assembled, stands the monument which commemorates Montcalm, the monument which commemorates Wolfe. They are not se-

DUKE, DUCHESS MAY VISIT INDIA

Probably Will Represent King at Coronation Durbar

BY THOMAS T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 31 (CP Cable)—Reuters news circuit here today that the Duke and Duchess of York shortly would visit India. No confirmation from them could be obtained, however.

The report is indicated the Duke possibly would represent the King at the Coronation Durbar at Delhi next year.

Appointment of Sir Eric Melville as the Duke's private secretary may have provoked Wednesday's Sir Eric was in Lord Willingdon's entourage while he was Governor-General of Canada and accompanied him to India when he became Viceroy.

Sir Eric recently has been studying diplomatic procedure in Downing Street, and may become secretary of the India Federal Cabinet, when it is eventually created.

It is unlikely, however, that the question of royal representation at the Durbar has even been discussed as yet.

THEFT CHARGES INVOLVE $94,000

Toronto Brokers Held in Custody, $10,000 Bail Demanded

Goderich, Ont., July 31—(CP)—Gordon G. MacLaren and Robert S. Gourlay, Toronto brokers held in custody here today, remanded to Aug. 6 on theft charges involving $94,000, and with bail for each of them set at $100,000.

The two appeared before Magistrate J. A. Makins here yesterday and were remanded for a week with no plea being taken. Crown Attorney Dudley Holmes of Huron County asked that bail be set at $100,000 for each accused.

R. C. Hays and E. C. Darrow, counsel for the brokers, protested the amount, calling it "preposterous" and stating it amounted to sending a man to jail.

Mr. Hays said I. W. C. Solloway, another Toronto broker facing charges involving much larger sums, was in liberty on $10,000 bail. Magistrate Makins sustained the Crown Attorney's request and said the amount was reason for the high figure in view of the investigation now proceeding.

On informations sworn to by Provincial Constable F. E. Mould, the men are charged with theft of bonds and money from 30 persons, all clients of J. J. Riggall, Hensforth barrister now in jail here awaiting trial on embezzlement charges.

BRACKEN LOSES CLEAR MAJORITY

Conservatives Biggest Winners in Manitoba Election

Winnipeg, July 31 (CP)—Strategists of Manitoba's five political parties looked to the opening of the legislature with a speculative eye today. Then the next moves on the political checkerboard are expected and not till then will it be known whether Premier John Bracken can carry on government with his declared Liberal-Progressive following.

Intent to Harm Denied; McMahon Says Revolver 'Slithered' as Protest

Weeps in Box as He Recounts Incident on Constitution Hill

MIND DISTURBED

Claims Intent to Suicide Suddenly Changed to Act of Protest

London, July 31.—(AP)—George Andrew McMahon was committed for trial today, on three charges that after he had sobbingly testified at a Bow Street Police Court hearing that he "slithered" a revolver at King Edward on Constitution Hill two weeks ago.

Weeping in the witness box, the prisoner testified he had planned to shoot himself but, instead, decided to toss his revolver in the roadway in a protest against "wrongful imprisonment."

Bites Lips

Biting his lips to suppress his emotion, McMahon drew his eyes as he related the manner he had suffered as a result of the "unjust" imprisonment on a criminal libel charge, later quashed.

"I had been brooding on the subject for many months and in my weakness gave way to drink," he pleaded.

"I experienced the tortures of a damned soul!"

McMahon will be tried at Old Bailey in the autumn.

The three charges on which he was committing are:—

1. Presenting at the person of His Majesty a revolver with intent to alarm His Majesty.

2. Producing a revolver near the person of His Majesty with intent to injure His Majesty."

3. Being in possession of a revolver with intent to endanger life.

Speaking with a distinct Scottish accent, the crippled prisoner told the court how he stood in the crowd waiting for the King to ride by last July 4th.

"I saw all the people happy and content," he declared. "Then I remembered I had hardly the price of a meal.

"I thought: 'What is the good of living?' I was going to shoot myself."

He continued:

"Then I saw how distressed my wife would be.

Tried to Draw Attention.

"The thought suddenly struck me that if I could only draw the King's attention to the wrongs I imagined had been meted out to me, at least I could then allow his subjects to be so treated."

McMahon always had carried a revolver for his own safety, he explained.

"I remembered about the gun," he went on.

He stooped down.

"I walked for a few moments and then I swung my arm as approaching I threw the gun.

"I looked at the feet of His Majesty's horse.

"Did you ever point it at anyone?" demanded Sir Donald Somerwell, counsel for McMahon.

"Definitely not!" replied the prisoner.

No Intention of Firing

"Did you intend your revolver is for anything or anyone?"

"No!"

"How did you throw it?"

"I stooped and slithered it along the road."

Yesterday, McMahon had testified he protested to both King Edward and his father, the late King George, against "unjust imprisonment" on a charge of criminal libel. The conviction later was quashed.

He denied he had threatened either Monarch or anyone else and said he had attempted to take no life.

A lengthy letter to the late King George, read into the record, appealed "for a full inquiry into the disgraceful treatment of one of your subjects."

McMahon said the arrest resulted in his losing his job in London and his hand tonight, also attended Bride Sunday and Special Holiday Dance Monday, 10 Seen' Ya. JH-11

DOLLAR WHEAT HAS SECOND DAY

At One Time During Session Price Threw Cents up

Winnipeg, July 31.—(CP)—Dollar wheat extended its stay into a second session of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today as bullish sentiment united to push wheat futures prices past the 97 mark in all three positions and on the final unofficial recording of new seasonal highs.

After opening with a three-cent advance at top levels, prices near mid-session rallied 1-4 to 3 1-4 cents higher with July at 102 1-4, October 102 and December 100 5-8 cents per bushel.

Chicago, July 31—(AP)—The commodities markets basked with excitement again today as reports of many major farm products soared to new highs for the year and in many cases to the highest levels since 1929. Public recognition of severe drought damage to crops caused the fresh outburst of buying.

Corn shot up by four cent limit permitted by trading rules to break all previous price records for six years.

Egg Peddler Beaten And Robbed in Home

Sudbury, Ont., July 31 (CP)—Sixty-year-old Isaac Solomon, egg peddler, was beaten and robbed in his apartment here last night.

Police seek a young man, whose first name is said to be "George." The youth had been helping Solomon for a week and staying with him. He disappeared last night and is thought to have left town on a train. A sum of $68 was taken. The man was apparently beaten with one of the victim's boots about the head and face, and it is feared the shock and injuries may prove fatal.

FOUR YEAR OLD BURNS TO DEATH

Father Working in Field and Mother at Barn When Blaze Starts

Matheson, Ont., July 31 (CP) — While the father mowed hay in a nearby field and the mother was busy at the barn milking cows, their four-year-old baby girl burned to death when their farmhouse, a mile and a half from Matheson, was destroyed by fire today.

Neighbors, living across the road, noticed the flames and pulled a six-year-old brother out through a window of the house. The boy badly burned about the legs, and suffering from shock and smoke, was taken to the Matheson hospital.

The fire is believed to have started in the kitchen.

The body of the child was found on the bed, burned almost beyond recognition. The mother remained alone in the house when the fire started.

An inquest was held in the afternoon and a verdict of accidental death returned by a coroner's jury, presided over by Dr. C. Smylie. Funeral services were held immediately after the inquest with interment in the Matheson cemetery.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McIntyre with the remaining children moved to Matheson last spring from Owen Sound and settled on the farm which is owned by Matheson Township.

Parts of the fire loss on the house, which was burned to the ground, is covered by insurance.

LONG SNAKE ON HANDLE OF FORK

Having a large black snake drop from a pile of hay and also from his pitchfork handle was the experience of John Giles of Waterdown, Ontario, when he went into his barnyard on his buying operations. As he was throwing a forkful of hay into the mow, which apparently had been asleep, unnoticed by him, and down on the handle, the reptile was not removed five feet at once in length.

GARAGE FIRE IS EASILY DISTINGUISHED

With the grass fire menace removed at least temporarily by the heavy showers of last week, which created danger from grass branches, city fire department have had a respite from the many alarms turned in during the record hot wave.

Fire which started in a garage of the Wright Grocery on West Main St. early last evening was extinguished by fire squad before any material damage was done.

The cause of the fire was not without its thrills" said Fire Chief Wm. Lynch this morning. "Fumes about high over gas tanks, and the fume-pipes were minus their covers."

"It's a wonder a severe explosion did not occur, but I guess we were a little lucky," smiled the chief.

ACTUAL DANGER OF BUSH FIRES OVER

Although smaller fires in isolated sections of the district have still been reported lately, the actual danger of bush fire in the Tweed area is now over, it is reported by W. H. Crosbie of the Ontario Forestry Branch. The area, however, is being carefully patrolled owing to the tinder-like condition of the woodlands. In the district of Bancroft yesterday through the motor cars through the north township observed a smaller fire spreading through waste land, but the flames, however, was nil, according to estimates.

SEVEN SKUNKS HOLD UP PARADE OF CARS

Seven skunks held up seven cars on No. 7 Highway about seven miles west of Marmora, on Tuesday afternoon of this week for approximately seven minutes.

Two of the animals stuck to the centre of the road, finding there some morsel or other to their liking, while the five others ambled unconcernedly in the direction of the south side of the highway at a leisurely gait.

Only by an effort was the driver of the first car able to avoid striking one of the animals, before rolling up the remainder of the parade while the skunks slowly filed along.

Bossie Learns Lesson By Painful Experience

Struck by an approaching car and carried for a distance of 39 paces along No. 2 Highway, three miles before the city, a cow thought to be hailed by the driver, a well-behaved cow, now owned by Mr. C. B. Meyers, Front Road, then an irresponsible heifer and who refuses to obey orders, has learned her lesson well, it is reported by her owner.

Fear of cars passing along the highway has been well implanted in bossie's mind. Today when she wishes to cross the highway in company with the herd, she now takes the lead, stops, looks and listens for some time and refuses to cross the road until well satisfied that all is clear.

BELLEVILLE BAND PLAYS AT CAMP

Members of the Belleville Municipal Band, under the leadership of Bandmaster Lt. Fred Johnson, presented a special program of music at Frank Smith's tourist camp, at Madoc, last evening. Pre-arranged pictures were shown the huge crowd present, while brief addresses were also made by leading residents of the township. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the Johnson Guild. The occasion was the official opening of the camp for the northern tourist trade.

Found Guilty of Breaking Into a Local Creamery

James Doyle, transient, was sentenced to serve two years in the Penitentiary at Kingston after having found guilty on a charge of breaking and entering the premises of the Maple Valley Dairy Co., when he appeared before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., in this city's local police court.

Doyle pleaded not guilty to the charge, stating in evidence he was intoxicated at the time and had been taken into the boiler room of the Creameries by a man, who he believed was an employee of the company. Constables Arnott and Taylor, who arrested Doyle in the building after receiving reports of a breakin at that point one week ago last, testified under oath, that the window of the front door of the building was broken and the door was ajar, when they arrived to investigate. They also testified as to the finding of an empty liquor office door. P. C. Taylor later found Doyle in the boiler room in a state of intoxication. The accused had been drinking rubbing alcohol, the officer stated.

Mr. W. Ellis, butter-maker at the plant, also testified under oath: "All doors were properly locked and well secured at 10 p.m. on Wednesday night, the night when I locked up."

Doyle stated in defence: "I was intoxicated at the time and was taken into the building by a stranger. I'd been drinking all day," he said.

"Your story does not appeal to me, and I believe you guilty all right," concluded His Worship, prior to sentencing the penitentiary sentence. K.C. Donnan, K.C., later read Doyle's previous criminal conviction form which was doubtless the longest and most serious ever read in the local police court. Doyle had been convicted some 34 times on previous occasions and invariably used aliases. You are your fingerprints give you away as there's no way to change your finger tips often," added Mr. Donnan in conclusion.

THREE MONTHS ON THEFT COUNT

Fred Laroche of Three Rivers Sentenced After Plea of Guilty

Fred Laroche, alias Leon Wilson, 25, Three Rivers Que., was sentenced to three months in jail on two months nor more than two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory after pleading guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the home of Mrs. Doherty, Thurlow, when he appeared before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., in this city's local police court.

Laroche was charged with Paquin, companion and fellow-prisoner, when Laroche's car was abandoned. Paquin testified he was 300 yards from the scene of the robbery, while Laroche substantiated the statement and assumed full responsibility for the robbery. The charge against Paquin was dismissed and he was permitted to leave the court.

Paquin was unable to speak English. Constable St. Louis of the local detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, secured the court all articles stolen had been recovered. A camera, one pair of field glasses, a guitar and some other small articles were among the things stolen on Sunday afternoon during the absence of the Doherty family.

Artist Assists Young Girl in Her Paintings

Scenic views of the Bay of Quinte, local harbor scenes and colorful sketches of the harness-ge in this vicinity will in all likelihood appear in American periodicals if the views of Miss Mary E. S. Thurrell prominent American artist and local resident, have significance as is any criterion.

Mr. Thurrell, who is mixing business with pleasure, is on a vacation trip to Canada and motored through the city recently enroute to holiday fishing grounds and other holiday pursuits, but found time to paint a few scenes.

Of an amiable and sociable disposition, Mr. Thurrell was not bashful about discussing his work with a local young lady who has artistic aspirations and ability.

Upon examining proofs of the young lady's work and saw a very constructive criticism. For some length of time he sat in the local Tourist Information Bureau, with pad and pencil pointing out various methods of sketching, and giving the very talented young lady some helpful information.

Before leaving Mr. Thurrell drew several lifelike sketches of people present, one sketch of Mr. Vernon Orr, being particularly good.

ROBB WAVE ORGAN HEARD BY RADIO

Instrument Is Played by Noted Organist, F. Sylvester

Before a visible audience estimated at 5,000 people and an invisible audience of thousands more throughout the Dominion seated at family radios, the new Robb Electric Wave Organ, recently completed in this city, and the first instrument to be installed in the local plant, made its successful debut at the Promenade Symphony Concert, Toronto University, last evening.

Again for the performance of the organ was rendered in no small measure by the outstanding listening judgment of Mr. Frederick Twydell, the famous Toronto organist and member of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, who rendered a very beautiful Handel Concerto in B Flat to the program.

The organ, the texture, it was declared in the city today, augurs well for future productions of the same, superved by Mr. Morse Robb, inventor of the organ and general manager of production, who was present at the concert last evening.

Increased Registration Due to Highway Work

The attraction of work on the Provincial Highway with its accompanying scale of wages, 30c an hour, to be paid for a 30 hour week, are the factors for the increased registration at the City Unemployment Bureau this year, said an official of that office this morning. "Up to July 15 we had 1,200 persons registered here", he stated. "This year we have 1,800 on our books."

"While these figures do not indicate that there is a decrease in the number of unemployed in the city, work on the highway has caused them to register who would not have done so otherwise. Not because they did not want to work, but from the knowledge that work was not to be had." Work is progressing on the Clifton crossing project, but with the exception of two, no additional men have been taken on thus far.

From twenty to thirty men appear daily at the Unemployment Bureau in the hope of securing jobs on various highway projects. Two thousand cooks are also in search, while, as one official puts it, "office boys and nurses and some cases college graduates, are working in private homes as domestics, through inability to secure positions in their own particular line of endeavor."

POLICE COURT

One of the largest dockets ever presented in local police court faced Magistrate R. J. Butler today in Belleville when 17 accused persons lined the prisoners' docket, while a number of others stood in the body of the court room, that was filled to overflowing.

J. Everton Woodcock, Belleville, pleaded guilty to the theft of a fur jacket, valued at $200, from Mrs. Holland, local plumber. "This fur jacket was sold to Woodcock and by the accused and sold for $15 by him. He got a total of $215 for his trouble," explained R. C. Donnan K.C., local Crown Attorney. Woodcock pleaded he would make restitution, providing he was given a suspended sentence.

"There will be no suspended sentence in this case, but I will enlarge the matter for judgment for one week, during which time you can make restitution if you desire," replied the Bench. Later Woodcock's mother informed the court she would make good.

Charges of the theft of a battery, laid against Gordon Graves and Harold Hughes, by Lorne Ross, were dismissed for the sole of evidence, when the latter was found in possession of the battery in question, but had found it on the city dump, they testified. Mr. Arnott, counsel for the accused boys, stated they had found it as he asserted and the battery and the matter was immaterial.

A man giving his name as Gideon Miller, Toronto, faced a charge of fraud. The case arose out of the alleged non-delivery of a suit of clothes sold by Miller in this city. Constable Wm. Marden concerned informed the Bench that restitution was being made and stated he have the charge dismissed. Their request was granted.

Johnson Hillier, Deseronto, faced a charge of assaulting one Lavern Thompson a fellow-prisoner. The charge was laid over for one week. Hillier being remanded in custody. The case was presented in court by Chief Frank Smith of Deseronto.

Charges of assault, which were heard in Monday's court against Mills, Woods and Chas. Mills, of Thurlow, at which time Magistrate was reserved until today, found His Worship fining the latter $20 and costs or keep the peace, after severely reprimanding the trio. They were permitted their liberty.

Three drunks and one charge of reckless driving culminated the longest session of police court held locally this season. One defendant was also disposed of when the accused husband was instructed to return to his home and reside in a peaceful manner.

A charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident was preferred by Motorcycle Sam Ervine against one Hugh Wade, of Brunswick Ave., Toronto.

Officer Ervine based a warrant for Wade's arrest following the alleged sideswiping of a motor car driven by A. J. Savage, 34 Front Street, on the night of July 30th east of Belleville No. 2 highway.

The accident resulted in considerable damage to Mr. Savage's car. While was arrested in Kingston on July 30th on L.C.A. charges and was later turned over to Belleville police. The case will be presented in Tuesday's local police court.

POLICE BLOTTER

Shifting her gaze to ascertain her directions on the highway was the reason given police for a motor accident that resulted in a heavy machine striking off at the base on Highland Ave. yesterday afternoon. An automobile driven by Mrs. Tom Greenough, 3544 Tyrone Ave, Flint, Mich., driven out of control when Mrs. Greenough turned her head to look for a No. 2 highway sign. The vehicle continued for 100 feet and struck the pole before Mrs. Greenough could right the vehicle, she stated to Traffic Officer D. Mills, who investigated.

The radiator and front fenders of the vehicle were badly damaged during the impact, but neither Mrs. Greenough nor her husband, a passenger in the motor car, sustained injuries. The matter of restitution was agreed upon.

A bicycle, the property of Victor Rowbotham, 14 Bolton St. was stolen from its parking place on the Market Square last night. At 2.30 a.m. today, however P. S. Evans recovered the 'bike' abandoned at the upper end of Front St. It was returned to the owner today.

Walter Grills, Moira St., garageman, brought a trailer licence, attached to a rear-board, to the police station today. Mr. Grills informed the police he found the trailer licence on the highway last night.

New Orleans Sportsman Ousted from Committee

Berlin, July 31.—(AP)—Ernest Lee Jahncke of New Orleans was ousted from the International Olympic Committee today and Avery Brundage, President of the United States Olympic Committee, was elected in his place.

Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of the United States Navy during the administration of President Hoover, was dropped on the technical grounds that he failed to attend two consecutive meetings of the International Committee.

The ouster of the New Orleans sportsman, well known in yachting circles, came only months after he opposed the United States participation in the Olympic games because they were to be held in Germany.

ANOTHER CHANCE TO WIN CASH

Ontario Intelligencer Readers Will Find 'Prize Essay' Contest Profitable

Again today someone in the district has the opportunity of winning a three dollar cash prize offered by The Ontario Intelligencer for the best arranged set of answers to the "Prize Essay" Contest. There is nothing hard about the contest and five minutes of the easiest work will make you eligible for the prize.

The rules are simple. The contest consists of news matter that appears in The Ontario Intelligencer each evening with a question. The article tell you about what services are offered by worthy firms, and the questions ask something pertaining to the concerns that the stories describe. This does not mean that it is a guessing contest. There is no question at all. It is necessary for you to call the firms and ask them for the answer, then arrange your answers, in the most artistic, original or clever manner and bring or mail them to The Ontario Intelligencer "Prize Essay editor. Prizes are awarded to the contestants who submit the best arranged answers, not the best answers, for all answers, if correct, are the same. By "best arranged" is meant cleverness of construction. This may be accomplished by printing the slogans or writing them in colors or putting them in the form of poetry—or cramping the stories and making them upon sheets with pictures in keeping with the service they describe—or in any way that your ingenuity is directed them. These are merely suggestions, however. Originality is the deciding factor.

Look through this issue right this moment, find the firms and get the answers, arrange your answers as you wish and send them in. You may be today's winner.

BLESSED TWIN SENSES

We mortals are asked to walk a pretty straight line. There are pitfalls on both sides of that line and the ones we are apt to overlook are pointed out by Sir C. C. Walshfield in the following passage:

"Of every good quality there is an excess which is undesirable. Excess of self-reliance leads to secretiveness and soulish obstinacy; of caution to impertinence; of discrimination to hesitation and inaction; of foresight to indecision; of perfection to waste, submission, and so on.

To give due weight, and no more than its due weight to each ingredient in the composition of our character, we are fortunate if we are blessed with those twin senses, a sense of proportion and a sense of humor. As a possessor of Mrs. Partington's rag of time and money. After singing and praying and a social time we repent Mr. Lackey and Miss Mary Lackey served lunch.

"Only Philco has it!"

I appeal to you..... on behalf of the car ahead

It carries a happy little family—treat them as though they were your friends—they are nice people . . .

WHEN YOU AND I talk about other motorists we usually mean the car ahead but I wonder if we ever stop to realize who is in that car.

Probably people just like ourselves who are deserving of every Courtesy which we can extend to them. People who will appreciate our Courtesy and consideration and act the same way towards us.

So when motoring on the holiday, I appeal to you to think kindly of the people in the car ahead.

TRY COURTESY
IT WORKS BOTH WAYS

- If you wish to pass them, give your horn a cheerful toot and give them a wide berth as well.
- If they wish to slow down or turn off the road, give them a "break".
- If they have just overtaken you, because they prefer to drive more quickly, refrain from racing or otherwise inconveniencing them.
- If there is a car following you, remember that to him you are the "car ahead" so be sure to drive and signal and otherwise show to that motorist the same courtesy that you would like to have him show to you.

In other words, "Try Courtesy" on the holiday in all your driving and thus do your part to help yourself and other motorists enjoy a holiday free of accidents—"A holiday free of accidents"—what a grand heading that would be for Tuesday's newspapers. Do your bit and "Try Courtesy". It is the new spirit of the road.

Sincerely yours,

NATIONAL ART GALLERY GROWTH

Loan exhibitions of Canadian paintings from the National Gallery are reported as highly satisfactory, according to the annual report of the The National Gallery of Canada. These exhibitions have brought Canadians from coast to coast face to face with work of Canadian artists and have in numerous instances resulted in the founding of local art institutions. The influence on the young people of these exhibitions has been particularly marked and there are instances of farmers and their families who have driven fifty miles and more to attend a National Gallery exhibition.

Principal accessions made this year include: oil paintings, "The Ravine Farm" and "The Mountain River" by Homer R. Watson, R.C.A.; and "The Rogers Pass" by John A. Fraser, R.C.A. (1838-1898), six homespun spreads; gifts—the bequest portrait of Sir Gilbert Parker by Sir Hubert Von Herkomer, R.A., "Fairy Tales and Village in Picardy" by Mary Bell Eastlake; "Voltaire" (abronze) by Jean-Antoine Houdon (1741-1828). Prints of the fifteenth, sixteenth and nineteenth and twentieth centuries have been added to the collection.

The need of a new gallery building has been pressed again as it has been year after year since 1921. Such a building, it is pointed out, would house the Canadian War Memorials Collection, and would safeguard the treasures of national art and form a monument to Canadian art. It is pointed out that atmospheric control is essential in this climate for the preservation of art works. Only two of the galleries have anything like adequate lighting. Buildings are not properly fireproof. Space is lacking and this condition hampers the work of the Gallery greatly.

The needs call for three groups of galleries, one for the Old Master and sculpture collection, another for the Canadian and modern collection and the third for the Canadian War Memorial collection, and a prints and drawings department, the report states.

ALL BELGIUMS

The Finns believe that Finland is fated to be the Belgium of the next war. Evidently misfortune and Russia mix, so, too. The Moscow official press protests against the project for a Finnish air route running from Stockholm via the Aland Islands to Helsingfors and thence via Talinn to Leningrad in much the same language employed by Berlin in complaining recently of the surveys for Russian landing fields in Czechoslovakia. Germany charged that the Soviets were constructing airbases along the Czechoslovak border for use in attack against the Reich and now Investia declares that the real object of the proposed Finnish air route is to provide Germany with air bases to strike at Russia.

The significance of these charges lies in the light they cast on the psychology of Eastern Europe. However it may be interpreted elsewhere, the policies outlined in "Mein Kampf" are taken fully in the borderlands between Russia and Germany. The people in this region are convinced that "the next war" is in preparation and that they will provide the battleground. Most of them, particularly the Poles, the Czechs and the Finns, have paid a high price for nationhood and have a fierce, almost a pathologic, pride in their new-won independence. They occupy the last place any nation would choose if it could pick out its geographic position, and all their policies are conditioned by the two-front-ed danger to which they fell themselves exposed.

Though Finland is a shining example of how a small nation can live and prosper in peace if only it is content to be small, it feels obliged to spend a fifth of its income on military preparations, despite the fact that the Finns are as certain as the Belgians are that they are helpless before the encroachment of a powerful neighbor. If the Poles and the Finns lean to Germany against Russia, and the Czechs to Russia against Germany, it is for no love of either power but in a desperate effort to save themselves from the deluge.

Europe is a complex of insane policies, all futile. The effect of these weekly shifts and line-ups against "the next war" is inevitably to bring it closer. What European State is a great Power against air invasion? The value of Colonel Lindberyh's warning was not only in sounding that note of common sense that seems to have deserted humanity, but in reminding the big nations building war machines and war allurances that in terms of "aeronautical time" they are all Belgiums, helpless as any small Power against swift attack from the sky.—New York Times.

The difference between rising at five and seven o'clock in the morning, for forty years, supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night, is nearly equivalent to the addition of ten years to a man's life.—Doddridge.

THE PRECIOUS INTERLUDE

In between the strees and strain
There comes the precious interlude,
A time to rest the weary brain
And relax to tranquil mood;
When the body over-wrought
Yields to nature's soothing balm,
And the mind sore-spent with thought
Finds renewal in deep calm;

Perhaps beside a placid lake—
Just beyond the rising hills—
Neighboring groves new echoes wake,
While fast recede all seeming ills;
Or upon the boundless sea
Lulled to its resistless breast,
Thanes all fret and worry flee
Borne upon the high waves' crest;

Maybe where prairie grasses sway
Like strings on an aeolian harp
Accompanying thrum and roundelay
And soothing every care and carp;
Or where snow-peaks cleave the sky,
And tired eyes take a far-off view
As land and sea in beauty lie,
And change of focus gives insight new;

Perhaps among the human throng,
Seeking, striving, hurrying by,
Finding companionship, warm and strong
Or a solitude, though about men hie;
Mayhap within that world where thought
Attains a glory and renown;
Or in the realm where music reigns;
Or corridors of art a-down:

A week, a day, even a minute
When seeking tendrils of the soul
Lay hold upon the Infinite,
And find life an harmonic whole;
A time of exultation rare,
Maybe in din, maybe quietude,
When the soul in abnegation laid bare
Is renewed in the precious interlude.

"CURIOUS FACTS ABOUT PAPER", a pamphlet published by the United Paper Mills Limited, of Toronto, has this story:

"For twenty years a harmless derelict wandered the streets of English cities dressed in a home-made suit constructed of newspapers, handbills and posters tied to his body with strings. Although not dressed in the height of fashion he frequently changed his "clothes" as a sanitation measure and for the amusement of the public . . . His tastes ran toward posters printed in brilliant red and yellow. None knew his real name, but everyone called him "Paper Jack". Recently a speeding motor car ran down Paper Jack and newspapers throughout the British Isles treated his obituary notice with all the importance of a celebrity."

In an age of "rackets" "Paper Jack" had a racket all his own and because it was different thrived on it. Those who step out of the beaten path and produce something different, be it a "racket" or something highly beneficial to the human race will at once command attention and a measure of success which would not have been possible if they had been content to remain in the ranks—content with the way of our fathers and our fathers fathers—good enough for them, good enough for us —laissez faire.

"SAN FRANCISCO"—One of the worst disasters of modern times. A beautiful city destroyed by earthquake, fire and dynamite. All this is reproduced with marvellous accuracy in the film "San Francisco," which has broken all records for attendance at the Belle Theatre, Belleville, being held over for several days additional to permit all to see it who wish. As a film spot in history, alone, aside entirely from its entertainment value, which is exceptionally high, no one should miss seeing "San Francisco" which reproduces the terrifying earthquake and all the horrors which came after it relieved by the high lights of love and heroism. Last showing of this triumph of motion picture artistry will be this Friday evening.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

July 31, 1916.

During the past three weeks painters and electricians have been busily engaged at Emmanuel Church and the interior now presents a very attractive appearance. Much credit is due the pastor of the church, the Rev. A. M. Rubly, who is a tireless worker. The church will be re-opened on Sunday and Bishop Brewing will be the special preacher.

Why is it that with so many automobiles in Belleville so few of them are seen upon Front Street? The only reason we can think of is that the roadway is so bad that the owners do not wish to risk their lives on it.

Ald. Sinclair, chairman of the gas committee in the city council, informs us that seventy new gas services have been installed this season so far, and it is expected that fully seventy more will be installed before the winter comes. Some people ridiculed the idea of putting a new main on Bleecker Avenue, but the wisdom of such action has been amply vindicated: twenty-five new services have been installed on this avenue.

FIRE SITUATION GROWS SERIOUS

Burning Over Five-Mile Front Near Coleman, Alberta

Coleman, Alta., July 31 (CP)—A fierce forest fire traced a red path today along a five-mile front in the Crowsnest Pass, Canadian scarcely checked by efforts of hundreds of men they hoped to halt it as the only means of stopping the blaze.

Flying sparks and embers from the fire, carried many miles by a strong wind yesterday, brought danger to timber lands as yet untouched by the red scourge. Already, an estimated 100 square miles of south-western Alberta's treed lands have been burned over by fires in the past week.

The fire broke over the provincial boundary from British Columbia eight days ago, and has since way across the Crow's Nest forest reserve in the Castle River Valley. In its path are ranches and farm homes, and today fire rangers said "the situation is growing more serious hourly."

Ontario to Have Minimum Wage For Male Workers

Ontario will have a minimum wage for men after the next session of the Legislature.

While standards have not as yet been decided it is ascertained that present proposals are for a $17.50 per week minimum for men in Toronto, with a lower figure set for towns.

The Government's intention became known yesterday when inquiries were made on the basis of Premier Gardiner's undertaking in Quebec to introduce minimum wage laws if returned to power.

Premier Hepburn himself has heralded minimum wage standards for men in Ontario. The legislation was ready last session of the Ontario Legislature, but its submission was prevented by enactment of Federal wage legislation then declared invalid.

One consideration impelling the Government is the reputed discovery that as the minimum wage laws for women are enforced in Ontario certain industries have changed over to the employment of youths, for whom there is no minimum.

While not much publicity has been given to the efforts of the Ontario Department of Labor to maintain "living wages" the department has made numerous quiet, successful moves along the line of boosting pay in the lower-paid working categories.

OTTAWA AGREED

Ottawa, July 31.—Premier Mitchell Hepburn proposed to pass legislation instituting a minimum weekly wage of $17.50 for men will not be opposed by the Dominion Government, it was learned today.

Ontario already has on its statute books a law establishing a weekly minimum wage for female workers at $13.50. When that statute was passed in 1920 it was believed that owing to the depression there would not be a day's wage more than $12.50 would be paid to men.

Ontario's right to pass a minimum wage law for men is in doubt, though the Dominion Government's appeal to the Supreme Court, rejected by the recent opinion of the Supreme Court of Canada, which divided three to three concerning the validity of the minimum wage law passed by the Province of Saskatchewan.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, and other influential members of the Dominion Cabinet have expressed themselves in favor of such legislation, and they will not object to Ontario making Federal legislation for a higher level of wages for men.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating supper and pop said, I think sometimes you are inconsiderate of your parents. I reminded this evening I paused a drugstore window this afternoon and saw a display of razor blades and sharpener was being demonstrated and although I stopped and looked with conflicting emotions, I finally continued on my errand without failing for it.

Mar says you deserve a gold medille with your name on both sides, ma said, and pop said, But it hasn't told you this. Your contrivance was being demonstrated by a fascinating young blonde with a face as frank and honest as it is beautiful, and I was unable to subscribe to you the grace and sincerity with which she held up the razor golden hair from her head and cut through it with the sharpened blade. Made. But did not shave it. The whole incident goes to prove that I am always on the lookout for gadgets and an easy mark for gadgeteers. I am a free spender and can save my gadget money to buy more expensive gigets with, and I expect your consideration in this matter, he said.

That reminds me, some kind of a slapicous cooking box was delivered for you today, ma said, and pop said, How do you mean, slipicous? I mean that it was a cheap article like something ats useless, ma said, and pop said, O yes, I know what it is, and believe me it's far from useless.

Well what in the world is it? ma said, and pop said, You'll see it in the paper, and I suppose it will already be unbounded.

I insist on knowing immeedilly, ma said, and pop said, Then I insist on telling you that it's a perpetual—flash like that never has to be refilled because instead of a charged battery it has a little cunt that you turn to generate an electrical currant as you need it.

Well for land sakes where did you get hold of that? ma said, and pop said, I was at a meeting of demonstrated.

Hee hee ma said, and we kept on eating supper, being state under onions.

UNION NATIONALE 'ABOVE POLITICS'

Duplessis Attacks Use of Racial Cry For Gain

Quebec, July 30 (CP)—Maurice Duplessis, leader of Union Nationale, has declared his party is really above partisan politics. "It is composed," he said last night at Magog, "of anybody who wished to put welfare of the province before party welfare."

The Union Nationale definitely opposed racial warfare. "I am the leader," said Mr. Duplessis, "I am going to be Prime Minister, and I will never stand for anyone, no matter whom, no matter what their influence, using racial cries for election gains."

The man who sought political gain by rousing racial cries was a traitor, said Mr. Duplessis. Union Nationale candidates knew very well that harmony between English and French-speaking residents of the province obviated the racial issue in elections.

The inquiry by the Public Accounts Committee into government departments had caused such a storm in the legislature, said Mr. Duplessis, that all that remained was to "remove the debris."

The Liberal government has decided on demolition instead of going through the formality of proving what this had been done to prevent further disclosures, he charged, for the Provincial auditor was to have been a witness before the Public Accounts Committee.

He insisted the government was after perjury scented at the Public Accounts inquiry, but had done nothing about it.

Shell Today Studies Gasoline Performance in Modern Motor Cars

SHELL EXPERIENCE is indeed the best teacher. And Shell's experience — Shell's study of gasoline performance — is world wide.

From the four corners of the globe this experience comes to the Canadian Shell refineries, where it is studied and used to give you a gasoline exactly suited to Canadian conditions. That is why Shell is so efficient that you get every last mile from every gallon — why Shell starts faster. And Shell is uniform quality wherever you buy, because Shell pumps are sealed against substitution.

Present Gifts to Popular Couple

Moira—On Tuesday evening a large number of friends from Moira and the surrounding vicinity gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ketcheson to do honour to their daughter, Beatrice, bride-to-be. Mr. Harry Emerson acted as chairman and called Bessie and Mr. Franklin to come forward. Miss Ruth Ketcheson then read the following address:

Miss Bessie Ketcheson:

Dear Bessie,—

We meet here tonight to tender to you our felicitations on your approaching marriage. Though your worth has taken you out of the community we have always considered you a Moira girl and it has been a great pleasure for us to hear how your sunny disposition has endeared you to all with whom you came in contact. At home your quiet and generous assistance in all good causes has been greatly appreciated.

We know that in your new life you will endeavour to follow the Christian example of your parents and create that which Canada so richly needs at this time—a true home; and we can only echo—"Sail on into the Sea of Life, Calm, faithful, loving, trusting wife."

Let us assure you that on that day when you stand in the Church before Father to make your vows and to receive the blessing of that Church on your new way of life that the best wishes and hopes of the community will rest upon you.

We ask you to accept these gifts and may the sight of them remind you happily of that time of your life spent in Moira.

Signed on behalf of the community,

Bernard Herity
Milton Vanderwater
Will Collins
Ruth Emerson.

The young couple were then presented with an electric clock, two electric lamps and some silver-ware. Bessie and Mr. Franklin both thanked their friends for the gifts and extended a hearty invitation to visit them in their new home. A goodly number of ladies and gentlemen remained then spoke a few words wishing both a happy and successful wedded life. Mr. Franklin stood up and sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." A bunch consisting of sandwiches and cake was then served. After an hour of social intercourse the gathering dispersed.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Robin Hood of El Dorado"

Thundering across the screen with majestic grandeur, "Robin Hood of El Dorado" opens today at the Capitol Theatre to herald the rebirth of a brand new era of spectacular outdoor films.

There is ample reason to suspect that this picture will bring back the days of "The Covered Wagon", "The Big Trail", and other epic photoplays that marked the dawning of the talkies. Produced on a large scale and with a cast to match, it has a sweep and power that give it commanding importance and more than its quota of entertainment value.

Warner Baxter, as the dashing Joaquin Murrieta, gives the finest performance of his career, so far as the screen. He portrays a character who left his name written large on the early history of the Far West, a good-bad man who plundered the rich to help the poor. In the adept hands of the star the character becomes entirely lovable and endowed with a warm naturalness that is sure to captivate the heart of every woman.

With him is a newcomer who is definitely a valuable discovery for the films. Her name is Ann Loring. She portrays a daughter of the Dons turned savage, and in her impetuous style weaves a performance that is truly outstanding. Sharing feminine honors is Margo, the lovely Spanish dancing beauty who turned dramatic actress two years ago and since has become an international sensation.

"Robin Hood of El Dorado" is the story of a simple, lumbering peon on one of the great California ranches who is driven to outlawry and seeks by the invasion of American gold hunters. Driven to banditry to exact the murders of his wife and brother, he finds a price on his head in every American settlement.

With a deep hatred for all Americans, he organizes an outlaw army and rides rough-shod over the settlements, plundering the rich for gold and leaving a wake of terror in his train. It is with all this he finds time to play thrilling scenes of romance, and conquers feminine hearts with irresistible charm.

Still another performance of unusual strength is that of Carlos Villarias, who plays Three-Fingered Pete, the historical desperado of the days of '49 and gives to the character an element of grim humor that enlivens the narrative. Ramon Novarro's performance as Billy young Mexican's only American friend, and Eric Linden contributes a sympathetic performance as Billy's young brother, Manuel. Others who aid in making the picture realistic and stirring are Soledad Jiminez and Harvey Stephens among about 100 more principal players.

AT THE BELLA

"Emile Zola"—"Emile Zola" and "The Big Noise"

An entirely different and unusual type of G-Man picture is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Bella theatre tomorrow and Monday, matinee daily under the title of "Public Enemy's Wife." a Warner Bros. production in which Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, Robert Armstrong, Cesar Romero and Dick Foran have been featured leading parts.

The picture is said to be packed with thrills, including the overpowering of guards on a train and the escape of a gangster killer; the attempted murder of the bridegroom of the divorced wife of the killer; the kidnapping of the latter's wife by the gangsters in which they plan to flee the country, taking the young bride and captured secret service operatives with them. In this climatic scene there is another thrilling gun fight, with the chief of crooks meeting his death. While O'Brien plays the featured leading part, Miss Lindsay has this time the is a beautiful and cultured woman who falls in love with one of the gangsters in which they plan to flee the country, taking the young bride and captured secret service operatives with them. IN MEMORIAM

McNEIL—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, May McNeil, who passed away July 31, 1935.

Mother dear, we are so lonely
Since the day you went away,
And our memory lingers often,
On a grave quite far away;
One year has passed, but loving memory
Never dims, nor hearts shall fade,
Of the dearest, kindest mother
Ever God to a family gave.

WILSON—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Frank Wilson, who passed away July 31, 1934.

Deep in our hearts lies a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest,
In memory's frame we shall keep it
Because he was one of the best.
Our lips cannot speak how we loved him,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say,
God only knows how we miss him
As we struggle along Life's way.
Gone and forgotten by some he may be,
But dear in our memory ever will be.

SPECIAL LEVIES TO BE REDUCED

Hon. David Croll Says Four Mills Will Be Sufficient

Toronto, July 31.—(CP)—Special levies for relief purposes in two Ontario municipalities will be reduced under a decision handed down today by Hon. David Croll, Minister of Welfare, in appeals against additional levies for relief purposes.

In the case of York Township, the Minister suggested that evidence has been presented to him indicating that four mills, instead of 5.4 will be all that is necessary to take up slack between what he regards as adequate provincial grants and municipal under-budgeting for overexpenditure.

The Minister told Reeve Marsh Magwood that if it is demonstrated through reports that the Township Council before noon Friday that this additional money can be saved out of current budget, he will recommend the additional order and release the special levy to a straight four mills.

In the case of Windsor also a similar levy will replace what previously had been considered necessary—a 5.7 mill rate.

Asheville, N.C., July 31 (CP)—Officers said Oscar Ewing, jailed on a larceny charge, took a needle from his bed, sharpened its edge on the floor of his cell, and cut his arms in a suicide attempt.

He failed. A few hours later he removed his clothes, bonded them about his neck and attempted to hang himself from the bars.

Again he failed when officers halted him.

Then he was taken into court and given a four-months sentence on charges of attempting suicide.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Warren C. Giles, president of the Rochester Redwings, was yesterday elected to the office of President of the International League to succeed the late Charles Knepp of Toledo, Ohio. Finally, of New York, Secretary and Treasurer of the league, made the announcement, following a meeting of the league directors at Baltimore yesterday. Warren Giles has long been connected with the Rochester Club and should prove a valued executive member and a fearless leader of the "Int" loop.

The members of the Quinte Quinte Country Club are hounding the trail of S. R. "Sandy" Burrows these days. It seems there is a standing rule at the Country Club, that the fee for "treats for all" whenever a hole in one is accomplished, is the lot of the golf club. On Wednesday, July 22nd, Sandy Burrows made his fellow-members believe it is back in one, Mr. Burrows only driving once with the ultimate result that his ball finally wound up in the cup. The match was played against Mr. Harworth of Stirling who has to treat all of the ninth hole. It was a beautiful drive, the ball nearing high up and far away until it came to rest, apparently safe from the cup on the ninth green. In the game between Mr. Haywarth drove into the trap on the fifth, but when he blasted out, Mr. Haywarth's ball rested Sandy's. In favor of the lapsed knocking Sandy's ball into the cup for a hole in one, at least Sandy only hit his ball once at any rate."

Sandy's fellow-members are shockingly "treats of you Sandy old boy", but Mr. Burrows is somewhat dubious as to whether he should be credited with a "one" or not.

A number of lady body blows have been struck the Brockville Magedonas during the past few weeks. Jo-Jo Grabosk announced he is migrating to England, Red and McDonald is at present in Belleville and may accompany the one-eyed star puncher across the briny, while yesterday Verdell Price, star defenceman, and his "affair" Mahon of the Magedonas, took up their abode in Trenton and trekked northwards to New Ontario. With the exodus of these four stars maybe it would not be hard to induce Tex. Bill Barry and Harry Nicol to return to Belleville and don the livery of the local hockey team this coming winter. Who knows?

When the Picton Blue Sox could have clothed first place in the Lake Shore League on Saturday and Sunday last by defeating and absorbed an 8 to 5 defeat at the hands of Ted Olsson and the Cobourg Combs. Now the Combs are assured of first place, while the Picton aggregation will have to meet the third placed Bowmanville nine in the Combs' back yard. The Cobourg bludgeons thumped soundly on the former, ended the offerings of Church and "Hemingy" Phillips for a total of 16 safe hits.

When the Pirates pushed the Picton crew on the home lot Wednesday they lost standard Skinner Edwards to Brockville and their lofty perch of second place to the third rung. Now if the men of Wells can continue their winning ways on Monday versus the Pirates, in the game in the C.O.B.L. picture will take on a different form. Over the week end there is a hearty rivalry for the top league, with Kingston at Oshawa and Napanee at Peterboro. Then on Monday (Civic Holiday) the Pirate come to Belleville for a league fixture while Whitby journeys to Kingston. After Monday's game the locals will be idle for eight days. With the Pirates having three postponed games left, besides their regular schedule games the final league standing is far from decided. A little more fight on the part of the locals and they'll be right in the thick of the tussle yet. If they'd quit taking their reverses lying down and stand on their head legs and "fight" every body in the park, at least they would have the support of the fans.

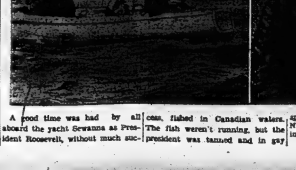
The Canadian Olympic committee are making a bid for the next winter Olympic games. They want the summer games and would take the winter games also, but Canada has far better accommodation for the staging of winter games. It has been proposed to hold the 1940 winter games at and near Montreal, if Canada's application is accepted.

Today's baseball question should prove a delightful one to our Oshawa contemporary; it reads: "Simmers are on second and third with two out. Batter hits sharply to left field. Left fielder grabs ball on the bounce and throws to third base, catching runner sliding into bag. Fellow-runner on third has crossed home plate. Run count one? No, run does not count.

Cy Barclay's Belmonts qualified for the final series when they Belleville Sargents by virtue of their 10 to 1 victory over the West End last night. The Belmonts have now put away in the fourth when they beat the West End by 10 to 1 and secured three circuit blows and a trio of triples, while the visiting Belmonts did not collect a single extra base hit in 11 hits garnered. The unfortunate accident to pitcher Ted Reynolds in the second game of the semi-final series in the Intermediate League, the Belleville Sargents. The series will be the best three out of five and commencing on Friday night, President Bowler announced today.

If suitable arrangements can be made the local junior Kiwanis ball team will play an exhibition game in Wellington on Monday in connection with the Civic sports carnival to be held in that community. The game, the parade and a general day of athletic events will precede the ball game. Coach Leo Ryan is making plans to expect to get the Napanee-Bellevile junior C.O.B.L. play-down series to commence sometime next week.

Regarding "Belleville's C.O.B.L. victory of Wednesday the Kingston sport writer says: "No longer need the C.O.B.L. teams look for a win when they meet Belleville town. Two from Quinte have turned in their worm on the proverb and have smashed down the hopes of the league-leading Oshawa entry in the last two games. It's a case of "Beware" for the rest of the league now that they are also playing heads-up ball right now and will be expected to be a runaway at the start of the season now promises to settle down and be a death-struggle.



FOUR FLIERS KILLED

Berlin, July 31.—(CP-Havas) The Olympic air derby, in which 160 aviators from 22 nations are participating, was marred by four fatalities and two injuries last night when three planes crashed en route to Hanover.

The first crash, in which the navigator of a German plane was killed and the pilot injured, occurred at Altona.

FOXBORO DEFEATS BANCROFT 11 - 9

Exhibition Played in Connection With Community Picnic

Bancroft, July 31—Playing an exhibition game here in connection with the community picnic, which was held on the Agricultural Grounds on Wednesday afternoon, the Foxboro nine tied into an all-star Bancroft team at the Hall and Bancroft and after nine innings of heavy clouting emerged victorious the score being 11-9.

Bob H. Ketcheson, who started on the hillop for the winners, and his rival pitcher, Jack H. Giles were hit freely, with Giles being nicked for one less hit than his teammate, collected off the combined offerings of Ketcheson and Ashley, who relieved the former in the fifth. Giles allowed 15 safe clouts while striking out seven, Ashley and Ketcheson gave up 16 hits and sent 11 batters back to the bench.

The Foxboro infield gave their pitchers a trifle better support than did their opponents, the Bancroft quartet accumulating three errors especially in the fourth inning when Giles had a bad hole, but as the game progressed they improved considerably and for the eight frame in with a double play to stop a Foxboro rally.

Foxboro's batting in Carr were a big threat at bat for the winners, Carr getting a home run and single with Gay hitting a homer and double. Sergeant Sutton and Guay also gave Giles plenty of trouble as Bresee connected for a triple in the eighth inning. The latter named players getting a double apiece, while Ross Keech, Bancroft's former Foxboro player lived up to his past performances and knocked out three doubles and a triple, with H. Giles, R. Giles and Wm. Giles also getting two hits apiece.

Foxboro started out to make a runaway game in the first inning off Jo Giles for four runs and added another in the second, while the locals came back in their half to tie the count in the closer and from then on it looked more like a ball game. Foxboro got one run in the fourth and the ball game was on, but the losers kept plugging away and tied the game in the seventh when they scored three runs. Foxboro came back in the ninth with the losers kept plugging away and tied the game in the seventh when they scored three runs. Foxboro came back in the ninth with Ashley singled with R. Ketcheson getting a million dollar hit that netted him a triple.

Lineups:

Foxboro: Seeley, Ashley, E. Ketcheson, Bresee, Gay, Stewart, Wall, H. Ketcheson, Carr.

Coe Hill: H. Giles, Wall, Watson, Hunt, R. Giles, Vance, Hardings, Glenn.

Score by innings:

Foxboro	1 0	430 011 003—11	15 2
Coe Hill	1 0	100 110 302—9	16 3

Vernon "No Hit" Kennedy Most Dependable Hurler in Big Leagues at Present Time

Hurls Tenth Straight Win And Not Beaten Since June 6

CUBS LEAD CUT

Cards Now Only One Game Behind Chicago in National

By Sid Feder, (Associated Press Sports Writer).

In a year that has the pitching boys yelling for help from the fast-hitting batsmithereens on all sides, baseball's "forgotten man" Vernon "No-Hit" Kennedy, lost finding any trouble keeping the heavy artillery in their places.

The lanky Chicago White Sox sophomore right-hander, who left the headlines with 1936's only no-hit, no-run performance just about a year ago and has virtually dropped out of sight since then, stands out today as the most dependable pitcher in the big leagues since early June.

While much enough masters as Lefty Dean, Carl Hubbell and Schoolboy Rowe have been taking the Rest of the headline glory with their hurling antics, the ex-Oklahoma City ace has been steadily mowing ball players down with yesterday's 7-4 triumph over the Athletics, he had compiled a string of 10 straight.

He hasn't been beaten since June 6, and since that date has stepped very chub in to the leaguers with the exception of Detroit Tigers against whom he wasn't called into action, at least once. In that run, with the Athletics his victims on four occasions, the Senators three and the Yanks, Indians and Red Sox one each, he has failed to last out one game, and has allowed an average of only slightly more than eight hits per contest, which is just enough to win ball games in any league.

His victory string has played a large share in adding the White Sox from a pre-season no-better-than-second-division choice into a a very prominent first division outfit.

Ball Fourth

They held onto fourth place yesterday despite the Tigers' bid with a 5-4, 10-inning decision over the league-leading Yankees. Schoolboy Rowe, pitching his second game in four days against another ex' rom Tigerland after a shaky start, and with the help of a ninth-inning pinch single by Jo Jo Dickey to bring in the winning run in the 10th, lasted the whole way.

Cleveland's red hot Indians, turning loose a barrage of five homers with Hal Trosky smashing two, won their fifth straight battle 11-6 over Washington Senators to clip the Yankee's pace-setting edge to 7 1-2 games.

Chicago Cubs' National League lead was shaved to a single game, when the fast-moving Giants made it two straight over the champions, winning 3-1 behind Hubbell's seven-hit pitching, while the second-place Cardinals walloped the Dodgers 7 to 0, with rookie Jim Winford's fourhitter but four hits and tight-set pitching performance by a Gas House gang recruitman in weeks.

With the Athletics losing to the White Sox, St. Louis Browns pulled a game and a half out of the American League cellar with their second straight win over the Red Sox, 4-3, on the strength of Al Thomas' effective pitching.

Pittsburgh Pirates outfielder, Rosey Rosen, the 11 innings he played out a 5-3 victory, while the Phillies managed to split a doubleheader with the Reds, winning the nightcap 8-6 after Bill Hallahan shut them out, 2-0, in the opener. Ray Starr, recently obtained from the Cubs, pitched six innings in his first Phil start.

PLAYGROUND ACTIVITIES

In a regular scheduled junior boys' softball game played in the Belleville Playground last night Belleville nine downed their East Hill rivals 9 to 6. The losers' champion East Hill nine staged a belated rally to score in the last two frames, but fell short of the eight runs unmassed by the West Hill gang in the earlier stages of the game.

The game was one of the most keenly contested and best played of the season. McBride led the East Hill nine with three successful hits and scored three runs, Rogers, Hibbard and Tamplin were the most powerful hitters for the winners. Young hurled steady ball for the winning team.

The line-ups—West Belleville — Rogers, Lumsden, Miller, Hibbard, Martin, Simmons, Blye, Young, Theobald, Brewer, Berthelet. East—Ramsay and McCaffery, East Belleville—McBride, Griffin, Theobald, Smith, Redmond, Tamplin, Adams, Powers, Goyer and Stapley.

BELMONTS WIN OVER WEST END

Enter Playoff With Belleville Sargents by 10 to 7 Victory

Taking the odd game of a three game series the Belmonts advanced into the finals in the local Intermediate Softball League by virtue of their 10 to 7 victory over the West End at Victoria Park last evening. The Belmonts now meet the Belleville Sargents in the league finals, the West End being eliminated after last night's tilt. The West Enders booted the ball for five costly errors, all of which ultimately entered into the scoring and materially assisted the Belmonts during their early game rally of eight runs.

Except for the fourth, when the West End booted the ball for five glaring errors, while the Belmonts counted three hits with the result, that the Belmonts scored five runs and coasted in to victory. Harold Dracup hurled for the Belmonts and was his solidity for three circuit blows and a trio of three base hits, as the West End swatsmiths applied the willow with a vengeance. Harris, Al Philip and Clarke hit for the circuit, while Dick Philp and Cook slapped out triples to add to the scoring of the losers.

Don Harris started on the hilltop for the West End, but gave way to Earl Clarke in the fifth, after which the Belmonts got into the game. The winners did not register a single extra base hiter although Dracup collected three singles as Amo and Dracup counted a pair each. Every other member of the Belmonts counted one single, except Townsend, however. The Belmonts ran bases well and took full advantage of the numerous mistakes of the losers. St. Louis made three splendid catches of long drive in centre field. H. Canning and Booth both made sensational running catches for the West Enders.

The line-ups—West End — J. Canning, c; H. Canning 2b; A. Philip ss; Clarke p; Ling, rf; Robinson 1b; Harris p and 2b; D. Philp cf; Booth lf and Cook 3b and rf, Belmonts—Ronsky 3b; Bartlage c; Amo ss; St. Louis cf; Dracup p; Morgan 2b; Townsend rf; Tapp lf, O'Neill 1b; and Cooper.

BILL HARRIS OF BUFFALO HURLS 2ND NO HIT GAME

Allows Only One Man To Reach First in 4-0 Win

TORONTO WINS'

Belt; Albany Pitching For 13 Blows And 8-2 Decision

(By The Associated Press)

It looks as though "Hard Luck" Bill Harris has outgrown his nickname. The Buffalo southpaw, who won that bar by losing a many tough games, when he hurled for Montreal, has compiled a unique International League record this year by pitching two no-hit, no-run games. He did the trick against Toronto back in June in a seven-inning game and today repeated against the Newark Bears last night in the second part of a doubleheader.

The Bisons had won the twilight game 4 to 1 over the Bears, Harris stepped up in the ninth inning contest and let only one man reach first, gaining a 4 to 0 decision. He spoiled a perfect game when he gave a pass to Russ Boyle. The Bisons snapping out of their slump behind Harris' mound effort, Ollie Klihe's six-hit job in the opener, with eight runs coming in the first inning including home runs by Elbert Fletcher and Ben Chapman, the latter tied by Buck Crouse in the second.

Stewart it was the second hitless game of the year. They were Harris' first victory since September by Leroy Herrmann of Toronto earlier.

His double victory shot the Bisons back into the argument over the league lead as the Rochester Red Wings could get no better than an even break with Baltimore in a home run slugfest. Woody Abernathy belted his 33rd of the year as the Orioles won the opener 6-3. The Red Wings came back for a 7-5 victory. Jimmy Brown, Kemp Cravens and Phil Wahlstrab contributed homerun blasts to their cause while Les Powers and Joe Martin hit a Baltimore pair.

A mental lapse by Catcher Frank Reiber in the eighth let Len Backer of Syracuse steal home with the winning run in a 4 to 3 triumph. Reiber dropped a pitched ball and let it roll while he claimed interference by the batter. Behind Jimmy Pattison's five-hit flinging, the Toronto Leafs pummeled Bob Burke and Al Veach of Albany for 13 blows and an 8 to 2 decision.

Official Opening of Olympic Games to Be Elaborate Affair

(By Elmer Dubrago)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, July 31.—(CP)—Cabinet-Berlin was the nerve centre of the Athletic world today on the eve of the 11th Olympiad, to be formally launched tomorrow under the most elaborate arrangements ever conceived for the gala sports show.

Upwards of 50,000 people probably will see and hear the dramatic ceremonies leading to the official opening by Chancellor Hitler at 4:30 p.m. (11 a.m. E.S.T.). The first day's program will include youth demonstrations, ceremonies at the grave of the Unknown Soldier, the arrival of Olympic Torch-Bearer from Greece and the colorful parade of the competitors—the Canadians resplendent in red blazers, white flannels or skirts, and white shoes.

The climax will come when the approximately 4,500 athletes representing 53 nations bear Rudolph Ismayr, Bavarian who placed 4th Olympic Middleweight weight-lifting title, take the Olympic Oympic oath in their behalf.

What the picture will be after the first day's parade is not clear, as the Isomals retire to the background to start unfolding things with the opening of competition.

It is banqued last night 1,300 newspaperpeople gathered from the four corners of the world heard Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Nazi Minister of Propaganda, deny there were propaganda motives connected with the games and decry critical stories about the "true Germany" spread abroad by "emigrants." He invited the writers to observe Germany "as it really is" and tell the world about it.

Finland Makes Appeal

This speech followed an appeal by Finland before the International Olympic Committee in Berlin today for a return of the games to the Finnish capital in 1940 or 1944.

"We wouldn't attempt to compete with Germany in flags and circus," commented Erik Frenchell, Mayor of Helsingfors, in presenting the case for his city as against the bid of Tokyo for the 1940 games.

Count Henry Brown, Estonian, subsidy appropriating $495,000 to offset costs of training camps. Far East. There is indication of a test match for votes between the two nations before the issue is decided by the International Committee this afternoon.

Canada's hopes of landing the winter games of the Olympiad were kept alive by the decision of the C.O.W. not to award the ice and snow sports until next year. Based on the Canadian motion for the placing of the summer and winter games in different countries Norway also entered the list for the next winter competition.

The eager athletes themselves will be welcomed to the shrine of the elaborate stage Sunday, with the modern pentathlon, 100-metre dash heats and high jump, shotput and wrestling finals on Monday. Under the two week's long program, Canadian fans will be focussed mainly on Howie McPhee, the young Vancouver meteor, in the dash.

For the United States contingent, set to defend the featured track and field championships, the test of competition will be a welcome release from a week of bickering and assorted ailments. Dissension and friction prevails in the Olympic Village that the formidable field will be full of surprises.

Most European countries present a far stronger front than they did at Los Angeles four years ago when the travelling dollar was the depression curtailing participation.

Canadian Team Strong

Chairman Sam Manson, brimful of confidence, considers the Canadian team in some respects the strongest ever sent out by the Dominion.

Japan is formidably equipped to defend the men's swimming title of Seb Pirie, the Toronto "fish" and holder of most Canadian records, figures to land some points for the Dominion. The women of Nippon, as well as Dutch girls, are also strongly for the Women's Aquatic honors. Phyllis Dewar of Vancouver, will challenge strongly in the 100 and 400 metre dashes.

In the Track and Field Division, a number of champions and world record-holders are "off form" or ailing. Sweden's Harald Andersson, America's bulky Jack Torrance, Finland's Matti Jarvinen are a trio of ailing stars, while Luigi Beccali of Italy, and Lauri Lehtinen and Volmari Iso Mollo of Finland, figure as strong chances in the belief of many observers.

Among the new stars expected to flash across the Olympic skies are Jesse Owens, triple threat from the United States, Jack Lovelock from New Zealand and Sweden's Gunnar Brey Brown.

The lanky, muscular McPhee, in the sprints; the equally long and slender Samuel Richardson, Toronto in the hop step and jump and possibly the broad jump; the previously proven Phil Edwards of Hamilton, in the middle-distance runs, are considered Canada's best bets.

Altogether, 19 sports including four with feminine competition, will keep the Athletes busy during the next 16 days. The Americans have another week and the oarsmen a fortnight before swinging into action.

OTTAWA SENATORS NOW 4 GAMES UP

Perth Royals Defeated When Ottawa Player Steals Home

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa's first-place lead in the Canadian American Baseball League was strengthened to four full games today over Perth's Royals all because third baseman Caldwell recognized opportunity and stole home with a game-tieing run in the ninth inning, Dennis then scored the winning run in the tenth.

Caldwell's feat enabled Senators to go on and win 8-7 from Brockville Pirates and pushed them further ahead of Perth, who lost 2-1 to the last place Cornwall Colts. Watertown Rambles defeated another southern team, Oswego, 9-2 on the latter's home grounds.

It was the closest of margins that Senators nosed out Pirates. The Brockville team, after trailing 6-2 into the last inning, commissioned a barrage that drove in five runs.

Then Ottawa unorked a two-run ninth-inning rally of it's own. Caldwell's steal being the third then went ahead in the first extra frame on a double by Dennis, scored by O. Johnston.

The Perth-Cedensburg affair turned into a pitchers' battle with Elsler finally credited with the decision. Darfield, Royals' starter, suffered his winning tally in the fifth inning after Orie Arnett, in the fourth.

Watertown made six hits and five Oswego errors good for eight runs. Guy Hitshew, Watertown catcher, had three hits and batted in four of their attack.

In the two leading teams, Ottawa and Perth, oppose each other today while Watertown plays at Brockville and Oswego at Ogdensburg.

GOV.-GENERAL GREETS PRESIDENT

Symbol of Goodwill.

Canada was indebted to the President's visit, Lord Tweedsmuir said, for the opportunity to offer another symbol of friendship—the new Peace Bridge between Fort Erie and Buffalo Terrace, overlooking the St. Lawrence River, for addresses. It would come and his own response.

Mr. Roosevelt stood on the flag-bedecked platform on Dufferin Terrace as he expressed warm appreciation for the welcome extended to himself, his family and the party and the way in which it had been received by Mayor Jones and the latter's wife.

Speaking in English and French on the new bridge, American chief executive objected to accounts of his recent visit, saying that he thought the waters which said he was to be accorded the "freedom of the city" personally rendered to a "foreign ruler".

Rebels At Word 'Foreign'.

"Your excellency," he said, turning to Lord Tweedsmuir, "I am grateful for the honors; but something within me rebels at the word 'foreign'.

"I say this because when I have been in Canada I have never heard a Canadian refer to an American as a 'foreigner' or to me as 'American'. And, in the same way, in the United States we have never spoken of 'foreigners' they are 'Canadians'. That word 'foreigner' should be stricken," he added, "illustrated to me better than anything else the relationship between our two countries.

"On both sides of the line we are so commingled that the undefended boundary three thousand miles long that we have established to minimize the vast importance, not only to our own continuing relations but also for the example we have set to the other nations of the world."

Trade Dealing'.

After emphasizing the fact that hundreds of thousands of Americans and Canadians visit each other every year without the need of passports, and calling for "frank dealing" between nations, he said:

"The United States and Canada and, indeed, all parts of the British Empire share a democratic form of government which comes to us from common sources. We have adapted these institutions to our own needs and our own special conditions, but fundamentally we have the same."

The President said the United States and Canada "share the fate of death of King George with great grief," and extended a message of King Edward to visit the United States as had Lord Tweedsmuir and Mr. King.

Fascination of Quebec.

He said Quebec had a fascination for him and many of his countrymen because the Pilgrim Fathers had seen the cliffs which lead to them "are eternal memorials to brave French, to brave British, and to brave American colonists who have fallen in battle, be it in victory or in defeat."

"Yet there is a nobler lesson" he continued. "For on these same cliffs the battle born the living miracle which we are privileged to see today in the relations of our two countries, side by side in peace and friendship, each devoted to its own institutions, but in the unsullied of a nation."

This is a moment worthy of these words and this is the first time in our whole history that we have had an example from which all thinking men can draw satisfaction and inspiration."

Tightening of Bonds.

Near the end of his speech, the President referred to the tightening of the friendly bonds in thanking Mayor Gregoire for the warmth of your welcome.

He said the yearly exchange of visits by Governors-General Dafferin Terrace and was acclaimed by the throngs of Canadians who lined the auto route through which he passed. A public reception was given at the Chateau Frontenac Garden where addresses of welcome were delivered by Premier Duplessis, Premier Mackenzie King, Premier Godbout and Mayor Gregoire.

Another city's welcome to President Roosevelt of the United States was extended by Premier W. L. Grant-more in a speech stressing the long friendship existing across the international border.

Symbol of Amity.

Hailing the President's visit as a symbol of amity between two nations, Mayor Gregoire asserted the "imaginary line separating the United States from Canada is the finest boundary which should exist between two countries, one of peace."

"In these days of menace and unrest," he declared, "when Japan and the Pittsburgh are humiliating his weapons, we must be thankful to the Holy Ghost for having given to the New World the blessing of having allowed one continent to remain free from armaments.

"This God-sent peace between countries gives them the time and energy necessary to solve the many enormous social problems which they have to face, especially by the transition between an individualistic and collectivistic era.

Though it was the first time the President had come to Quebec, the Mayor pointed out many thousands of United States citizens had come before. "We have seen them and we always reacted with sincere pleasure, but not with apprehension or fear of invasion," he declared, had "come more to us for the manufactured goods we can buy in greater than would have done steel barriers which would have placed the entire border line.55

Following is the text of Lord Tweedsmuir's address to the at the welcoming ceremony for President Roosevelt on the Dufferin Terrace:

Mr. Roosevelt, as the personal representative of King George V, King Edward VIII and King Edward VIII, King I offer my most cordial greetings to the first citizen of the United States. Canada welcomes you, sir, not only for your own sake as an honored guest, because I think you know well our eastern coasts—but because you are the chosen spokesman today in the statesmanship of the world. We welcome you not you as the head of a great nation, but as a people she is bound by ties of history and blood and by common dangers to both can.

It was contained in the name of a lady companion of Jones at the time of the offence, when found in possession of two bottles of liquor. The lady, it was established, had been loaned to him by Marcus.

"I find the Crown was justified in charging the accused under the circumstances, but in view of the accused man's previous good record, and of human greatness, I will suspend the payment of the costs of the proceedings," concluded His Worship. The costs in the case amounted to $18.00.

Jones, also in the case Max Marcus, of this city, pleaded guilty to a charge of giving liquor to a person to be consumed in a place other than his residence, Marcus pleaded guilty to a charge of Mr. Cameron, M.P., appearing for the accused, asked for enlargement in the matter of judgment in order to give the accused more sufficient time to raise the amount of the one hundred dollars. His Worship consented to Mr. Cameron's request, Marcus being permitted his liberty until the next sitting on September 29th. The costs in the Jones case were paid forthwith.

As the Mayor R. A. Norman, both of Picton, said, we have a long previous good character. Mr. Ward was a prominent member of the Liberal party.

The charge of perjury arose out of a statement made by Judge, that the prosecution alleged was made to mislead the jury. It was contained in the name of a lady companion of Jones at the time of the offence, when found in possession of two bottles of liquor. The lady, it was established, had been loaned to him by Marcus.

"I find the Crown was justified in charging the accused under the circumstances, but in view of the accused man's previous good record, and of human greatness, I will suspend the payment of the costs of the proceedings," concluded His Worship. The costs in the case amounted to $18.00.

Jones, also in the case Max Marcus, of this city, pleaded guilty to a charge of giving liquor to a person to be consumed in a place other than his residence. Marcus pleaded guilty to a charge of Mr. Cameron, M.P., appearing for the accused, asked for enlargement in the matter of judgment in order to give the accused more sufficient time to raise the amount of the one hundred dollars. His Worship consented to Mr. Cameron's request, Marcus being permitted his liberty until the next sitting on September 29th. The costs in the Jones case were paid forthwith.

HOW TO MAKE ICED TEA

Infuse 3/4 teaspoonful of "SALADA" Orange Pekoe Blend Iced Tea to a pint of fresh boiling water. Let stand for three minutes and strain into tall glasses half filled with cracked ice. Sweeten to taste, and add a slice of lemon and the juice of 2 lemons. Stir well and fill up with ice. Garnish with mint and serve. Do not allow tea to stand before adding the cold water, otherwise liquid will become cloudy. Always make sufficient to drink at one meal.

Suspend Sentence After Guilty Plea Registered

Albert Jones, Picton, was given a two-year suspended sentence after pleading guilty to a charge of perjury before Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C., today. The charge arose out of evidence given by Jones in evidence in a previous court held recently at Picton, the result of which city was charged with selling liquor contrary to the L.C.A. The charge of perjury was preferred and dismissed against Marcus.

Jones appeared in court today by F. L. Ward, Picton, solicitor, while Crown prosecutor was Solicitor on Jones' behalf. F. E. Ward, Mayor R. A. Norman, both of Picton, spoke in the man's previous good character. Mr. Ward was a prominent member of the Liberal party.

The charge of perjury arose out of a statement made by Judge, that the prosecution alleged was made to mislead the jury. HENRY FORD, 73, 'FORGETS YEARS'

Observes Birthday at Cottage in Michigan

Big Bay, Mich., July 31.—(AP)—Henry Ford was 73 years old today. He became accountable at his college in the Methodist Episcopal communion, but otherwise observed the anniversary of his birth serenely.

The Huron Mountain Club, a group of men up the lake Superior shore from the Ford reservation, is the nearest neighbor. It has $100,000. It is made of logs logs and has only a dull copper roof. It provides no luxuries, no attendants, no telephone.

Ford, accompanied by Mrs. Ford came here yesterday on one of his 600-foot freighters, preferring the discomforts of the ore carrier to a speedier train or luxurious yacht trip. He said he was keeping his reservation, however, thus precluding his own preaching that "change is rest." Mrs. Ford said he suggested "some people will say I'm crazy, but that's my back." added that as long ago as 1896 he was chief engineer of the Detroit Edison Company and that commuting in a little red brick barn with a gasoline car is not as sometimes so called, "So", he said, "it may not mean much".

INTERNATIONAL SYMBOL IS SEEN

parade memorials; they are one and individual in the sense that they have no conception of conquest or defeat. They are one epitaph commemorating the valor of nations, the both tragedy, and the races from which they sprang. They are symbols that hold the symbol of Canadian unity.

"Your presence here today, Mr. President, is a symbol, a living epitaph of another symbol; not a fictional but an international symbol, of a friendship between unity and good-will. It is not a visible shaft that stands on a few feet from the base. It is an invisible line, which stretches across the continent from the waters of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, the line which marks the undefended border, our great country and our own. On either side of that line, which throws highway along and across rivers and lakes, valleys and hills, mountains and plains, there is not today, and there has not been for a century, anything as a relic of the past, no fort or fortification worthy of the name.

Joint Agreement

"The place of armaments on land and water has been taken by international agreement, by the mutual service of fear, suspicion, or hate, but by the spirit of friendship, friendship and good-will. This is the achievement not of two nations but of two peoples, the men and women of the United States, and the men and women of Canada, who like the shaft to the memory of Sir Isaac Brock, have imposed their frontier speaks to the world, that if differences, but of what is held in common, not of the symbols of nations, but of their virtues; not of the battles they have won, but of the beauty and the peace they have found.

"Today, we are indebted to your visit for one more symbol of international peace, friendship and good-will. In the three centuries since the white man began to settle on this ancient capital has known but two great symbols of the British Empire. Today, Mr. President, in your honorable person, you bring a symbol of friendship, neither the flag of the United States is flying over the citadel of Quebec.

Friendship with Republic

"It is, I believe, something more than a coincidence that, in the same week, the President of the Republic of France, and His Majesty the King Edward VIII have been received by side on a bit of Canadian soil by the Old World, the President of the Republic of the United States of America, and the representative of the Mother Country, with the same glad greetings on Canadian soil in the New World. Coincidence, I suppose! If I say that this is an extraordinary world, it is a world in which Canada enjoys with all countries, but more especially with the United States, a unique relationship which Canada enjoys with all countries, but more especially with the United States, a unique relationship which is obvious, she has been privileged to share more intimately, than any other nation, in the life of republics. We who enjoy this friendship in so marked a way share an inheritance of mind and heart to which the United States has contributed with all chertsh. We, like you are dedicated to the cause of peace.

"Mr. President, I am glad that you have come to see that whether it be Canada or the United States, we are all members one of another, bound by the common humanity, and that the only accusation that matters, as to nations or individuals, lies in the well-being of mankind throughout the world.

Security By Friendship.

"That great end can be effected through international friendship. Friendship; it can never be accomplished by force. Force can be employed only to advance their separate aims by nations which are in fundamental conflict and by reason and co-operation, so long will war be inevitable, and the life of nations, as the life of individuals, lies in the well-being of mankind throughout the world.

DRAMATIC STORY OF MOTHER LOVE

This dramatic picture shows Mrs. Toni Maxwell holding her 3 months-old baby in her arms standing behind the barricade in the doorway of her home at Queens, New York, awaiting the arrival of city marshals to evict her. A few moments after this picture was made, the marshals arrived and the battle started. For an hour five men tried to force the barricade, but sympathetic neighbors bombed the raiders with flour. Reserves finally captured the forts, but no one was hurt. Marshals had to use snippers to cut barbed wire that surmounted the sandbag barricade.

Alapaugh was in the outer office talking to the cashier.

"Hello, Mr. Alapaugh," Seward said. "Why didn't you ask me to join you and your wife?"

Alapaugh smirked. "We'd have been glad to have you with us, of course, Mr. Seward, but Mrs. McCarthy is working overtime," he hastened to explain, "and I've got my own reputation to consider, and I didn't like to send her home hungry."

"Do you often work overtime?" said Seward, who, in a rush, sometimes—

"Let me know next time, will you?"

Alapaugh nodded, dropping one eyelid. "Surely, he said.

X. X. X.

About the middle of the following week Cathleen telephoned to the grocery on the corner near her home and asked the family grocer-keeper to tell Mrs. McCarthy not to wait dinner for her, as she was working late and would eat in New York.

"We'll go to Tony's again, if you don't mind," Alapaugh said.

How silly it was of her, Cathleen thought, to glance over at the table where young Mr. Ingram had sat. He wasn't there, of course. But not very long afterward she missed the point of the story Alapaugh was telling, because she saw Seward enter the restaurant and cross the room toward them.

"Why, look who's here!" said Alapaugh. "I'm going to ask him to join us."

He did not ask her permission and she did not notice the omission then. In her eyes Alapaugh was an important person. His presence made it all right for her and Seward to dine together. Besides, was the young man with smiling friendliness.

Under her surface composure however she was filled with the emotions of an American debutante placed next to the Prince of Wales. Her mind at that moment was the privacy of sitting here with him, Cathleen was able to enjoy the thrill and exhilaration of it. Moreover, though Alapaugh had not this time ordered champagne, Seward immediately did so. She drank only one glass, but it made her feel reckless and gave her outlook a rose color.

With six hours, each in the office, the subway, with only a rare dance or visit to the movies or excursion on a summer holiday, had hitherto made up her life. How her world was widening! A leather boy in evening clothes was at her elbow, throwing challenges into her eyes, playing up to her, making her feel courted and important.

"I think that most people go out like this almost every single night!" she cried.

"Why don't we dance?"; Seward suggested.

"In my working clothes," she demurred.

"What's the difference? I'm supposed to show up at a party later, that's why I'm dressed. The beauty of a place like this is you can do what you like in it. Besides as you are you look better than any other girl here!"

Cathleen loved dancing, and without more urging she got up and moved off with him. She was light and vibrant in Seward's arms, skipping with graceful surenss, enjoying herself.

"I'd much rather stay here and dance with you than go on to that party," he told her.

"It's lovely," she said, "but I must be going home soon."

"If you must, but how about some other night? We know each other outside the office. Let's make a date for Friday."

"Here?" she asked. She was no longer the prudent Cathleen of the office, accustomed to her poor twenty-two years, but a pleasantly dizzy young creature, too happy at the moment to question the propriety of her happiness.

"This isn't the only place in town. Wouldn't you like to see some theater? Maybe we'll go to Pi-Pi-day and I'll meet you when you leave the office; we'll have dinner and take the show and go somewhere afterwards."

"I'd have on my working clothes —"

"I keep telling you, I like your working clothes. And I have on a rumbly-bumbered, crisp rolls in a pretty design of two kinds, the dark and medium blue, and a white collar and little ruffles, leaving only a little bit of milky forearm bare, and a ruffled collar turned back from her round white throat.

"Wear this date," Seward ordered. "I like it. I like it a lot."

They rejoined Alapaugh and Cathleen thanked him and told him good-night prettily, and he looked after the young people with mingled chagrin and desire that would come of it? She was such a nice kid. If Seward were like the old man she probably wouldn't care much—as far as money and gifts were concerned. And to think that he, Homer Alapaugh, had brought them together. Why he could have had her for himself!

Seward waited to take Cathleen home in his car, but she reluctantly, refused that, permitting him only to take her to the subway.

"Friday's a date," he reminded her as they parted.

In the familiar atmosphere of the crowded Corona flat Cathleen considered, with startled ingenuity, the engagement she had made. Could it be the champagne had affected her judgment? Her hard-thinking shoulders had transmitted a good head to her, so it was a mere unsettling brow than wise that was frowning down her nose.

She was tasting her youth, and indulging in an intoxicating experiment with love. Not that Cathleen called it love, but she was conscious of little tingles of joy when she thought of Seward.

It might be dangerous, even wrong, to go out with him, but she had made the engagement and she determined to keep it. Having settled this, Cathleen gave wistful thought to frocks and hats she had seen when window-shopping during her lunch-hour. If only she had more money, so she could dress as the other girls did, in chiffons and silks and laces, with dainty wraps and high-heeled satin slippers! Clothes could be bought for a song this year. If she could keep even five dollars a week for herself, what couldn't she get! If only Joe had a job!

Jasper Ingram was grumbling over his letters two mornings later, when she entered in response to his signal.

"Hard as ever to get good people," he said. "You'd think, with all this unemployment it would be easy to get trained capable workers, who'd try hard to keep their jobs. Look at this letter from the Chicago office. Couldn't be worse if there was a job in every wash. But you'd have another job before lunchtime if I let you go."

"It wouldn't be for want of trying if I didn't," she said, chilled by the mere suggestion of losing her place. "But indeed, it's not easy, sir, to find jobs. My father isn't working and my brother just don't seem able to find a place."

Ingram looked up at her quickly. He liked her quiet manner, her serious beauty and her efficient work. He had not been driven to distraction, as many with less power had, by extremes for expedition, and now he said: "That's too bad. If he's anything like his sister, I we should be able to use him."

On one of his cards, he scrawled: "Take this to Mr. Fisher, please," initialled it and gave it to Cathleen.

"Take that to Mr. Fisher. Maybe he can do your brother up!"

CHAPTER XI.

When it became plain that the Count Orando to whose household the Marquis d'Alhuss was attached, must flee from Spain, he had taken command and had got her over the frontier by a surprise drive into Biarritz. Returning alone, he had salvaged what he could of his own property, including a few family jewels, a few objects of art, and all the money he could lay hands on. However, officials on the frontier found and confiscated his jewels and gold. Fortunately they did not in searching him, find the 200 pounds of precious lace wrapped about his waist.

Ever since, he had been living on that lace, or more literally, upon the money he had received for it in London. Now that fund, never large, was nearly exhausted.

D'Alhuss had been admirably fitted to his office in the Intelligence service. It had been necessary for him to understand the arts of intricate politics about precedence, etiquette, and tradition. To arrange and supervise—that had been his work, and he had been far from an idle man. Now idleness and a rapidly emptying exchequer were all he had left.

He thought a good deal, accordingly about the seductive Mrs. Alapaugh, who had met his overtures so warmly at the Ingrams' garden party. There he had met other attractive women, but except for the interlude with the cigarette-seller, he had found himself consistently answering all phone, he was sur-hoped she remembered Marian kept attached to his nature and stately hostess. As a result, the slim, laughing person in pale chiffon intrigued him and he regretted his failure to find her before leaving Grangefield.

Marian, however, had no intention of letting their acquaintance languish.

When her excitement of the afternoon had died down, the image of the handsome Spanish Orandeo was her most persistent memory. She simply had to see him again, and she let the social item she had thrown out lie untwitched. While she was held in the restless preoccupation of a romantic dream.

Ennui was eating at the soul of d'Alhuss as he busied himself mounting new oaths with which to cure democratic Spain and bourgoise America. He was engaged at this pleasant pastime when, upon answering the phone, he was surprised to hear the flirtatious, high-pitched voice he had thought never to hear again. Lack of familiarity with the language, blinded him to the commonness of Marian's inflections and choice of words, but the voice itself had a pretty music, suggesting a genuine desire to please and provoke.

"I'm in town for the day and nearly everyone I know is away. Won't you take pity on me and come to lunch? Don't say you have an engagement, Senor Marques!"

"If I had fifty engagements, would I let them stand in the way? You restore life to me, most kind lady."

Half hour later, Mrs. Alapaugh, not indifferent to the envious glances that followed them, led him to their table, Pattering her manner and the use of her eyes on those of a popular actress, whom she

Marian's reply was carefully calculated. He knew the superstitions of the natives. He knew that each believed his fate controlled. Orando cried out in started awe: "But that is why my 'munino' is supposed to do—protect me and help me hunt."

"I am your 'musimo'!" Tarzan said quietly after a dramatic pause. Orando was speechless. Now he understood why the stranger was unafraid of death. He was immortal, invulnerable. The ape-man immediately followed up his advantage. "Release me!"

Despite his resolution to kill the stranger, Orando's curiosity was intrigued. "What would you do if I should release you?" he inquired uncertainly. "You are a hunter," Tarzan answered; "so I should bring you near to the most animals, and ward off the danger of savage beasts."

Orando hastened to comply. It was not difficult to raise the branch and release Tarzan. But the Jungle Lord was not yet free. He was now in fact a captive of the powers he claimed as Orando's protector. High in a tree, a panther crouched ready to spring upon the black warrior.

OLDEST WELSH SOCIETY

The Welsh Society of Philadelphia is the oldest society of its kind in the United States—it dates back before the country was founded. Originally it was called the Society of Sons of Ancient Britons and was founded by old emigrants entering Philadelphia in colonial days. Included in the list of Welsh society members are such names as Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Charles Evans Hughes.

Moisture in Furniture Wood

Furniture should be constructed of wood with about 8 per cent of moisture. This will most easily permit of the natural variations that will take place in the joints.

MILK CONSIDERED NOURISHING FOOD

Reid's Dairy Invite Public to Visit Their Modern Plant

Those who depend upon physical fitness to 'see them through' choose foods with the greatest care. Everything that they must have nourishing qualities—it must add something to the body when needed—actually. That's why milk is considered by public authorities everywhere as being the outstanding food product. Dr. Bruce Bradford says that milk is a "builder of health" is an expression today that is quite in order. Many people can build up their bodies with milk and say this. Everywhere school and health authorities are insisting that milk be served to the children in schools, farms and in their homes and between meals too, to the entire family. Milk consistently and daily builds health, vigor in the freshest body, colors pale cheeks, revitalizes wasted nerves. For those unemployed, milk offers the most to nourishing elements at lowest cost.

Reid's Dairy, in Belleville is an establishment that is well-known throughout this trading area. They are endeavoring to give the people of Belleville and district the best. Their milk when collected is taken immediately to their plant and pasteurized. For this they have strictly sanitary methods and their plant and equipment is immaculate. Pasteurization of milk means to heat the milk to 145 degrees, holding it at that temperature for thirty minutes and then cooling it quickly. Thus the yeast producing bacteria is eliminated and the quality of the milk is left unchanged. If you have never seen this method of handling milk a visit to their plant will convince you that it is the only way. That is the policy of Reid's Dairy to produce milk and cream that will comply with specified requirements. They realize that upon one's health depends their ability to earn and enjoy. We suggest to our readers that they order more milk today from Reid's Dairy which is the oldest dairy in Belleville and is under the management of Mr. L. F. Reid, the proprietor. Do you know what year this business was established?
